State Legislature Gets Bills To Increase Taxes

Sales Levy, Other Hikes Are Sought

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Gov. Jimmie H. Davis' leaders Saturday introduced a $45 million sales tax raise in the third straight session of the Louisiana Legislature he called for the school segregation cause.

Immediately, sales tax foes and others handed in four other tax increases dealing with state income, autos, soft drinks and wine, beer and liquor.

Lawmakers and others privately said the sales tax proposal had pulled open a floodgate of tax measures still to come.

BATTLE LOOMS

Business and labor leaders watched the rush of new tax proposals with worry, and some segregationists privately indicated they couldn't accept the administration proposal.

Rep. Bryan Lehmann Jr., St. Charles Parish, a Davis floor whip, vowed the administration would fight the other tax bills because they sought to "discredit and confuse our tax proposal."

Gov. Davis said he hopes the proposed one-cent sales tax raise would pass, and if it didn't, the people will know he has done everything he could to raise funds for the school segregation fight.

The governor faces a rough obstacle in seeking any tax raise, because a two-thirds majority vote is required.

The late Earl K. Long, in his first year during his 1956-60 administration, was defeated on one tax bill after the other.

But Davis has been supported by a powerful, overwhelming coalition of administration supporters, educators and segregationists.

The new one-cent tax would be [illegible]ate from the existing two-[illegible]ate tax, and it would run [illegible]om Jan. 1, 1961, to July 1, 1964.

The administration measures were introduced by Reps. Risley Triche, Assumption Parish, T. T. Fields, Union, and Lehmann.

They introduced eight new bills, including four dealing with the sales tax raise.

There were four other tax bills, and another measure to legalize bingo and raffles for benefit of private school cooperatives.

Heiress Offers N. O. Schools $500,000 Aid

NEW YORK (AP)—A St. Louis heiress Saturday offered $500,000 to help the newly integrated schools of New Orleans stay open in the face of a financial crisis imposed by the Louisiana State Legislature.

"I hope that by making this offer I will encourage others who have been silent to fight to keep the schools open," said Ellen Steinberg. "The New Orleans school system is in the same position as a drowning person. Only direct action can save it."

Miss Steinberg is the daughter of Mark C. Steinberg, millionaire St. Louis investment broker and philanthropist who died in 1951. She said her attorney, Joseph Wishod of New York, will handle negotiations with the New Orleans School Board if it accepts her offer.

The board has been stripped of its operating funds and its power to borrow money by the legislature in an attempt to block integration. The board faces $3 million in salaries and bills.

Miss Steinberg said she would ask the board to pay her back—if possible—if it accepts the money. But she said she is prepared to forego repayment if necessary. She added that she also is ready to make similar offers to other school systems threatened with closing as the result of integration.

Miss Steinberg said she was "deeply distressed over the poor image of our country being created abroad" by Southern racial problems.

"People should back their beliefs with direct action," she said.

In New Orleans, Louis G. Riecke Sr., newly elected school board president, said the news "takes my breath away." It

Air Experts Seek Cause Of Disaster

One Of Planes In Collision Off Flying Course

NEW YORK (AP) — The collision of two airliners over New York City, the worst air disaster in history, apparently resulted from one of the planes going off its course, experts said Saturday.

Whether the mistake grew out of human error or mechanical malfunction was the mystery investigators were trying to solve as they pawed through the wreckage of the planes, scattered on Brooklyn streets and a Staten shore.

ONLY FEW HINTS

Only a few fragmentary hints emerged.

As they did, new grief struck. Of the 128 aboard the two doomed planes, one passenger, Stephen Baltz, 11, Wilmette, Ill., had clung to life for more than 24 hours.

But he died Saturday, of burns and inhaled flames. And Friday's thanksgiving of his parents, who had stood watch at his hospital bedside, turned to tears.

The over-all toll of death thus rose to 137 from the collision that rained fiery destruction on the city. All aboard both planes perished, along with nine others on the ground.

Police said still more bodies may lie in the wreckage and torn buildings.

As the broad, rapid-fire inquiry proceeded, these inklings of what happened were indicated:

One plane was being watched on radar. The other apparently was not. One must have been off course.

Both planes, a United Air Lines DC8 jet and a Trans World Airlines four-engine Constellation, were descending for a landing when their paths inextricably crossed.

U. S. Airmen, Students In Fiery Crash

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—A U. S. Air Force transport plane carrying American students to Christmas holidays in England crashed into the heart of historic Munich Saturday strewing flaming wreckage over a street full of shoppers. Police estimated between 50 and 60 persons died.

Besides the 11 vacation-bound college students, the seven-member crew of the two-engine Convair and an American civilian passenger perished when the plane sheered off a church steeple and plummeted into a loaded streetcar.

35 ON TROLLY DIES

The students, who attended the University of Maryland's junior college in Munich, ranged in age from 16 to 21 years old. Laughing and joking, they had taken off only minutes before from Munich-Riem Airport to join their service families in England for the holiday vacation.

Police estimated at least 35 persons either aboard the streetcar or passing by died when the giant plane engulfed the trolley with flames 150 feet high.

The death toll may not be known for days. "The bodies are nothing but charred pieces, making it an almost impossible task to identify them," said a police official.

Mayor Hans Jochen Vogel said only two bodies of German victims had been identified late Saturday night, although 31 charred bodies have been recovered from amid the wreckage of the plane and streetcar.

Police, firemen and U. S. and German army units still were working to extinguish smouldering fires and clean up the wreckage.

A 24-year-old German girl who suffered severe burns told doctors the sea of flame from the plane and a broken gas main swept

Game Preserve Deal Approved

ALEXANDRIA (Special) — The Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission Saturday approved the purchase of 15,000 acres of land near Monroe to develop a wild life preserve.

The game management area will cost the state $440,000, less than $30 per acre for the 10-mile long strip of bottom land along the Ouachita Parish boundary line, between Richland and Morehouse parishes.

Director L. D. Young was authorized to use money for the Marsh Island fund to buy the land. The Russell Sage Foundation which donated the Marsh Island preserve to the state also approved the use of the money to develop the new preserve.

MONROE LEADER

Saturday's action ended months of negotiations between a special committee appointed by the commission and representatives of Ouachita Farms, Inc., owners of the land. The Commission group was headed by J. B. Thoman of Monroe and the corporation by A. B. Freyer Jr. of Shreveport.

The corporation reserved 50 per cent of the mineral rights and demands that the sale be made before the end of the year.

The resolution adopted calls for the purchase of 14,600 acres more or less, but Young explained that the property probably contains close to 15,000 acres with 15,190 acres being the figure used in the report made by John D. Newson, chief of the fish and game division of the commission.

The land lies 10 miles east of Monroe, along Bayou Lafourche, which is the southeastern boundary and Bayou Boeuf northward. The southern boundary runs east and west about a mile north of Louisiana highway 15 and the northern boundary adjoins Wham' Brake, the game management area owned by International Paper Company.

The strip of land varies in width from one mile at the north

Kennedy and the future postmaster general immediately promised to do something about the mail service in which a regular letter takes eight days to get from Washington to Boston.

In addition to the Day appointment, Kennedy from the sunny patio of his oceanfront villa here, also announced the selection of H. W. Brawley, chief of staff director of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee since 1951, as deputy postmaster gen-

Young Wife Tells About Fire Ordeal

(EDITORS NOTE) — Thea Schneider, 21, an employe in a Munich textile factory, survived with severe burns Saturday when a U. S. Air Force transport plane crashed in the heart of the Bavarian capital and slammed in to the streetcar in which she was riding. Here she tells of the disaster from her hospital bedside

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — We had been shopping for Christmas, for the children. My husband Joseph and I were standing in the second car of the No. 10 trolley.

Suddenly — I'll never forget it—there was a terrific bang. Then there was sudden silence. And — it was horrible—a blast of yellow, sulphury fire.

LEARNS OF PLANE

Until the doctors told me later, I never knew that it was a plane which had struck our streetcar.

We had boarded the No. 10 at Stachus Square (a busy intersection in the heart of Munich).

I don't quite know how long we had been riding along peacefully, chatting.

But I will never forget that awful yellow light blinding me. It was like a giant fist. I was thrown out from the aisle on the platform at the rear of the car.

Somebody, I think it must have been my husband, grabbed me and pushed me from the car. My slacks were burning.

I stumbled through the smoking, flaming debris. I didn't realize what had happened. I just wanted to escape, to save my life.

As I went on, trying to get away from the flames, I remembered Joseph. We were somehow separated in the chaos. I screamed for him.

Suddenly, I saw several men by my side. They threw me on the ground and rolled themselves on

Dad Disabled, Help Is Sought

"Christmas will be another day at our house," writes an 11-year-old boy to Goodfellows.

He explains that his father is a handicapped person and it takes all he makes to pay bills and buy a few groceries. The boy says he would like a bicycle for Christmas, his brother a football suit and his sister some clothes.

"But if we don't get these things, a good dinner would taste good," he adds.

MORE NEEDED

Donations have been trickling in to Goodfellows this week and many persons are working to help give needy and deserving families a joyous Christmas.

Letters seeking aid have also poured into the Goodfellows office, some from families and some from concerned neighbors. The more fortunate of us sometimes don't realize how blessed and lucky we are until we see some of the letters sent in for aid.

Hundreds and thousands of families will go hungry, without clothes and some without heat on what should be one of the most joyous days of the year.

Body Of Local Man Discovered Beneath Bridge

The body of a 51-year-old West Monroe man was discovered about 5:30 p.m. yesterday beneath a bridge at the Pine Canal on the Winnsboro Road by local residents who stumbled onto the place accidentally.

The Ouachita Parish sheriff's office identified the man as Isaac Newton Wallingsford, a welder.

His widow, Mrs. Alpha Wallingsford lives at 107 Causey St., in West Monroe.

Along with sheriff's deputies investigating the death was a representative of the parish coroner's office who is conducting examinations into the cause of death.

No sign of foul play was found, deputies said. He had been there for several hours.

Wallingsford was recently arrested by Monroe city police on charges of disturbing the peace and public drunkenness.

The coroner's office announced yesterday that a ruling on the death will be made later.

The investigation was not complete pending further examination.

Deputies said they were unable to determine the reason the man was under the bridge.

The body was picked up soon after its discovery by Mulhearn's ambulance and taken to Mulhearn's Funeral Home.

Survivors other than his wife were not known.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete late yesterday pending notification of kin. However, the funeral, to be scheduled sometime today, will probably be held under the direction of Mulhearn's Funeral Home.

Burglars Strike At City Firm

The owners of a Monroe clothing store said yesterday that city police are investigating the $1700 burglary of their firm at 107 DeSiard St., sometime Friday night.

John Kelso Jr. who along with his father operates Kelso's in Monroe said the burglary occurred between the time the store closed Friday at 8 p.m. and when it opened at 8 a.m. yesterday.

The burglary was discovered when employees opened the store yesterday.

Police officials declined to discuss details of the burglary.

However, reports said the burglars tore off the front of a fire proof safe to take "something in excess of $1700, all in cash," leaving checks and other papers undesturbed.

No arrests have been made in the case, according to police records.

A diamond ring belonging to the younger Kelso's wife which was kept in the safe was spurned or overlooked. However, the cash kept in a locked cash box was taken.

Another item left by the burglars was a pocket watch kept there by the elder Kelso.

The job was "neat," Kelso said, as the burglars took only cash and failed to bother other valuables and the store's merchandise.

And the store showed no signs

'CLOSES EYES, GOES TO SLEEP'

Boy, 11, Loses Survival Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — "The little boy closed his eyes and went to sleep."

This was the way the hospital reported that 11-year-old Stephen Baltz died at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Now the lad is with 83 others who rode a sleek, speedy jet on a journey to death.

Only the boy came out alive from the incredible wreckage which lay in a teeming Brooklyn street after colliding Friday with another plane in the world's worst air accident.

Each moment the red-haired youngster clung to life was a moment of triumph. In Methodist Hospital in Brooklyn, the prayers were many that he would rally, that he would survive the dreadful burns over 80 per cent of his body, that his broken bones would one day mend.

Clinging to hope were his distraught parents—Mr. and Mrs. William Baltz of Wilmette, Ill.—who stayed near him, praying that the wonders of science and medicine as well as the boy's will would save him.

In the morning — 24 hours after the crash — there was a slight note of optimism, as the hospital reported that, "He has shown some response and it is hoped that this progress will continue."

"He's extremely brave, well - contained and uncomplaining," said one of the attending doctors.

Then in late morning there was feverish activity by doctors and nurses. The tension of determined people embraced in a losing battle communicated itself to hospital personnel.

At 1 p.m., Stephen lost the battle.

A weeping hospital worker hardly able to control her voice, said: "The little boy closed his eyes and went to sleep."

The father came to speak with newsmen. The tears — shed in the privacy of the boy's room — were gone now. Controlled, bravely, William Baltz said his son was dead. There was more to say.

"I appreciate very much the attention and kindness of the people of the city of New York. The police department and fire department were superb. The effort to save my son and the work done here in Methodist Hospital was simply magnificent."

The mother was under sedation in a private room of the hospital.

The burns and bruises contributed to death, but a hospital spokesman reported that the major cause was extensive flame damage in the lungs.

"There was very little that could be done to stop the lung damage," said the Rev. Donald S. Stacey, hospital chaplain.

Stephen's death brought the toll to 137-84 in the United Air Lines DC8, 44 in the Trans World Airlines Super Constellation and 9 persons in apartment and on the streets where the jet crashed.

Stephen was in the jet's

Game Preserve Deal Approved

ALEXANDRIA (Special) — The Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission Saturday approved the purchase of 15,000 acres of land near Monroe to develop a wild life preserve.

Heiress Offers N. O. Schools $500,000 Aid

Kennedy and the future postmaster general immediately promised to do something about the mail service in which a regular letter takes eight days to get from Washington to Boston.

The average age of the Kennedy cabinet at time of appointment was 47.3 years, ranging from Robert Kennedy, 35, who will be attorney general, to Gov. Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina, 62, the new secretary of commerce.

In addition to the Day appointment, Kennedy from the sunny patio of his oceanfront villa here, also announced the selection of H. W. Brawley, chief of staff director of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee since 1951, as deputy postmaster gen-

Young Wife Tells About Fire Ordeal

(EDITORS NOTE) — Thea Schneider, 21, an employe in a Munich textile factory, survived with severe burns Saturday when a U. S. Air Force transport plane crashed in the heart of the Bavarian capital and slammed in to the streetcar in which she was riding. Here she tells of the disaster from her hospital bedside

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — We had been shopping for Christmas, for the children. My husband Joseph and I were standing in the second car of the No. 10 trolley.

Suddenly — I'll never forget it—there was a terrific bang. Then there was sudden silence. And — it was horrible—a blast of yellow, sulphury fire.

LEARNS OF PLANE

Until the doctors told me later, I never knew that it was a plane which had struck our streetcar.

We had boarded the No. 10 at Stachus Square (a busy intersection in the heart of Munich).

I don't quite know how long we had been riding along peacefully, chatting.

But I will never forget that awful yellow light blinding me. It was like a giant fist. I was thrown out from the aisle on the platform at the rear of the car.

Somebody, I think it must have been my husband, grabbed me and pushed me from the car. My slacks were burning.

I stumbled through the smoking, flaming debris. I didn't realize what had happened. I just wanted to escape, to save my life.

As I went on, trying to get away from the flames, I remembered Joseph. We were somehow separated in the chaos. I screamed for him.

Suddenly, I saw several men by my side. They threw me on the ground and rolled themselves on

GOODFELLOWS DRIVE

Dad Disabled, Help Is Sought

"Christmas will be another day at our house," writes an 11-year-old boy to Goodfellows.

He explains that his father is a handicapped person and it takes all he makes to pay bills and buy a few groceries. The boy says he would like a bicycle for Christmas, his brother a football suit and his sister some clothes.

"But if we don't get these things, a good dinner would taste good," he adds.

MORE NEEDED

Donations have been trickling in to Goodfellows this week and many persons are working to help give needy and deserving families a joyous Christmas.

Letters seeking aid have also poured into the Goodfellows office, some from families and some from concerned neighbors. The more fortunate of us sometimes don't realize how blessed and lucky we are until we see some of the letters sent in for aid.

Hundreds and thousands of families will go hungry, without clothes and some without heat on what should be one of the most joyous days of the year.

Children, with sad, tear-stained

Body Of Local Man Discovered Beneath Bridge

The body of a 51-year-old West Monroe man was discovered about 5:30 p.m. yesterday beneath a bridge at the Pine Canal on the Winnsboro Road by local residents who stumbled onto the place accidentally.

The Ouachita Parish sheriff's office identified the man as Isaac Newton Wallingsford, a welder.

His widow, Mrs. Alpha Wallingsford lives at 107 Causey St., in West Monroe.

Along with sheriff's deputies investigating the death was a representative of the parish coroner's office who is conducting examinations into the cause of death.

No sign of foul play was found, deputies said. He had been there for several hours.

Wallingsford was recently arrested by Monroe city police on charges of disturbing the peace and public drunkenness.

The coroner's office announced yesterday that a ruling on the death will be made later.

The investigation was not complete pending further examination.

Deputies said they were unable to determine the reason the man was under the bridge.

The body was picked up soon after its discovery by Mulhearn's ambulance and taken to Mulhearn's Funeral Home.

Survivors other than his wife were not known.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete late yesterday pending notification of kin. However, the funeral, to be scheduled sometime today, will probably be held under the direction of Mulhearn's Funeral Home.

Burglars Strike At City Firm

The owners of a Monroe clothing store said yesterday that city police are investigating the $1700 burglary of their firm at 107 DeSiard St., sometime Friday night.

John Kelso Jr. who along with his father operates Kelso's in Monroe said the burglary occurred between the time the store closed Friday at 8 p.m. and when it opened at 8 a.m. yesterday.

The burglary was discovered when employees opened the store yesterday.

Police officials declined to discuss details of the burglary.

However, reports said the burglars tore off the front of a fire proof safe to take "something in excess of $1700, all in cash," leaving checks and other papers undesturbed.

No arrests have been made in the case, according to police records.

A diamond ring belonging to the younger Kelso's wife which was kept in the safe was spurned or overlooked. However, the cash kept in a locked cash box was taken.

Another item left by the burglars was a pocket watch kept there by the elder Kelso.

The job was "neat," Kelso said, as the burglars took only cash and failed to bother other valuables and the store's merchandise.

And the store showed no signs

'CLOSES EYES, GOES TO SLEEP'

Boy, 11, Loses Survival Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — "The little boy closed his eyes and went to sleep."

This was the way the hospital reported that 11-year-old Stephen Baltz died at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Now the lad is with 83 others who rode a sleek, speedy jet on a journey to death.

Only the boy came out alive from the incredible wreckage which lay in a teeming Brooklyn street after colliding Friday with another plane in the world's worst air accident.

Each moment the red-haired youngster clung to life was a moment of triumph. In Methodist Hospital in Brooklyn, the prayers were many that he would rally, that he would survive the dreadful burns over 80 per cent of his body, that his broken bones would one day mend.

Clinging to hope were his distraught parents—Mr. and Mrs. William Baltz of Wilmette, Ill.—who stayed near him, praying that the wonders of science and medicine as well as the boy's will would save him.

In the morning — 24 hours after the crash — there was a slight note of optimism, as the hospital reported that, "He has shown some response and it is hoped that this progress will continue."

"He's extremely brave, well - contained and uncomplaining," said one of the attending doctors.

Then in late morning there was feverish activity by doctors and nurses. The tension of determined people embraced in a losing battle communicated itself to hospital personnel.

At 1 p.m., Stephen lost the battle.

A weeping hospital worker hardly able to control her voice, said: "The little boy closed his eyes and went to sleep."

The father came to speak with newsmen. The tears — shed in the privacy of the boy's room — were gone now. Controlled, bravely, William Baltz said his son was dead. There was more to say.

"I appreciate very much the attention and kindness of the people of the city of New York. The police department and fire department were superb. The effort to save my son and the work done here in Methodist Hospital was simply magnificent."

The mother was under sedation in a private room of the hospital.

The burns and bruises contributed to death, but a hospital spokesman reported that the major cause was extensive flame damage in the lungs.

"There was very little that could be done to stop the lung damage," said the Rev. Donald S. Stacey, hospital chaplain.

Stephen's death brought the toll to 137-84 in the United Air Lines DC8, 44 in the Trans World Airlines Super Constellation and 9 persons in apartment and on the streets where the jet crashed.

Stephen was in the jet's

over busy Bayerstrasse "like the end of the world."

At least 16 persons were known to be in the hospital with severe injuries. Several were in critical condition. They included motorists dragged from blazing automobiles drenched with gasoline. Many others were treated for minor injuries.

"There are so many arms, legs and bodies still lying about, it is impossible to say how many were killed," a police official said.

The plane, with the exception of a wing and the tail, was destroyed. Police said that soon after the crash flames stretched 100 yards and shot 150 feet in the air.

One of the first policemen on the spot said he did not believe anyone escaped the rear car of the two-car streetcar.

"The streetcar went up in flames in a second. I heard first a few loud, horrified screams of the occupants, and then everything was still. I don't think anybody got out of the rear car. I saw a few people in wild flight from the first car. Others were crouching and hobbling through the sea of flames."

It was the second plane disaster to affect a great city in two days. Two planes collided over New York city Friday and fell on different sections, bringing death to 137.

The plummeting plane here struck the streetcar on Bayer Strasse at the corner of Martin Greif Strasse. St. Paul's church is about 300 yards to the southeast. About 70 yards south of the church is Maria Theresienwiese meadow.

The American students were 16 to 21 years old, most of them children of U.S. military personnel stationed in England.

They had boarded the plane at Munich-Riem Airport a happy, lauching, kidding lot. They were to fly to Northhold Airport, England, there to scatter to their families for Christmas.

The transport left at 2:05 p.m., in foggy weather. Four minutes later, witnesses said the plane hit the steeple of St. Paul's Roman Catholic church in the heart of the city. It sheered off the steeple, flew on another couple of streets and then, with a roar, dived into Bayer Strasse and exploded.

A huge area went up in flames as the plane smashed into the streetcar and gasoline spewed over nearby cars and buildings. Witnesses said people walking along the street burst into flames as the gasoline drenched them.

More than 50 fire engines, German as well as from the U.S. Army in Munich, rushed to the scene. A mile-square area was sealed off.

Germans said it reminded them of the wartime air raids on the city.

"There was fire, and damage, and screams and bodies everywhere," a 55-year-old man said.

"I thought an atom bomb had hit us," said a 60-year-old woman resident of this city of a million population. She was standing in front of her house.

"I will never forget it, a panic broke out on the street. Men and women poured from nearby houses, screaming and yelling and crying. It was chaos."

"It was horrible," a 25-year-old woman said. "I heard the roaring of the engines. It got louder and louder. I ran to the window of my apartment. Suddenly there was a gigantic explosion and yellow flames spread everywhere.

"In the middle of it all there was a streetcar and after a while I could see black figures running around in the middle of the flames. I do not know what happened to them."

Passers-by attempted to get through the flames to the streetcar and the plane but found it impossible. Several motorists, trapped when gasoline soaked their cars, were rescued before their vehicles burned up.

But other passers-by suffered fatal burns.

Four hours after the tragedy, firemen had successfully extinguished fires in neighboring buildings.

top of me to put out the flames. I heard one say, "She is burning bad."

I don't remember exactly what I thought at the time. I think I thought most of those presents we had saved so long for—and hoped that they hadn't burned to cinders.

Then I know I thought of Joseph. I looked around and, thank God, I saw him being put on a stretcher. I was very happy because I knew he was all right. (The husband was reported in critical condition Saturday night).

I was so dazed, I did not feel any pain. Then later, I woke up in the hospital.

I do hope Joseph and I won't have to stay away from the children too long. We are Germans from Yugoslavia. We have lived here since 1945, when we were expelled from Yugoslavia.

Joseph is a teletype mechanic employed with the German post. I work in a textile factory.

It is tragic we are in hospital, but thank God we are both alive.

I wonder if I will get out all right for Christmas?

PAR COUNCIL SAYS

Cash Needs Slight By Private Schools

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Public Affairs Research Council said it is doubtful there would be any substantial expense involved in a new grants-in-aid act until the proper private schools could be set up.

The independent research group made the report Saturday to Sen. A. C. Clemons Jr., Jennings, who offered it for publication. The report said the same information was being given at the same time to others who requested it.

Clemons had asked about the states' financial situation as Gov. Jimmie H. Davis summoned the legisature to a new 30 day special session to continue the fight against school integration and seek a one-cent increase in sales tax. The state already has a two-cent sales tax, and some cities have an additional one-cent sales levy.

Clemons has said he will oppose any raise in taxes.

The grants-in-aid act was passed to give parents a choice between sending their children to private, nonsectarian, nonprofit schools or to schools with Negroes. So far, it is unchallenged in the courts.

On the question of implementing the grants-in-aid act, PAR said:

"As we understand the act, a child would have to reside in the parish where he is to attend school. Further, he must be enrolled in a private, nonprofit, nonsectarian school to be eligible to make application for reimbursement at the rate of approximately $340 per year per child.

"Such a plan," the report said, "which is similar to the one in operation in Virginia, to be implemented requires that there be schools in which the children might enroll.

"Today there are very few private schools in Louisiana which could qualify under act 3. Thus it is doubtful that any substantial expense would be involved until such time as private, nonprofit, non-sectarian schools were developed and staffed.

"The present cost indicated for the two schools ordered integrated (in New Orleans) is about $400,000 a year—provided schools could be found where the children could enroll. Grants, are not restricted to children from integrated schools."

The research organization said, "our research staff has been developing information on several other related questions during the past month in which you have also expressed interest, but all of it is not complete as yet."

PAR executive director Edward J. Steimel said he referred "particularly to the school systems which appear to face a term of less than 180 days. We have almost complete information on the school systems which report that they may face a short term and on the extent of the deficit in each case. The deficits will be approximately $2 million statewide—even if no budget adjustments are made locally which would cut this total."

In a study of the states financial situation, PAR said revenue collections for the first five months of this fiscal year, through November, indicate some revenues may produce less than was expected when the budget was ormed, while others may produce more.

"The possible loss in collections from some revenues can be traced to a slight recession which came sooner than was anticipated," PAR said. "If economic conditions remain about the same for the remaining seven months of this fiscal year, revenue collections may be some $11-$13 million below budget estimates."

But PAR said, "some economists feel that there will be an upturn in business this spring. Should this happen, then revenues could come closer than $11-$13 million in meeting the anticipated budget level."

At least 16 persons were known to be in the hospital with severe injuries. Several were in critical condition. They included motorists dragged from blazing automobiles drenched with gasoline. Many others were treated for minor injuries.

"There are so many arms, legs and bodies still lying about, it is impossible to say how many were killed," a police official said.

The plane, with the exception of a wing and the tail, was destroyed. Police said that soon after the crash flames stretched 100 yards and shot 150 feet in the air.

One of the first policemen on the spot said he did not believe anyone escaped the rear car of the two-car streetcar.

"The streetcar went up in flames in a second. I heard first a few loud, horrified screams of the occupants, and then everything was still. I don't think anybody got out of the rear car. I saw a few people in wild flight from the first car. Others were crouching and hobbling through the sea of flames."

It was the second plane disaster to affect a great city in two days. Two planes collided over New York city Friday and fell on different sections, bringing death to 137.

The plummeting plane here struck the streetcar on Bayer Strasse at the corner of Martin Grief Strasse. St. Paul's church is about 300 yards to the southeast. About 70 yards south of the church is Maria Theresienwiese meadow.

The American students were 16 to 21 years old, most of them children of U.S. military personnel stationed in England.

They had boarded the plane at Munich-Riem Airport a happy, laughing, kidding lot. They were to fly to Northhold Airport, England, there to scatter to their families for Christmas.

The transport left at 2:05 p.m., in foggy weather. Four minutes later, witnesses said the plane hit the steeple of St. Paul's Roman Catholic church in the heart of the city. It sheered off the steeple, flew on another couple of streets and then, with a roar, dived into Bayer Strasse and exploded.

A huge area went up in flames as the plane smashed into the streetcar and gasoline spewed over nearby cars and buildings. Witnesses said people walking along the street burst into flames as the gasoline drenched them.

More than 50 fire engines, German as well as from the U.S. Army in Munich, rushed to the scene. A mile-square area was sealed off.

Germans said it reminded them of the wartime air raids on the city.

"There was fire, and damage, and screams and bodies everywhere," a 55-year-old man said.

"I thought an atom bomb had hit us," said a 60-year-old woman resident of this city of a million population. She was standing in front of her house.

"I will never forget it, a panic broke out on the street. Men and women poured from nearby houses, screaming and yelling and crying. It was chaos."

"It was horrible," a 25-year-old woman said. "I heard the roaring of the engines. It got louder and louder. I ran to the window of my apartment. Suddenly there was a gigantic explosion and yellow flames spread everywhere.

"In the middle of it all there was a streetcar and after a while I could see black figures running around in the middle of the flames. I do not know what happened to them."

Passers-by attempted to get through the flames to the streetcar and the plane but found it impossible. Several motorists, trapped when gasoline soaked their cars, were rescued before their vehicles burned up.

But other passers-by suffered fatal burns.

Four hours after the tragedy, firemen had successfully extinguished fires in neighboring buildings.

top of me to put out the flames. I heard one say, "She is burning bad."

I don't remember exactly what I thought at the time. I think I thought most of those presents we had saved so long for—and hoped that they hadn't burned to cinders.

Then I know I thought of Joseph. I looked around and, thank God, I saw him being put on a stretcher. I was very happy because I knew he was all right. (The husband was reported in critical condition Saturday night).

I was so dazed, I did not feel any pain. Then later, I woke up in the hospital.

I do hope Joseph and I won't have to stay away from the children too long. We are Germans from Yugoslavia. We have lived here since 1945, when we were expelled from Yugoslavia.

Joseph is a teletype mechanic employed with the German post. I work in a textile factory.

It is tragic we are in hospital, but thank God we are both alive.

I wonder if I will get out all right for Christmas?

PAR COUNCIL SAYS

Cash Needs Slight By Private Schools

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Public Affairs Research Council said it is doubtful there would be any substantial expense involved in a new grants-in-aid act until the proper private schools could be set up.

The independent research group made the report Saturday to Sen. A. C. Clemons Jr., Jennings, who offered it for publication. The report said the same information was being given at the same time to others who requested it.

Clemons had asked about the states' financial situation as Gov. Jimmie H. Davis summoned the legisature to a new 30 day special session to continue the fight against school integration and seek a one-cent increase in sales tax. The state already has a two-cent sales tax, and some cities have an additional one-cent sales levy.

Clemons has said he will oppose any raise in taxes.

The grants-in-aid act was passed to give parents a choice between sending their children to private, nonsectarian, nonprofit schools or to schools with Negroes. So far, it is unchallenged in the courts.

On the question of implementing the grants-in-aid act, PAR said:

"As we understand the act, a child would have to reside in the parish where he is to attend school. Further, he must be enrolled in a private, nonprofit, nonsectarian school to be eligible to make application for reimbursement at the rate of approximately $340 per year per child.

"Such a plan," the report said, "which is similar to the one in operation in Virginia, to be implemented requires that there be schools in which the children might enroll.

"Today there are very few private schools in Louisiana which could qualify under act 3. Thus it is doubtful that any substantial expense would be involved until such time as private, nonprofit, non-sectarian schools were developed and staffed.

"The present cost indicated for the two schools ordered integrated (in New Orleans) is about $400,000 a year—provided schools could be found where the children could enroll. Grants, are not restricted to children from integrated schools."

The research organization said, "our research staff has been developing information on several other related questions during the past month in which you have also expressed interest, but all of it is not complete as yet."

PAR executive director Edward J. Steimel said he referred "particularly to the school systems which appear to face a term of less than 180 days. We have almost complete information on the school systems which report that they may face a short term and on the extent of the deficit in each case. The deficits will be approximately $2 million statewide—even if no budget adjustments are made locally which would cut this total."

In a study of the states financial situation, PAR said revenue collections for the first five months of this fiscal year, through November, indicate some revenues may produce less than was expected when the budget was ormed, while others may produce more.

"The possible loss in collections from some revenues can be traced to a slight recession which came sooner than was anticipated," PAR said. "If economic conditions remain about the same for the remaining seven months of this fiscal year, revenue collections may be some $11-$13 million below budget estimates."

But PAR said, "some economists feel that there will be an upturn in business this spring. Should this happen, then revenues could come closer than $11-$13 million in meeting the anticipated budget level."

A worried neighbor writes in about a Monroe family of five children whose father has left them. Two are pre-school age, the electricity has been turned off because they were unable to pay the bill and they have no food. "They are destitute."

A six-year-old girl writes that her family has no heat and needs food and clothes. She also asks Goodfellows to remember her and her two brothers and sisters at Christmas.

An elderly couple will go without food if someone doesn't help them Christmas, a neighbor says.

A West Monroe woman writes that a father, crippled and in a wheel chair, needs clothing and food for his three children. She says "they have no mother to care for them." They receive a little check, but it doesn't go far."

Another mother, who has eight children, also seeks aid. She writes of overhearing her two oldest children, aged 11 and 8, discussing Christmas.

The 11-year-old boy said there was no Santa Claus, but the little girl told him that "Goodfellows was just the same as Santa Claus."

The woman seeks food, clothing and toys.

Alabama Gains 301 New Plants

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—The Industrial Relations and Development Board reported Saturday Alabama experienced its greatest industrial expansion in history.

Leland Jones, board director, said 301 new plants and expansions were made during the year—"the largest number of plants ever reported in a single year." He said 127 were new industries and 174 were expansions of existing plants and factories.

Jones said capital investment in new and expanded industry amounted to $212,238,700—"more than double the investment reported in 1959."

The director said the new plants and expansions provided jobs for 14,313 Alabamians in 60 of the state's 67 counties.

Jones said in addition to the investment of industrial plants, new capital expenditure in other areas—warehousing, utilities military installations — soared well past the half billion dollar mark.

"There are good reasons to believe that industrial development will continue to grow in Alabama," Jones said.

Students Among Crash Victims

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Students from the University of Maryland branch in Munich aboard a plane that crashed in the German city Saturday were from one of 200 such education centers around the world.

The courses are available only to service personnel stationed overseas or their dependents.

POLITICIANS AGREE

Brother Selection May Hurt Kennedy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The consensus among politicians in both parties Saturday was that President-elect John F. Kennedy had hurt himself by selecting his 35-year-old brother, Robert, as his attorney general.

Although they were not saying so publicly, many Democrats agree that the unprecedented appointment of a close relative to the cabinet could be a mistake.

The politicians differed on the extent and duration of the damage Kennedy may have inflicted on himself. Some liberal Democrats feared the appointment may lessen Kennedy's legislative influence and his chances for re-election in 1964. But most figured it was far too early for any such long-range appraisal.

The belief the appointment was a political mistake has almost nothing to do with young Robert F. Kennedy's competence to serve as the nation's chief law enforcement officer.

Even if they were agreed — which they are not — that Robert is among the best qualified men to be given such an assignment, the politicians still would regard the appointment as an error.

They believe the appointment cannot help but hurt President-elect Kennedy's prestige and popularity with the voters. Last Nov. 8 Kennedy won a presidential election in which the voters were more evenly divided than ever before.

In the intervening weeks some Republicans have attempted to nibble away at Kennedy's prestige by suggesting election irregularities were responsible for his victory. The Republicans here agreed that among those who voted for Kennedy there are certain to be some who will reject his insistence that his brother was the "best man" available for attorney general and will accuse him of showing favoritism to a relative.

There is widespread agreement that the appointment has — at least temporarily — damaged President-elect Kennedy's reputation for masterful political judgment among politicians in and out of Congress. Conceivably this could make it more difficult for Kennedy to push some of his legislative proposals through Congress.

A president's influence — his power to persuade members of Congress to follow him — depends in some measure on their appraisal of his political judgment and their appraisal of the level of his popularity with the voters.

Crash Hard For Fireman To Believe

NEW YORK (AP)—"The way I look at it," the young, red-haired fireman said, "this whole thing is not real."

He nudged a scorched Christmas package with his boot and stared out across the smouldering rubble of the United Air Lines DC8 jet plane that fell into Brooklyn Friday after colliding in flight with a Trans World Airlines Constellation.

He paused, then explained.

"I mean, look at it this way—there's a jet airliner lying here in a Brooklyn street. You can't make me believe it's real."

A second fireman shuddered in the cold and stared at scores of rescue workers plying a pitiful pile of bricks and mortar to one side of the narrow street.

"I never thought I'd see the day I'd take a church apart brick by brick. It was such a little church to have so many bricks."

"Yeh," said another fireman. "What bothers me is every time I pick up a brick I squeeze it to see if it'll give. Grabbed a fur awhile ago and, God, did it scare me."

"Me, too. There must have been a shipment of them in there," another rescue worker said. "Expensive Christmas present for some gal, I guess."

A weary figure stumbled forward and accepted a cup of coffee from a Salvation Army worker.

Someone told a joke.

The figure holding the coffee frowned and said: "I'm sorry. I can't laugh anymore."

"Nasty, eh?"

"The word fits."

A burly fireman, crawling out of the snow-blanketed rubble, spoke: "We just found another one."

"That's 92," someone said. "Ninety-two here and 44 across the harbor."

"Think there'll be more?"

"Yeh, yeh, there'll be more."

The redhead grimaced and tossed a cigaret stub to the ground.

"Let's get back to it," he said, "before I get the idea that it's real and get sick."

Board Requests Possible Action Against Castro

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Interamerican Defense Board has called on its member nations, including the United States, to consider possible action against Cuba to prevent the pro-Communist Castro government from becoming a military ally of the Soviet Union, it was learned Saturday.

Official sources reported that the Board, which coordinates the military defense of the 12 American republics, including Cuba, said in a resolution that "repeated official concepts and attitudes by representative authorities of the government of Cuba leads to the deduction that the present government is moving away from the interamerican system."

Then, referring to Cuba's increasingly closer ties with Russia, the Board said, "this situation is prejudicial to the normal development of the work of the Board, especially to the study of documents concerning the security of the continent, in light of the increasing influence and threat of the communist-soviet bloc."

The question of Cuban status came up when the Argentine delegate proposed that the Board require Cuba to say whether it has become a military ally of the Soviet Union.

Official sources said the request was turned down by a 13-to-1 vote, with Cuba the only dissenter. The Argentine delegation abstained.

Morris Blumenthal, above, inspects a new shipment of fine furs just received from his furriers in New York for FIELD'S Christmas Fur Event all this coming week at both Field's stores, Downtown and Twin City Shopping Center. These magnificent furs are backed by assurance from FIELD'S as to quality of pelts, superior workmanship, top fashion styling and top value at welcome prices. Included in this group are magnificent minks, squirrel, fox and beaver.

Excellent Shopping Tips For Men Who Buy Furs As Gifts

Many women take particular pride and delight in shopping for things for their husbands to wear. Most men, however, are reluctant to shop for women's clothes and accessories.

This male timidness, says Morris Blumenthal of Field's, is invariably overcome when a man desires to surprise his wife with a gift for her to wear. It is particularly true when he shops for a fur garment, since more than 60 per cent of all furs purchased as Christmas gifts are bought by men. Of course, family, friends, neighbors, and store sales personnel, are frequently called upon to help him through his dilemma.

To aid a man in the selection of furs, Mr. Blumenthal suggests he follow these basic rules:

1. Always buy from a reputable firm.
2. Remember it is always better to buy a good quality in a less expensive fur than a poor quality in an expensive fur.
3. Always look for lustrous, even hairs on soft and supple leather . . . and avoid dull hairs, split or curled at the tips, and stiff skins.
4. Examine the fur in good light and make certain there is uniformity in color and pattern.
5. Read the tag attached to the fur garment stating what kind of fur it is, and if the pelt is natural, dyed or blended.
6. And, finally, because a fur is for a woman you love, Field's will gift-wrap it beautifully and be sure you give it to her as a surprise.—Adv.

POLITICIANS AGREE

Brother Selection May Hurt Kennedy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The consensus among politicians in both parties Saturday was that President-elect John F. Kennedy had hurt himself by selecting his 35-year-old brother, Robert, as his attorney general.

Although they were not saying so publicly, many Democrats agree that the unprecedented appointment of a close relative to the cabinet could be a mistake.

The politicians differed on the extent and duration of the damage Kennedy may have inflicted on himself. Some liberal Democrats feared the appointment may lessen Kennedy's legislative influence and his chances for re-election in 1964. But most figured it was far too early for any such long-range appraisal.

The belief the appointment was a political mistake has almost nothing to do with young Robert F. Kennedy's competence to serve as the nation's chief law enforcement officer.

Even if they were agreed — which they are not — that Robert is among the best qualified men to be given such an assignment, the politicians still would regard the appointment as an error.

They believe the appointment cannot help but hurt President-elect Kennedy's prestige and popularity with the voters. Last Nov. 8 Kennedy won a presidential election in which the voters were more evenly divided than ever before.

In the intervening weeks some Republicans have attempted to nibble away at Kennedy's prestige by suggesting election irregularities were responsible for his victory. The Republicans here agreed that among those who voted for Kennedy there are certain to be some who will reject his insistence that his brother was the "best man" available for attorney general and will accuse him of showing favoritism to a relative.

There is widespread agreement that the appointment has — at least temporarily — damaged President-elect Kennedy's reputation for masterful political judgment among politicians in and out of Congress. Conceivably this could make it more difficult for Kennedy to push some of his legislative proposals through Congress.

A president's influence — his power to persuade members of Congress to follow him — depends in some measure on their appraisal of his political judgment and their appraisal of the level of his popularity with the voters.

Crash Hard For Fireman To Believe

Labor Will Have Strongest Voice

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least two more high labor union figures are due to be named to the official family of President-elect John F. Kennedy.

This will give organized labor its strongest voice in the government since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal.

Joseph D. Keenan, an AFL-CIO vice president, is in line to become assistant secretary of defense for manpower. Keenan, an ardent Democrat who accompanied Kennedy on his campaign, was a top labor representative in war production agencies.

Lloyd A. Mashburn, president of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, is slated to become undersecretary of labor. A Republican, Mashburn served in the same capacity during the first year of President Eisenhower's administration.

Organized labor already has obtained a strong toehold in the new administration with Kennedy's selection of Arthur J. Goldberg, special AFL-CIO counsel, as secretary of labor. Goldberg is widely regarded as one of the ablest spokesmen for the labor union cause.

Other union officials are likely to wind up in high positions in the Kennedy administration, some probably in the diplomatic service where they would serve as counterparts to the growing number of foreign diplomats who rise to political prominence through labor movements of their countries.

An opportunity to get their ideas and suggestions considered and possibly accepted is what the labor unions have wanted most in political life.

They felt orphaned from governmental policymaking during the Eisenhower administration, even though they have genuinely admired Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell.

Keenan, secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, is one of the most popular figures in the union field.

Now 63, Keenan was an assistant to the late Sidney Hillman, the union official who became a top government war production figure and political power under Roosevelt

Keenan was pushed by the building trades segment of the AFL-CIO for the labor secretary spot that Goldberg has won. A team player, Keenan led Goldberg around for congratulations at a Christmas season party Thursday night for union officials given by Keenan's labor organization.

The building trades, which were opposed to Goldberg because he came from the rival industrial union camp within organized labor, sought a top spot in the Labor Department for one of their number.

It was then that it was agreed to name Mashburn, one of the old-time building tradesmen, to the Labor Department No. 2 spot.

This action by Kennedy to placate trade union political rivalry is in itself an indication of organized labor's new-found influence in Washington.

Ethiopians Hail Return Of Selassie

LONDON (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie returned in triumph to his capital of Addis Ababa Saturday. Leaders of the abortive palace revolt in Ethiopia were reported to have fled before his arrival. Some may have committed suicide.

Reports that the rebellion had ended in bloody failure poured out of Addis Ababa. The city was reported rapidly returning to normal.

Diplomats in London also heard that four ministers who served the 68-year-old "Conquering Lion of Judah" were shot as hostages Friday as he landed in Asmara, 400 miles north of the capital, and began to make his way back home. He had rushed back from a state visit to Brazil when the revolt broke out Wednesday.

The slain officials were said to have been the ministers of defense and commerce, the acting foreign minister and the deputy minister of information. The minister of health was reported missing and the ministers of public works and finance fled the city when the revolt broke out.

As for the rebels, diplomatic sources in London reported that the ringleader, Gen. Mulugeta Bulli, and his commissioner of police were dead and presumed suicides. The rebel premier, Ras (prince) Imeru, former ambassador to the Soviet Union and to India, was reported either arrested or dead.

Clark Mollenhoff, Washington correspondent for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune and the Des Moines Reigster and Tribune, reported from Addis Ababa, where he is on a study tour, that the city suffered considerable damage in street fighting between the rebels and the large segment of the army that remained loyal to the emperor.

He said the rebels were said to have killed as many as 16 high government officials, including three Cabinet ministers.

No Americans were hurt in the fighting, Mollenhoff said. It began shortly after the rebel government was proclaimed and lasted until about noon. Haile Selassie returned three hours later.

The veteran of some eight years of club work, who exhibited a total of 66 articles at the Ouachita Valley Fair, and earned $64.75 in premiums, recently won the title of "Good Provider for Ouachita Parish."

The luncheon she will attend is sponsored by the Times - Picayune.

Parish 4-H Club officials, Mrs. Donna Moore, assistant home demonstration agent, and Elliott Branch, assistant county agent, said that Margaret Ann has arranged an impressive display of awards that she has won through completed club project work and records kept on them.

This year the 4-H'er is carrying some 14 projects, varying from home-making to livestock.

The agents said that Margaret Ann is not only interested in her own progress but helpful in working with other club members in the community. One of her goals is to win a college scholarship award which is given to outstanding 4-H Club members on the basis of their records.

Ethiopians Hail Return Of Selassie

LONDON (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie returned in triumph to his capital of Addis Ababa Saturday. Leaders of the abortive palace revolt in Ethiopia were reported to have fled before his arrival. Some may have committed suicide.

Reports that the rebellion had ended in bloody failure poured out of Addis Ababa. The city was reported rapidly returning to normal.

Diplomats in London also heard that four ministers who served the 68-year-old "Conquering Lion of Judah" were shot as hostages Friday as he landed in Asmara, 400 miles north of the capital, and began to make his way back home. He had rushed back from a state visit to Brazil when the revolt broke out Wednesday.

The slain officials were said to have been the ministers of defense and commerce, the acting foreign minister and the deputy minister of information. The minister of health was reported missing and the ministers of public works and finance fled the city when the revolt broke out.

As for the rebels, diplomatic sources in London reported that the ringleader, Gen. Mulugeta Bulli, and his commissioner of police were dead and presumed suicides. The rebel premier, Ras (prince) Imeru, former ambassador to the Soviet Union and to India, was reported either arrested or dead.

Clark Mollenhoff, Washington correspondent for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune and the Des Moines Reigster and Tribune, reported from Addis Ababa, where he is on a study tour, that the city suffered considerable damage in street fighting between the rebels and the large segment of the army that remained loyal to the emperor.

He said the rebels were said to have killed as many as 16 high government officials, including three Cabinet ministers.

No Americans were hurt in the fighting, Mollenhoff said. It began shortly after the rebel government was proclaimed and lasted until about noon. Haile Selassie returned three hours later.

Annual Favorites Named By Students

Northeast State yearbook favorites, elected by popular vote of the student body, were announced yesterday by Editor Henry Chriceol of Mangham.

The winners include a man and woman from each class.

Elected from the freshman group are Sylvia Hayden, elementary education major of West Monroe, and John Edwin Pace, health and physical education student of Haile.

Capturing sophomore favorite honors are pharmacy students Carolyn Oubre, Prairieville, and Clarence Brown "Brownie" Goodreau, Jennings.

Chosen from the junior class are Dorothy Marsh of Sondheimer and Lannie Johnson of Monroe, both majors in health and physical education.

Representing the senior group are Betty Shirley of Minden and Larry Giambelluca of New Orleans. The former is in business education and the latter in pharmacy.

Three of the winners captured favorite honors last year. Goodreau won a freshman title; Johnson got the sophomore vote; and Betty Shirley was the junior choice.

Photographs of the winners will occupy prominent places in the feature section of the 1961 Chacahoula, Chriceol said.

Presentation of class favorites has become a Northeast yearbook tradition.

Free Electors To Cast Votes For Thurmond

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A leader of the 14 unpledged presidential electors of Mississippi and Alabama said the group would vote for Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., for vice president.

Sen. Earl Evans of Canton, chairman of Mississippi's eight unpledged electors, said in a press conference he has no hopes of blocking the election of President-elect John Kennedy.

Earlier, the unpledged electors agreed to vote for Sen. Harry Byrd, D-Va., for president in hopes electors from other southern states would join them to throw the election into the House of Representatives.

Gov. Ross Barnett said, "We can't tell what will happen between now and Monday, when the electoral votes are cast."

Barnett said he had suggested to other southern states that they conduct straw polls in their states in the past two weeks to relieve a moral obligation to vote for Kennedy.

Airliner Veers Into Snowbank

BOSTON (AP)—An American Airlines 707 jet swerved into a snowbank at Logan International Airport Saturday after landing on a flight from Los Angeles. The Airport Authority said none of the 103 persons aboard was injured.

The big plane had traveled about 6,000 feet on the 10,000 foot runway and as the pilot slowed it down it veered off into the snowbank.

The passengers were taken off and driven to the terminal in buses.

The airport was closed temporarily so that the plane could be removed from the snowbank.

THIS IS THE EYE of the new Polaroid Electric Eye Camera. It is a new kind of eye – a micro-eye, small as a matchhead, yet almost as sensitive as a human eye. It can even "see" indoors at night!

AUTOMATIC This electric eye sets the camera for you automatically for pictures indoors as well as out. It computes and sets the correct lens opening and shutter speed for any kind of lighting. All you do is aim and snap.

WORKS ANYWHERE Because of its radical design, this new camera works automatically over the widest range of any electric eye camera – from brightest beaches to shadowy interiors.

NO FLASH BULBS Indoors at night, your room lights are all that is necessary to make the picture, using the ultra-sensitive 3000 Speed Polaroid Land film. The Polaroid wink-light fills in shadows.

AND SHARP! Pictures in bright outdoor light are always in perfect focus. Everything in the picture from three feet to miles away is needle sharp. And fast action is frozen by shutter speeds that actually approach 1/1000th of a second.

... PLUS INSTANT PICTURES TOO! Every picture you make with this camera is ready to be enjoyed on the spot, just moments after you click the shutter. Isn't this the way to take pictures? – Come in for a free demonstration.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Dag Fires Blast At Soviet Bloc

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold charged Saturday night that the Soviet bloc is carrying on a continuing campaign of misrepresentation against the U. N. Congo operation in an effort to force his resignation.

The secretary-general was obviously angered by weeks of Soviet-bloc attacks. He spoke to the General Assembly after U. S. Delege James J. Wadsworth said the Soviet Union "wants civil war in the Congo in order to promote its own evil designs."

Hammarskjold broke into the assembly's debate on the situation in the Congo—put on the agenda by the Soviet Union—to say the real issue "might better have been called the situation in the United Nations."

"We are facing a great threat to this organization," he said. "A consistent effort has been made in order to create conditions for a drastic change in the administrative structure of this organization and for that reason to corrode whatever confidence may remain in the secretariat."

Hammarskjold in a reference to Soviet Premier Khrushchev said "a certain party" asked him to resign months ago "in a chivalrous way."

Hammarskjold said he had done as much as he could within the limitations set by the U. N. Charter and resolutions of the assembly and Security Council.

He said a strengthening of his mandate to keep peace in the Congo "is highly desirable, as the authority of the United Nations has been challenged in many quarters."

The secretary-general said the United Nations should use its influence in the Congo to get Parliament reconvened; the army reduced to its constitutional role, and a legitimate civilian government established.

Hammarskjold also said secessionist tendencies must be broken. He told critics he had worked to Belgian technicians to quit the Congo but steps must be suggested "as to how the gap thus created could be filled by the United Nations itself."

Ike Mails Out Yule Greetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Eisenhower mailed out their Christmas cards Saturday.

The White House declined to say how many are on the Eisenhower's list other than to agree that the number is quite substantial.

Firemen Rescue Fan Of Santa's

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kathy Montanaro, a venturesome four-year-old, wasn't taking any chances on missing Santa Claus.

She popped out of bed Saturday, pushed the covering from a brick heating flue no longer used, and peered down the chimney.

"I was looking for Santa Claus," she related afterward. "I think I saw the top of his hat. So I went down after him."

It took a squad of firemen half an hour to get her out.

The experience left her unperturbed but disappointed that Santa seemingly melted into the air.

Kathy was in a second floor bedroom when it all started.

Her mother, Carol, was making the bed and didn't see Kathy move the covering, a piece of plasterboard serving the purpose temporarily.

Once aware of what had happened, Mrs. Montanaro flew to the opening—15 by 18 inches—and there, nine feet below, squatted Kathy. The flue had been sealed off at the first floor level.

New Industrial Facilities Rise By 4 Per Cent

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Commerce and Industry Department reported Saturday investment in new industrial facilities in Louisiana rose 41 per cent in 1960 over the previous year.

I. W. (Pat) Patterson, executive director of commerce and industry, handed Gov. Jimmie H. Davis a progress report on industrial investment.

The total put into new industrial facilities came to $188,059,-925, the Patterson report showed. Investment during 1959 was $132,-735,753.

The 1960 total was sixth highest since 1945. Patterson said the increase was due to a combination of factors.

Some factors listed were: A new mass national advertising program; stepped up cooperation, and personal contact with local groups, regional organizations and industrial management; and awareness on the part of the people of Louisiana of the need for industrial advancement.

He predicted that growth during the next few years will be even greater than in the past year.

A total of 180 industrial applications for property tax exemptions on new facilities were passed by the Board of Commerce and Industry during the year, the report showed. Of those, 58 were for new manufacturing plants.

Patterson reported a definite recent upturn in inquiries from industrialists seeking plant location data.

Missing Brazil Plane Is Found

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) —A Brazilian National Airlines passenger plane with 13 persons aboard, missing since Thursday, has been found safe in the Brazilian backlands, the air force reported Saturday.

It said the plane had engine trouble after taking off from Porto Nacional in Goias State, but that no one was hurt. The plane disappeared the day after a nationwide strike of Brazilian ground crews started. The airline Friday blamed the plane's disappearance on the strike.

Royalty Sale By Kennedy Is Disclosed

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy's headquarters said Saturday night that more than a year ago he sold certain Louisiana land royalty rights to the hostess-secretary on his private plane.

Pierre Salinger, Kennedy's press secretary, said Janet Desrosiers paid $2,400 for the rights.

Salinger was commenting on dispatches Friday from Jennings, La. They reported that Kennedy had transferred to Miss Desrosiers 75 per cent of his mineral and oil royalty rights on eight tracts of land in southern Louisiana.

The transfer reported was for 75 per cent of Kennedy's four per cent of the oil, gas and mineral rights covering production from the land. The land tracts total about 1,600 acres about five miles from the Lake Arthur oil and gas field, largest in Jefferson Davis Parish—county.

Asked why Kennedy had sold part of the rights he held to Miss Dosrosiers, Salinger said one reason was that the land was yielding an annual income of only about $350, and that this was received in about 30 checks a month for as little as 30 cents each.

The press secretary indicated the bookeeping involved was not worth the time and trouble.

Before becoming Kennedy's hostess - secretary aboard the plane, attractive and auburn-haired Miss Desrosiers worked for seven years for the president-elect's father, Joseph P. Kennedy.

Salinger said the plane is owned by a Kennedy family corporation, Kenaire, and that his business operations also are handled by the elder Kennedy's office in New York.

Miss Desrosiers, in her late 20s, had some savings and the Kennedy office advised her regarding purchase of the Louisiana land rights.

Replying to a question, Salinger said he did not know why Kennedy had retained 25 per cent of the royalty rights. At Jennings Friday, an official at the Jefferson Davis Parish clerk's office said three of the eight tracts involved in the transfer are not at this time producing oil, gas or minerals.

Court records show that Kennedy acquired the royalty rights Dec. 15, 1952.

Miss Desrosiers' home is in New York City.

Actor's Mother Quits Her Job Over Politics

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Peter Lawford's mother, Lady May Lawford, said Saturday she quit her $50-a-week job with a Beverly Hills jewelry store after an argument with the owner over politics.

Lady Lawford, whose son is married to President-elect John F. Kennedy's sister, backed Vice President Richard M. Nixon in the election.

"I don't know whether I was fired or resigned," she said. "The store owner told me, 'This political thing is affecting my business. I can't afford to get involved.'"

Lady Lawford, who took the job five days ago, said she suggested that she resign and her boss "took the hint and thought it a good idea."

SERIOUS QUESTIONS POSED

Congress May Zero-In On Defense Stockpiles

EDITOR'S NOTE — While the government sits helplessly on a huge cache of metals, minerals and other raw materials, critics are beginning to wonder whether the 14-year-old stockpile mobilization program doesn't need a drastic overhauling attuned to the nuclear age. Here is a closeup of the controversy.

By ROGER GREENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam's multibillion-dollar defense stockpiles, once hailed as a staunch "national insurance policy," may run into heavy fire in the new 87th Congress.

Revolutionary developments in military strategy, weapons and technology have raised serious questions about the need for continuing to hoard vast supplies of conventional war materials in an age of nuclear-tipped missiles and H-bombs.

In brief, why is the federal government storing up mountains of raw materials for a type of long-drawn war which may never be fought again?

The stockpile program was set up by Congress in 1946. Now critics in Congress and elsewhere are attacking the project as "a monstrous white elephant, wasteful and futile, a grab-bag for special interests."

Defenders of the program, mindful of the critical shortages which plagued the country in World War II, say it is still extremely valuable.

In any event, congressional investigators are something less than happy about one phase of the program as administered by the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

For nearly three years, they say, despite urgent recommendations by a special advisory committee, the OCDM has made little discernible progress toward stockpiling "survival items" which would be needed in case of a nuclear attack on this country.

The advisory committee, headed by Holman D. Pettibone, Chicago banker, said in a report to Congress on Jan. 28, 1958, that huge quantities of drugs, foodstuffs, medical supplies and reconstruction materials would be needed to care for the wounded and to shelter millions of bombed-out civilians.

Even earlier, in 1957, a House Agriculture subcommittee urged the OCDM to stockpile food at strategic depots where it would be within easy reach of survivors fleeing an H-bombed city.

A step in that direction—or faintly in that direction—was finally taken last August when the Department of Agriculture announced that 25 million bushels of government-owned surplus wheat would be shifted from the Midwest to the East Coast as a food reserve for national emergencies.

The grain will be stored in ships in the mothball fleet in the Hudson River, New York, and the James River, Virginia.

It might seem debatable how much good the raw grain would do in feeding refugees from a stricken city.

"Of course, it would mean the people would have to grind it and then eat it with water," director Leo A. Hoegh told a House subcommittee: "Some people may object to eating wheat and corn ground, but I say it is better than a chocolate bar. You will do anything to sustain yourself. This is an austere program. This is to keep you living."

The Pettibone committee, in its final report, stressed the immediate and urgent need for a comprehensive post-attack survival program.

The committee noted that the Pentagon was spending $40 billion a year for military defense yet for human survival and relief the government has stockpiled items, principally medical, amounting to only about $200 million.

"The committee recommends that stockpiling emphasis be shifted from raw materials to finished items and vital supplies for survival, relief and rehabilitation," it added.

So far, while standing pat on the great bulk of its raw materials, the OCDM has approached the survival issue to the extent of producing a 3½ page document listing essential survival items.

The essentials are broken down into six major categories: Health supplies and equipment ranging from common aspirin to germ-warfare vaccines; food stuffs; body protection and household equipment; light, power and fuels; santitation and water supply items, and emergency housing.

OCDM officials acknowledge that little has been done toward physically stockpiling these survival items.

They say, however, the Commerce Department now has electronic computers working overtime to catalogue the location and amounts of such materials, available in commercial channels, which could be diverted to disaster relief in an emergency.

The agency further boasts it has developed a "people stockpile," enlisting the services of 2,000 top-level executives engineers, purchasing agents, labor and management officials—who would direct the flow of vital supplies into emergency areas.

As far as the national stockpile itself is concerned, Hoegh has acknowledged, in testimony on Capitol Hill, that most of the stockpiled materials are not usable for survival and rehabilitation purposes.

Hoegh also conceded the stockpiles would be useful chiefly in meeting wartime needs when this country was not under attack.

Commenting on Hoegh's testimony, the House Committee on Government Operations said in a mid-1960 report:

"The federal government is not purchasing and stockpiling survival items even though they are considered essential to survival.

"The stockpiles have been built up on the basis of critical shortages experienced during World War II and do not necessarily represent the types of materials that would be required in a possible future war. Only a few of the many items would have any utility in a post-attack rehabilitation and recovery effort.

"As a nation, we have little more than started to stockpile items which would prove essential should a nuclear attack be made on our cities."

It said that in the whole $8-billion stockpile, the only survival items exclusive of medical supplies were about $8 million worth of engineering equipment such as pipe, generators, chlorinators and water purifiers.

Asked why the OCDM has clung to the concept of a long war in its stockpile policies, instead of shifting gear into the nuclear age, the OCDM assistant director, J Roy Price, told a reporter: "I think the Defense Department should answer as to what type of war we may or may not fight.

"It is true that as far as weapons of mass destruction are concerned, we find ourselves in a whole new era compared with World War II, but we can't say the stockpile was a mistake, because it was the best thing that could have been done at the time."

An interview with Price developed the following questions and answers:

Q. Why hasn't the OCDM acted to stockpile post-nuclear survival supplies, as urged by the Pettibone advisory committee three years ago? A. If Congress would appropriate funds, the chances of moving forward would be much better. We've asked for more money, but we didn't get it.

Q. Is it true, as some critics say, that the stockpile is now obsolete in terms of nuclear war, since it was designed to prevent shortages in a long war of attrition such as World War II? A. I wouldn't say it is obsolescent, by any means. In case of a stepped-up cold war, the materials in the stockpile would be of tremendous value if our supplies from some countries were cut off.

Q. The Defense Department set a policy in 1954 that stockpiles must be located at least 10 miles outside the radius of vulnerable industrial and population centers classified as potential targets of attack. Is that policy being carried out? A. Yes, I'd say so as an example, we keep some industrial diamonds in city vaults where they might be destroyed in a nuclear attack, but some are kept at Ft. Knox and others are widely dispersed.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., who has been keeping a sharp eye on the program, says the government has $8.4 billion in the national stockpile of strategic and critical materials, $174 million in civil defese medical supplies, and $7.2 billion in surplus farm commodities.

However, only about $800 million worth of surplus commodities are earmarked in the supplemental stockpile. The commodities are used for barter in exchange for foreign metals and materials.

OCDM says the supplies are stored at 215 secret sites, mostly at military depots, industrial plants and commercial or government-owned warehouses.

The strategic stockpile contains about 26 million tons. Its 76 materials range from aluminum, asbestos, manganese, cobalt and copper to castor oil, hog bristles, iodine, opium, platinum, industrial diamonds, raw silk, sperm oil and feathers.

tail section. It was wrenched from the rest of the craft and the boy was thrown clear, about 30 feet away. His clothes were aflame. People went to his aid, a crying woman, a deeply concerned man. Someone put an umbrella over the boy, to shield him from the light snow fall.

Rushed to Methodist Hospital, the boy — as boys are bound to do — talked although doctors tried to keep him quiet to conserve his strength.

He said this of his trip: "I remember looking out the plane window at the snow below covering the city. It looked like a picture out of a fairy book. It was a beautiful sight.

"Then all of a sudden there was an explosion. The plane started to fall and people started to scream. I held on to my seat and then the plane crashed. That's all I remember."

Stephen, all dressed up in his gray suit and gray gloves and gray hat with the little feather in the band, was flying from Chicago to New York to join his vacationing mother and sister.

His first thoughts were to have his mother at his side.

"Can you get my wallet?" He asked nurses and doctors. "My mother's name is in it. She's in Yonkers and I want to see her."

The boy's father, who had put him aboard the jet liner in Chicago, flew immediately to New York on learning of the accident. Finding that his boy still was alive, he said: "We're grateful to the Almighty for this miracle."

While Stephen lived - while there was hope - each moment was ticked off as 60 seconds of a continuing miracle. This was the word most used to describe the breathing human wreckage that had been a fine - looking boy.

At one point, the Rev. Mr. Stacey said: "We have the feeling that this boy, the sole survivor of the terrible disaster, may survive. We feel that the Almighty him - self had some hand in it and that it was a miracle that he came out of the crash. We have a right to believe that the angels will provide another miracle."

Then the turn for the worse. And then - the end.

Morrison, was one of the bingo sponsors.

Morrison in the past two sessions was a heavy target of administration and segregation leaders after the New Orleans school board resisted legislative demands.

Here are the 13 bills introduced. The first six, and House bills 10 and 11 are Davis administration proposals:

H1—Provide that all employes of State Sovereignty Commission shall be temporary employes, which in effect will remove them from civil service provisions.

H2—Provide that usurpation of a public office without authority of commission from the governor or by exercising functions of office or refuses to vacate after being removed shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by $500 fine or six months imprisonment or both.

H3—Levy additional one per cent state sales tax, effective Jan. 4, 1961 until July 1, 1964.

H4—Provide for collection and payment of the additional one per cent sales tax by the dealer to the collector of internal revenue.

H5—Increase from 2 per cent to 3 per cent the amount allowed the dealer as compensation for accounting for and remitting state sales tax to collector of internal revenue.

H6—Provide that additional one-per cent sales tax go into general fund.

H7—Increase soft drink tax from ½ cent on each five cents wholesale price to one cent; from 10 cents a gallon to 50 cents a gallon on syrups.

H8—Levy tax on each automobile sold in Louisiana or bought elsewhere and used or stored in Louisiana, computed so that when sold at retail sales tax shall be 5 per cent on net cost above $2,000, proceeds of tax to be used for educational purposes, tax to expire at end of 1961 fiscal year.

H9—Increase income tax from 4 to 10 per cent on net income from $10,000 to $50,000 and from 6 to 20 per cent on net income in excess of $50,000.

H10—Appropriate $300,000 from general fund to State Board of Education to be distributed to St. Bernard Parish school board for additional expenses incurred by providing facilities for students not residents of the parish.

H11—Appropriate $7,309,000 to State Board of Education from general fund to assure full nine-month school term for the current school year.

H12—Increase liquor tax from $1.68 a gallon to $2.48 a gallon; sparkling wines, from $1.58 to $2.48 a gallon; still wines with alcoholic content of 14 per cent or less from 11 cents to 31 cents per gallon; still wines with alcoholic content from 14 to 24 per cent from 21 cents to 46 cents per gallon; still wines over 24 per cent from $1.58 to $2.48 per gallon; malt beverages, from $10 to $15 per barrel.

H13—Authorize governing authority of any municipality or parish to license bonafide non-profit educational cooperatives to hold, operate and conduct charitable raffles, bingo and keno games.

There was considerable speculation the provisions for a separate one-cent levy would avoid danger to the existing tax in event of a federal lawsuit in the state's ceaseless fight against school integration orders.

The House returns at 4 p.m. Sunday to assign the tax bills to the House Ways and Means Committee for quick hearings. That is when the full force of opposition first should be heard.

The Senate, with nothing to do until the House acts, quit until 7 p.m. Wednesday, at the start of this new 30-day special session.

For several days, there has been mounting opposition from newspapers and chambers of commerce to a tax raise during the slight business setback in Louisiana.

Labor leaders are ready to battle a sales tax boost. One administration tax bill provides the estimated extra $45 million would go into the state general fund, without specific dedication, and some segregation lawmakers viewed this unhappily.

Rep. Triche predicted "the legislature will vote favorable for our sales tax proposal. . .it realizes the need."

Triche, in an interview, said the administration tax also would finance a civil service pay raise, benefiting particularly the lower pay levels.

Lehmann, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the pay boost recommended by the civil service commission months ago would require $5 million-$7 million more a year, with a two-step hike for the lowest paid state workers and a one-step increase for the higher brackets.

The state has about 35,500 civil service workers. Gov. Davis had promised a pay boost by Christmas.

sounds like a "very generous offers," he said.

"Anybody who could help us keep our schools open until such time as local ad valorem taxes come in is rendering a great service to New Orleans," Riecke said.

The ad valorem taxes, which are levied on city property, are due in June, he said. The board wants to borrow some three or four million dollars to meet salaries and bills until that time, he said.

There was considerable speculation the provisions for a separate one-cent levy would avoid danger to the existing tax in event of a federal lawsuit in the state's ceaseless fight against school integration orders.

The House returns at 4 p.m. Sunday to assign the tax bills to the House Ways and Means Committee for quick hearings. That is when the full force of opposition first should be heard.

The Senate, with nothing to do until the House acts, quit until 7 p.m. Wednesday, at the start of this new 30-day special session.

For several days, there has been mounting opposition from newspapers and chambers of commerce to a tax raise during the slight business setback in Louisiana.

Labor leaders are ready to battle a sales tax boost. One administration tax bill provides the estimated extra $45 million would go into the state general fund, without specific dedication, and some segregation lawmakers viewed this unhappily.

Rep. Triche predicted "the legislature will vote favorable for our sales tax proposal. . .it realizes the need."

Triche, in an interview, said the administration tax also would finance a civil service pay raise, benefiting particularly the lower pay levels.

Lehmann, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the pay boost recommended by the civil service commission months ago would require $5 million-$7 million more a year, with a two-step hike for the lowest paid state workers and a one-step increase for the higher brackets.

The state has about 35,500 civil service workers. Gov. Davis had promised a pay boost by Christmas.

sounds like a "very generous offers," he said.

"Anybody who could help us keep our schools open until such time as local ad valorem taxes come in is rendering a great service to New Orleans," Riecke said.

The ad valorem taxes, which are levied on city property, are due in June, he said. The board wants to borrow some three or four million dollars to meet salaries and bills until that time, he said.

Hospital Construction Well Underway In Ward 5

$2 Million Modern Plant Seen

By SARAH LITTLE World Staff Writer

The hum of busy activity just off U. S. Highway 80 west announces the realization of the hopes and dreams of West Monroe citizens and ward five populace for nine years. West Monroe is finally getting a hospital of its own.

Rising out of a grove of trees on the McMillan Road, one sees verifyable evidence of the advancing growth of a rapidly expanding city in the structure of the new ward five hospital.

The $2 million structure, planned to serve a 26,285 population, was victoriously voted in during a special election on December 2, 1958 with a lop-sided seven to one ratio.

As far back as 1951 interest was stirrel in West Monroe to have their own official hospital. But this interest evidently wasn't strong enough, for a hospital bond issue voted on that year failed.

But this failure set the cogs in place to start wheels rolling for the now, beautifully planned, four-story structure which is expected to be completed in October of next year.

1ST COMMISSION

In 1951 the Ouachita Parish Police Jury appointed the first hospital commission that the west-side city ever had — a five member group including the late Dr. Glenn Gallaspy as chairman; Judge Jesse Heard, acting vice chairman, and local businessmen members Fred Bennett, Fred Riser and Tom Hicks.

At the same time, the police jury also created an independent political subdivision and hospital service district for ward five, the second step in the ladder towards construction of the institution.

After failure of the 1951 bond issue, which was voted on along with several city ordinances, the commission became dormant and little activity was found on the seemingly dead issue.

But sleeping dogs would not stay alseep, thanks to the Lions club with its some 90-odd membership and the chamber of commerce.

In July, 1958, the Lions began an extensive sale of light bulbs to raise money to be used for the special election necessary to vote on a bond issue. The Chamber of Commerce took over this issue as a project, enlisting the aif of all civic clubs in selling decals bearing "Ward Five Hospital Booster" to raise money for the special election.

About 3,500 decals were sold during the five - month campaign and money was finally raised to defray the expenses for the election.

Not only did the civic clubs turn out in force to aid in this worthy cause, but almost all the ministers west of the river actively worked for the hospital.

MACHINE WORKING

With a mighty campaign machine now operating smoothly, a notice was issued by the hospital commission, still being served by the same original five members, calling a public meeting of interested citizens and taxpayers to discuss the financing and construction of a hospital for ward five.

The proclamation, issued October 24, 1959, called for consideration and action with respect to making application to the State Bond and Tax Board for consent and authority to hold a special election and to take action with respect to ordering and calling for the special election.

With the Chamber of Commerce under the direction of George Wylie, acting as a hub for what has been termed the most well-organized campaigns in the city's history, almost 40 per cent of the eligible voters turned out for the election. Their approval was shown in a 1,493 to 198 popular vote count in favor of the issue.

This issue, consisting of two propositions, called for the issuance of $1,200,000 in bonds for the purpose of constructing the hospital.

The remaining $1 million was to come from the federal agency — Hill-Burton funds. But before Hill-Burton funds could be acquired, a new hospital district had to be created. The existing district, created by the 1951 police jury, was re-arranged to meet Hill-Burton requirements and the federal agency was slated to match the $1 million amount raised by the passage of the bond issue.

The election propositions called for the passage of a 2½ mill property tax to run for 30 years for the purpose of acquiring land and constructing the hospital. The second proposition called for the passage of a one-half mill tax to run some five years, beginning in 1959 for maintenance.

With the consent of the ward five voters, machinery moved on at a rapid pace for the dream that was now almost a reality. The administration of the hospital was the next problem to be disposed of, and an answer to this was found in the Methodist Church.

The Methodist Board of Hospitals and Homes, located at Chicago, Ill., agreed to accept a lease for the operation of the hospital. According to Judge Heard, now chairman of the hospital commission, this lease will be drafted and signed when the hospital is near completion, and will more than likely be a 99-year lease. The administration of the hospital will be similar to that of the St. Francis hospital, but definite plans are not laid.

SITE CHOSEN

The next step in the mighty ladder of success for the ward five hospital was the selection of a site. The present location at the southeast corner of the McMillan Road-Thomas Street intersection was chosen from some 17 sites which were under consideration. The selected spot was one that was originally pointed out by former City Planner Dan S. Martin as being a good one, since it would be accessible from the Natchitoches Road, from Seventh Street, U. S. Highway 80 and the new super Inter-state 20 highway.

The site was chosen on April 19, 1959 and is a 700-fot square of 11.7 acres of land. It was endorsed by the State Department of Hospitals two days after selection.

Bonds for the hospital were advertised for sale in May of last year and dated July 1, 1959. These bonds, with interest not to exceed five per cent per annum, were to be recallable in 15 years. The federal money to be used in this project was to be made available in three or four payments, the first one to be made after 25 per cent of the structure had been completed.

According to hospital commission members, which now includes Hugh Balfour replacing Dr. Gallaspy as a member, the first payment will be made in the near future, because work on the structure has moved right along and workmen are now preparing to lay the cement for the second floor of the building.

Bids for the building of the hospital were opened and awarded June 17 of this year. As low bidder, Jesse F. Heard and Sons of West Monroe copped the bid and construction is to be finished, according to the contract, within 430 calendar days from the beginning.

Architect Bueford Jacka awarded the architectural work in April, 1959, drew up the plans with William, Wiener - Morgan and O'Neal of Shreveport to act as the consulting architectural firm.

The $2 million edifice will be a T-shaped building facing north on McMillan Road and will include 60 single and 20 double rooms with a total of 100 beds. Administration plans for the organization are not known at the present time.

THE LAYOUT

According to architect Jacka, detailed plans call for an administration wing on the first floor in the front containing a library conference room, general business office, admitting, director and assistant director's offices; a nurses' director's office; a cashier's booth and a medical records room. The first floor will also contain two emergency operating rooms and a physical therapy room with exercise space and a leg and arm bath; plus a morgue with autopsy equipment and a laboratory wing.

The laboratory wing will feature separate labs for chemistry, hematology, bacteriology, a blood bank, tissue room, pathologist's office and washing and sterile room.

Also housed in this wing will be the radiology rooms (two rooms equipped with X-ray machines); a pharmacy that will serve each floor by dumb waiter and a doctor's lounge.

The back of the T on the first floor will contain the chapel, an all-electric kitchen and dietician's office with a cafeteria that will seat 75 persons at a time. Also housed in the back of the T will be the employee's lockers and a linen and sewing room with storage closets.

On the first floor will also be a lobby and waiting room and two elevators to serve all four floors, with space for a third if needed.

The ambulance entrance will be near the emergency operating rooms.

Jacka pointed out that the second, third and fourth floor will be nursing floors, and that while the front of the T will be four floors, high, the back of it will be only two stories, stopping at the second floor level.

Each nursing loor will house two private suites containing a full bath, with one of each of the suites also housing a private sitting room. Each nursing floor will also have a nursing station, an electric cardiagraph room and basal metabolism room, patient rooms, one examination room, clean and dirty utility pantries, storage rooms and at least four private baths on each of these floors.

The second floor, also to be termed the maternity floor will have an operating suite consisting of three major operating rooms and a five-bed recovery room plus one private recovery room; a cytoscopy room which is a special operating room with an X-ray machine; the delivery suite including two delivery rooms; three labor rooms; and two nurseries complete with 12 bassinets in each and central sterile plus an isolation suspect nursery.

Instead of having only four private baths, the second floor will feature six private showers and closets and linen storage.

Jacka said that the only difference in the second floor and the other two nursing floors is that in place of the six private showers, the third and fourth floors will have two institutional baths and two showers. These floors will contain only nursing stations, patient rooms, one examination room per floor, clean and dirty utility pantries, storage rooms and EKG and BMR rooms.

He added that there will be one mobile X-ray machine that can be carried to any floor where needed. Besides this, Jacka pointed out that in the future, two more floors could be added to the front of the hospital giving an approximate 70 more beds to the 100 beds that the present plans call for.

He also pointed out that there are no wards on any floor and that there will be a day waiting room (originally called solariums) on each floor.

Public parking has been provided for in the plans with space in the front. Doctor's parking will be found at the ambulance entrance side while parking for the employees is planned for the rear and side.

The laundry and heating and coiling units are to be housed in a small separate structure at the rear of the building, and the hospital will maintain the same year-round temperature.

The five-man hospital commission, which is slated to meet Dec. 23, are now making plans to name the "dream come true" hospital. Judge Heard, commission chairman, said that already some 17 names have been suggested for the ward five "baby." These include such names as Trinity Hospital, Filhoil Hospital, Bowmar Hospital, Lazarre Hospital, Washitaw Hospital, Anilco Hospital, Silver Hospital, Silverwater Hospital, Miro Hospital, Bellvue Medical Center, St. Luke's Hospital, The Good Samaritan and The Good Samaritan Hospital, Samaritan Community Hospital, Glenwood Hospital, Samaritan Hospital, Hope General Hospital, Highland General Hospital, Grace General Hospital, Faith General Hospital, Harmony Hospital and Covenant General Hospital.

Commission members explained that these names came from various sources, some were historical regarding the city and others regional.

IN CRIME CASES

Courts In Germany May Try Soldiers

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) —West Germany and the United States are nearing agreement on a new status of forces agreement which would put Americans serving here under nominal German criminal jurisdiction, according to informed sources.

Similar agreements will also be concluded shortly with other nations whose troops are stationed in Germany — Britain, France, Canada, Belgium, Holland and Denmark — the sources added.

The agreements will mean that German courts will have the right to try any allied serviceman or dependent who commits a crime on German soil — even though the crime may have been committed against a person of the same nationality on a military reservation.

In practice, the sources said, German courts will almost always waive the right to try the person involved, and turn him or her over to military justice. But the German government is anxious that the principle be established that an Allied soldier may be tried by a German court if the case is "of major interest to German administrative justice."

The new agreement will cover not only criminal cases involving Allied soldiers, but also other cases. For instance German police will theoretically have control of the recording of American births, enforcing support by servicemen of their illegitimate children and of giving German customs officials the right to check records of what is bought and sold in Army post exchanges and commissaries.

Under present rules German police cannot arrest soldiers or civilians carrying military identification cards. They can only take them in custody pending the arrival of military police, who then take over the case.

In recent years the Allied forces have tried to meet German justice half way by waiving the right to try cases in which the Germans have shown interest. Most celebrated case was the July, 1959 trial of Mrs. Emma Lee Cheaves of Bainbridge, Ga., who was sentenced to 15 months imprisonment by a German court for the murder of her husband.

Mrs. Cheaves stabbed her husband to death after an argument about his infidelity. Her sentence was suspended by the German court on condition she did not appeal.

German courts generally tend to be more lenient with Allied soldiers and civilians than a military court would be. Legal officials say this is a result of the difference between the legal codes of the various countries rather than of a conscious desire on the part of German courts to lean over backwards in being fair to Allied personnel.

Court jurisdiction for American servicemen overseas has been a tough problem for the U. S. government since the war.

In the first years of the occupation, there was no question of putting U.S. forces members before the courts of the conquered countries. But as Germany and Japan regained their sovereignty, demands grew for jurisdiction, particularly for off-duty offenses involving nationals of the country. The military was slow to accede.

NATO Meet Is Proposed On Problems

PARIS (AP)—Prosperous West Germany called Saturday for a NATO summit conference in the spring to sort out a growing tangle of alliance problems largely resulting from America's dollar drain.

Defense Minister Franz Josef Strauss unexpectedly tossed this proposal into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's ministerial meeting wrestling now with financial problems and the threat of the Soviet Union's growing nuclear might.

His suggestion would give other Western chiefs of government a chance to confer with John F. Kennedy after the new American president has assumed office and got his administration running.

Strauss' move came after a spokesman for the outgoing Eisenhower administration stressed that some of the financial burden of the common defense must be lifted from the shoulders of the United States.

Defense Secretary Thomas G. Gates Jr., called a halt to free distribution of U.S. military equipment to Britain, France, West Germany and Luxembourg. This amounted to $30 million a year for Britain and less than that for the others.

Gates repeated warnings of Secretary of State Christian A. Herter that the dollar must be protected and urged wealthier Western European nations to buy arms from American production lines.

Gates pointed out that the future defense of the Atlantic Alliance depends in considerable measure on expanding American "military space and scientific programs" which are costing tremendous sums of money.

He added that the United States, therefore, is unable "to continue indefinitely to provide military equipment on a grant basis" to those members of the alliance now well enough off to buy their own arms.

The United States already has put forward a proposal to give NATO its own nuclear striking force, based on 180 Polaris missiles costing a million dollars each.

These missiles would be deployed in five nuclear submarines assigned by the United States and aboard an unspecified number of surface ships. Other members of the alliance would have to put up a large sum of money to finance this system.

50 Captives Rescued By U. N. Troops

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI) — The United Nations announced Saturday that a U.N. service troop company — composed of Nigerian chauffeurs, clerks, and cooks—stormed a prison held by a superior Congolese army unit and forced them to free a 50-member Austrian medical team.

A U.N. spokesman said one Nigerian was killed and three wounded in the six-hour battle Friday in Bukavu, capital of Kivu Province. One of the wounded was a British lieutenant. The spokesman said there were "at least" 10 Congolese casualties. All 10 were believed killed.

The U.N. troop assault was ordered after the Congolese refused to release members of the newly arrived U.N. hospital unit they captured Thursday. The Congolese had claimed the Austrians were merely Belgians in disguise.

In another development, Congolese President Joseph Kasavubu announced he would go Monday to Coquilhatville where Congolese troops were reported massing for an invasion of Oriental Province, a stronghold of supporters of deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Reports circulated in Leopoldville that strongman Col. Joseph Mobutu was building up Congolese forces in Coquilhatville for the possible move on Stanleyville, capital of Oriental Province.

The U.N. spokesman said Congolese troops in Bukavu opened fire Friday afternoon when Nigerian soldiers approached the prison where the Austrians were being held. The Nigerians did not immediately return the fire although one of their men was wounded.

The Congolese brought in reinforcements while the colonel commanding the Nigerian U.N. troops called for a two-phase operation under which his force would encircle the prison and clear the jail area.

When the Nigerians moved in for the second time the Congolese, holding high ground, opened stiff fire on them with four heavy machine guns. "These were dealt with," the Nigerian commander reported back to the U.N.

NEW YORK (AP) — Three French plays in new translation have been acquired for New York production by Arthur Cantor, co-sponsor of "The Tenth Man" and "All the Way Home."

The three are "Dust in Your Eyes" and "Gladiator's Millions," both by Gaston Labiche, and "The Magic Goblet," by Fablist Jean de la Fontaine. Emanuel Wax has made the translations.

IN CRIME CASES

Courts In Germany May Try Soldiers

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) —West Germany and the United States are nearing agreement on a new status of forces agreement which would put Americans serving here under nominal German criminal jurisdiction, according to informed sources.

Similar agreements will also be concluded shortly with other nations whose troops are stationed in Germany — Britain, France, Canada, Belgium, Holland and Denmark — the sources added.

The agreements will mean that German courts will have the right to try any allied serviceman or dependent who commits a crime on German soil — even though the crime may have been committed against a person of the same nationality on a military reservation.

In practice, the sources said, German courts will almost always waive the right to try the person involved, and turn him or her over to military justice. But the German government is anxious that the principle be established that an Allied soldier may be tried by a German court if the case is "of major interest to German administrative justice."

The new agreement will cover not only criminal cases involving Allied soldiers, but also other cases. For instance German police will theoretically have control of the recording of American births, enforcing support by servicemen of their illegitimate children and of giving German customs officials the right to check records of what is bought and sold in Army post exchanges and commissaries.

Under present rules German police cannot arrest soldiers or civilians carrying military identification cards. They can only take them in custody pending the arrival of military police, who then take over the case.

In recent years the Allied forces have tried to meet German justice half way by waiving the right to try cases in which the Germans have shown interest. Most celebrated case was the July, 1959 trial of Mrs. Emma Lee Cheaves of Bainbridge, Ga., who was sentenced to 15 months imprisonment by a German court for the murder of her husband.

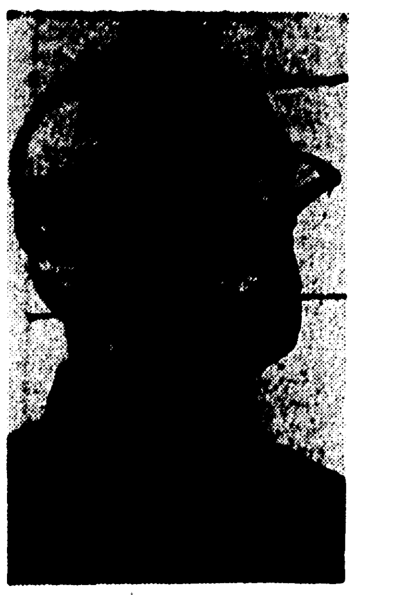
Floods Often Plagued Early Trenton



O. B. REGISTER

In his 73 years of life, O. B. Register, Jr., of 1519 Trenton Street, West Monroe, a former alderman, and retired grocer, has seen many changes.

His recollections run back to the days when horses and boats were the primary transportation forces, and flood water encroached often on the community now known as the City of West Monroe.

Register selected a large time-yellowed photograph from his collection of materials about the early years in this area.

The picture, taken before Register's time, April, 1874, showed the main street of Trenton, a town which occupied a section of what is now West Monroe. The street, Claiborne, was flooded, and there were a number of persons in boats.

FRAME BUILDINGS

On each side of the street were the main business establishments, one-story frame buildings. On the front of one was a sign, "O. B. Register," designating the general merchandise store run by Register's father.

Next door to the general store was a business operated by Uriah Millsaps, an early-day business and civic leader. Another building had the name of A. F. Flournoy on it.

A wooden walkway suspended above water level provided access from one side of the street to the other.

Register said that in early days when flood waters came they would remain two or three weeks or perhaps a month, "because we didn't have the drainage then that we have now."

In connection with high water problems, Register said, "In the old days farmers would come to a hill on the outskirts of West Monroe, camp there, and take boats to town, do their shopping, and return to camp."

In the days of early Trenton, which had its main business section about two or three blocks from where Register lives now, river transportation played an important part in the life of the community.

STEAMBOATS

"Steamboats would come up the river and unload merchandise for my father's store," said Register.

His father stocked a broad range of items from groceries to plows and general merchandise, he said.

Stores in that early time in Trenton lacked the frills and fancy items found in many modern establishments.

Among the taste tempting items, Register said, were "ginger cakes, crackers, stick candy and bucket candy, no fancy chocolates or anything like that. Crackers came in wooden boxes."

He continued, "There were lots of things you could measure by counting out like crackers if they wanted small quantities. There was an old beam scales for weighing, but no scales like we have today."

Early day grocery stores had nothing to compare to the present frozen food displays or meat counters.

DIVIDED

Register explained, "We didn't have fresh meats, just smoked meat like bacon or ham. When cold weather came people would kill a beef or a hog and would divide it among their neighbors, who later would kill animals and divide the meat with others."

There were few canned meats in those days, and not many canned vegetables because the people canned such foods at home. Register said that sometimes a little fresh meat was available at stores in Monroe, "but in hot weather we just didn't have any."

The stores in early-day Trenton went heavy on credit business, the pioneer resident said.

"They carried the farmers from one crop to another. In the spring when he started plowing they would furnish the farmer and then in the fall if he made a good crop, he would pay up. And if he didn't have a good crop the merchant would carry him over to another year."

There were fewer factory-made clothes sold in those days.

Said Register, "We sold a lot of piece goods, dress goods, ginghams. People on the farms made most of their clothing like overalls, dresses and shirts. The town people bought some ready made clothes. I was pretty young in those days when my father ran a store, so I can't remember all those details."

"When I started in the grocery business," Register continued, "Trenton still had one or two little stores, but it was just about dwindled out. I opened up a grocery store for myself in 1921, and continued until 1946 when I retired."

REPLACED

Residences have replaced the stores and business houses of early day Trenton. Some homes in the vicinity of what once was Trenton are located on what used to be duck ponds and brakes. There were plenty of possums, coons and squirrels in the vicinity of the Registers' home. He used to hunt ducks, but only what he needed for food.

"People used to hunt a few ducks and come on in," he said, in explaining there was considerable moderation in hunting practices around here.

As Register looked through a stack of early day material collected by his uncle, the late Hugh White, he observed, "Back in those days, most things were written with pens. We didn't have any typewriters around."

Telephones were a rarity, too. As a result the written and printed word was used more extensively.

His late uncle collected a number of funeral notices from those early times. Register displayed several. He said the funeral homes had them printed up and posted in a convenient spot so the people could read them.

West Monroe has changed vastly from those early days, said Register, and the heavy auto traffic is also in marked contrast to the times when the horse was the primary means of overland travel.

"People had horses, buggies and surreys, and usually there was a stable in town where you could hire a horse and buggy or have horses fed and bedded down," the pioneer resident remembered. "There was mighty little traveling in those days, and we didn't take vacations. Some places were inaccessible by horse and wagon, and it would take a week by boat to make a trip that could be made now in a few hours.

TRAVEL SLOW

"It would take nearly a day to make a 15 to 20-mile trip by horse, because the people didn't beat their horses in those days. They thought as much of them as they did their families. They let them trot and jig along."

Coal oil lamps lighted most of the homes in early Trenton, and there weren't many street lamps, and no paved streets. He remembered how in Monroe, DeSiard Street was surfaced with wooden blocks, which later were replaced with bricks.

The early water supply came from wells and cisterns. He added:

"Rain water was caught in the cisterns in the winter time and would last almost all summer for washing and drinking. When the first water works was established in the West Monroe area there usually was a hydrant in the back yards, and none in the houses. I remember as a boy how I used to bring water from the river (Ouachita). In those days the river was clean and there was no sewerage. It was a clear, running branch. We used to catch lots of buffalo and cats and game fish, too, in those days."

Register served six years as an alderman in West Monroe, two years in the administration of Mayor Bob Browning, and four years with Mayor C. C. Bell Sr.

In World War One he saw front-line duty with the Army infantry in France for seven months.

He and his wife reside in a house not far from where Register spent his childhood.

A daughter, Mrs. Octave Devereaux, resides in the Philippines, where her husband is a captain working with the Air Force.

The couple's only son, Billy, was killed in World War Two, in a plane testing accident in North Carolina. He was a lieutenant in the Marine Corps.

Shippingport, Pa.

Pioneer In Atomic Energy

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

SHIPPINGPORT, Pa. (AP) — Alongside the blacktop road, a sign greets speeding autos: "Shippingport—pioneer river port in olden days."

Down the slope, in Beaver Valley, flows the Ohio River, whose waters moved barges and boats to bring first and modest fame to this hamlet of scattered frame houses, and a few of brick and stone, cuddled in the hill country of western Pennsylvania.

Now, in another century, Shippingport's 400-plus residents can claim new fame as a pioneer in atomic energy.

For here on a bank of the river a mile or so from the nostalgic sign is the nation's first large-scale nuclear power plant producing electric power for civilian use.

UNLOCKED

Just three years ago Sunday, energy unlocked from the hearts of uranium atoms began sending electricity surging along power lines to light homes in the greater Pittsburgh area, to spin cake mixers and give breath to vacuum cleaners, to run lathes and machines of industry.

Despite a few early and woolly fears of some residents, this electricity behaves no differently from that born by burning coal or oil.

Pioneer though it is, the Shippingport atomic plant itself cannot win the ultimate goal of producing electricity at costs equal to that from coal or oil.

Here, coal is simply too cheap and abundant to make the steam to drive turbines and spin generators. The reactor in fact rests atop a rich coal field.

But Shippingport is attaining its original goals—to demonstrate practicality and safety of atomic power, and through research help find means of making it competitive with fossil fuels.

PRODUCTION

In its young history, it has produced more than 617 million kilowatt hours of electricity—enough for all the needs of a city of 250,000 homes for every hour of 14 months.

And it's been a mighty obedient genie, posing no serious maintenance problems, report George Oldham, superintendent for Duquesne Light Co., and George Hardigg of Westinghouse Electric Corp.

It can be started up or shut down faster than any coal-burning generating station in the power system of which it is a part.

In safety, it has run without hitch. Not a single workman has been over-exposed to radiation, nor has any dangerous amount of radiation been released into the air, or into the Ohio River water which partially shields the huge atomic reactor.

Technicians, Oldham adds, treat their new job with respect but not fear—as do men working on ordinary and dangerous "hot lines."

The reactor's vital "seed" of enriched uranium has been replaced once. Its uranium heart operated for more hours than had been anticipated before needing replacement. A far more efficient uranium core has been designed, to be installed in 1961 or 1962.

One out of 96,000 metal-jacketed fuel elements is suspected to have sprung a leak—a pinpoint hole at that—whereas design allowed for 1,000 such leaks without interfering with operation.

Volumes of facts and data have poured out of operating experience and research to aid in building future reactors.

"People in Beaver Valley think it's a great thing, and are proud it's here," says James March, publisher of the News-Chronicle in nearby Beaver Falls. "At first a few cranks raised a cry about terrible dangers, but that died out."

In 1945, when A-bombs first exploded, came rosy hopes that controlled atomic fission could soon bring abundant and cheap electric power from the heat of splitting atoms.

In an ever-growing, energy-hungry world, coal and oil and natural gas supplies must one day be exhausted. Optimists foresaw atoms substituting quickly, saving nature's fuels for other uses, or prolonging their supply.

The atom was not so easily harnessed. It called for a difficult new technology; radioactivity released by fission demands strict and expensive shielding and safety protections; questions rose about the most efficient types of reactions; reserves of fossil fuels were found to be more abundant than once estimated.

Now there are confident predictions atomic energy can compete with fossil fuels in certain areas at least by 1968 or 1970. The confidence stems from research and development by the Atomic Energy Commission, utility companies, and manufacturers of atomic reactors.

At least eight promising types of reactors are in the running.

Shadow Of Electric Chair Looms In Youth's Future

EDITOR'S NOTE — For most American boys, the problems of age 16 are confined to a giddy world bounded by grades on one side and girls on the other with an undecided future shimmering somewhere in between. Salvador Agron's future is fixed: death in the electric chair.

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP)—There are people who wish Salvador Agron was never born.

They say, "They call us spics because of his kind."

For New York's Puerto Ricans, he symbolizes the worst failures among a people struggling to build a new and better life.

This slight, black-haired, fuzz-cheeked 17-year-old is a boy his mother calls "Sal" and others call "Dracula." He is in Sing Sing. He is to die in the electric chair for committing a bloody, senseless killing of two 16-year-old boys.

"I don't care if I burn — my mother could watch me."

What kind of boy could say such a thing?

BEGINNING

He was born in Asilo de Ancianos, a home for the aged, in Mayaguez, a city of nearly 60,000 on the west end of Puerto Rico. His mother, Esmeralda Rodriques Agron, worked in the home as a domestic. The rearing of Salvador and his sister, Aureo, was largely out of her hands.

Esmeralda remembers the day of his birth as being a warm one, but the date escapes her. It was either April 29, Aug. 28, or Oct. 1, 1943. Those are the dates on different records.

He hated school. He buried himself in the sand and cried: "Now I am dead, I cannot go to school." When he was dragged there by the ear, the cry changed to "No one loves me."

Then one day, when he was 7, he saw his mama put on a new blue dress and a new three-quarter length red spring coat, and slip a pretty pleated dress on Aureo, and pack two shiny imitation leather valises and get in a car and go away. He was left standing in the road, crying. They went to San Juan—and then New York.

"Sal screamed all the time," a cousin says. "For four, five months, he screamed, 'Mama, mama!' he ran around like wild. He wouldn't eat, maybe for days, then eat everything, stealing from the plates of others. In the night, it was terrible. 'Mama, mama!' he screamed."

In New York, Esmeralda met Carlos Gonzalez.

Carlos was the man who courted her in Mayaguez, after she divorced Gumercindo Agron, the man who married her when she was 13.

"I did not want to marry Carlos," she says, "but a woman is no good alone."

She gave up her Roman Catholic faith and married Gonzalez, a stern, proud, self-ordained Pentecostal minister who prays on his knees six hours a day and says, "God called me to lead the people."

OBJECTED

Esmeralda wanted to send for Salvador, but Gonzalez objected. "This is a bad place for boys. It turns them wild." Esmeralda persisted and a one-way plane ticket, for $23.86, was sent to Sal. When he arrived at Idlewild, with only the clothes on his back, he found his sister and mother and the strange man.

"Papa, papa," Salvador cried, putting his arms around Gonzalez.

But, as Esmeralda says, Gonzalez was not much of a man for such displays.

"He was too strict," Aureo says. "One time Sal and me made up our minds to kill him."

They moved into the first of many cold water flats.

Each day, Esmeralda went to her job in the hat factory and Gonzalez to his in a textile factory. "Stay home. Do not go out," they warned the children. Aureo and Salvador obeyed, huddling at the window and watching the world go by.

TEASED

One day, some boys teased Salvador, saying Aureo was his girl and that they did forbidden things together. Salvador ran into the street—never again to be content with leaning on a window sill.

It was better on the streets. There were rooftops to explore and peek at young lovers and learn about grown-up sex. The roofs were launching pads for bags of water or garbage to dump on "Americans"—meaning anyone not Spanish — walking the street.

On the stoops, he stood in open-mouthed awe and listened to the brave talk of older boys about rumbles with Italians and Irish and Negroes. He heard the roll call of gangs—Heart Kings, Dragons, the Enchanters. He laughed wildly as girls in tight toreador pants did outrageous fox trots.

Put in school—in the first grade at 8—he learned the ruse of raising his arm for permission to go to the washroom. Then he'd run away. He was afraid to go home. And then coming home very late, he'd catch hell from Carlos Gonzalez.

The truant officer chased him—and so did Gonzalez. At the age of 10, with the family's consent, Salvador went to a special school for troubled boys. He was no worse or better than the others. He got the regular counseling of a psychologist and, for a time, special therapy of a psychiatrist.

The day before he turned 13, he came home. Aureo was gone. She hated Gonzalez so much she got married at 14 to make a home of her own. Gonzalez insisted Puerto Rico was a better place for Salvador and packed him off to his natural father. There are no fighting gangs in Puerto Rico, but Salvador brought the big city tricks with him and got into trouble. Papa Agron sent him back to New York.

In the dreary, dead-end Brooklyn factory-tenement street where they now lived, Gonzalez had his store-front Pentecostal Church messenger of Christ No. 1. He wanted Salvador to pray and to listen to his sermons, but sometimes Salvador would misbehave and Gonzalez would be enraged.

Salvador, an outcast, joined other outcasts. Sometimes they had a name, like the Vampires.

Away from home, that was where there was a life worth living. There were easy touches like "Bien Pagada" the good payer—a homosexual who was generous with those he favored. There was stuff to make a man giddy, beer or sometimes something stronger. There were the pushers with heroin and the guys with pot—marijuana. There were girls, too. But the craziest, wildest, best times were with the guys, the Vampires.

He was with some of them, and some guys from the Heart Kings and the Dragons, the night of Aug. 29. He was now 16, according to police records. But if the date of Oct. 1 is accepted as his birthdate, that meant he was 15.

BIG TALK

There was bigtalk. The guys — some 20 altogether — were going get even with some Irish and Italian guys for beating up a pal. And they were going to get the Italian who tried to sell pot to one guy's mother.

Salvador put on a black cape with a red lining—and became the figure of Dracula. He had a 12¼ inch dagger. One other had an umbrella. Another, a studded garrison belt. Still others, pipe lengths.

A few minutes after midnight, they invaded a playground off Tenth Avenue on Manhattan's West Side. They were after "American" enemies They found some neighborhood boys and girls, but not the ones they were seeking Salvador, off by himself for a moment, was jeered. "They were booing, booing," he says. All the aches of the unloved, all the rage of the unwanted, apparently set him in motion. There were coarse words — and then mayhem.

MAYHEM

The tapered blade of Salvador's dagger went quick and deep into Anthony Krzesinski's chest, piercing his lung and heart; it drove into the back of Robert Young, as his arms were pinned by other boys; it plunged into the stomach of Ewald Riemer.

Krzesinski ran a race with death, got to the safety of a tenement hallway across the street, and died there. Young ran, too, with blood flowing from the 7-inch tunnel left by the dagger. He got into a flat in the adjoining building — and died. Riemer lay in agony on the ground, writhing to avoid the stomping feet of his attackers. He lived to face Salvador in court.

What does Salvador think about his act, about the boys he killed? His answer shows the twisted law by which he lived.

"The fellows that got killed shouldn't be in the park at 12 o'clock at night. They should be in bed. Maybe God wanted them, so that if it was going to happen, it was going to happen. It happened."

The atom was not so easily harnessed. It called for a difficult new technology; radioactivity released by fission demands strict and expensive shielding and safety protections; questions rose about the most efficient types of reactors; reserves of fossil fuels were found to be more abundant than once estimated.

Now there are confident predictions atomic energy can compete with fossil fuels in certain areas at least by 1968 or 1970.

The confidence stems from research and development by the Atomic Energy Commission, utility companies, and manufacturers of atomic reactors.

At least eight promising types of reactors are in the running.

Shadow Of Electric Chair Looms In Youth's Future

EDITOR'S NOTE — For most American boys, the problems of age 16 are confined to a giddy world bounded by grades on one side and girls on the other with an undecided future shimmering somewhere in between. Salvador Agron's future is fixed: death in the electric chair.

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP)—There are people who wish Salvador Agron was never born.

They say, "They call us spics because of his kind."

For New York's Puerto Ricans, he symbolizes the worst failures among a people struggling to build a new and better life.

This slight, black-haired, fuzz-cheeked 17-year-old is the boy his mother calls "Sal" and others call "Dracula." He is in Sing Sing. He is to die in the electric chair for committing a bloody, senseless killing of two 16-year-old boys.

"I don't care if I burn — my mother could watch me."

What kind of boy could say such a thing?

BEGINNING

He was born in Asilo de Ancianos, a home for the aged, in Mayaguez, a city of nearly 60,000 on the west end of Puerto Rico. His mother, Esmeralda Rodriguez Agron, worked in the home as a domestic. The rearing of Salvador and his sister, Aureo, was largely out of her hands.

Esmeralda remembers the day of his birth as being a warm one, but the date escapes her. It was either April 29, Aug. 28, or Oct. 1, 1943. Those are the dates on different records.

He hated school. He buried himself in the sand and cried: "Now I am dead, I cannot go to school." When he was dragged there by the ear, the cry changed to "No one loves me."

Then one day, when he was 7, he saw his mama put on a new blue dress and a new three-quarter length red spring coat, and slip a pretty pleated dress on Aureo, and pack two shiny imitation leather valises and get in a car and go away. He was left standing in the road, crying. They went to San Juan—and then New York.

"Sal screamed all the time," a cousin says. "For four, five months, he screamed, 'Mama, mama!' he ran around like wild. He wouldn't eat, maybe for days, then eat everything, stealing from the plates of others. In the night, it was terrible. 'Mama, mama!' he screamed."

In New York, Esmeralda met Carlos Gonzalez.

Carlos was the man who courted her in Mayaguez, after she divorced Gumercindo Agron, the man who married her when she was 13.

"I did not want to marry Carlos," she says, "but a woman is no good alone."

She gave up her Roman Catholic faith and married Gonzalez, a stern, proud, self-ordained Pentecostal minister who prays on his knees six hours a day and says, "God called me to lead the people."

OBJECTED

Esmeralda wanted to send for Salvador, but Gonzalez objected. "This is a bad place for boys. It turns them wild." Esmeralda persisted and a one-way plane ticket, for $23.86, was sent to Sal. When he arrived at Idlewild, with only the clothes on his back, he found his sister and mother and the strange man.

"Papa, papa," Salvador cried, putting his arms around Gonzalez.

But, as Esmeralda says, Gonzalez was not much of a man for such displays.

"He was too strict," Aureo says. "One time Sal and me made up our minds to kill him."

They moved into the first of many cold water flats.

Each day, Esmeralda went to her job in the hat factory and Gonzalez to his in a textile factory. "Stay home. Do not go out," they warned the children. Aureo and Salvador obeyed, huddling at the window and watching the world go by.

TEASED

One day, some boys teased Salvador, saying Aureo was his girl and that they did forbidden things together. Salvador ran into the street—never again to be content with leaning on a window sill.

It was better on the streets. There were rooftops to explore and peek at young lovers and learn about grown-up sex. The roofs were launching pads for bags of water or garbage to dump on "Americans"—meaning anyone not Spanish — walking the street.

On the stoops, he stood in openmouthed awe and listened to the brave talk of older boys about rumbles with Italians and Irish and Negroes. He heard the roll call of gangs—Heart Kings, Dragons, the Enchanters. He laughed wildly as girls in tight toreador pants did outrageous fox trots.

Put in school—in the first grade at 8—he learned the ruse of raising his arm for permission to go to the washroom. Then he'd run away. He was afraid to go home. And then coming home very late, he'd catch hell from Carlos Gonzalez.

The truant officer chased him—and so did Gonzalez. At the age of 10, with the family's consent, Salvador went to a special school for troubled boys. He was no worse or better than the others. He got the regular counseling of a psychologist and, for a time, special therapy of a psychiatrist.

The day before he turned 13, he came home. Aureo was gone. She hated Gonzalez so much she got married at 14 to make a home of her own. Gonzalez insisted Puerto Rico was a better place for Salvador and packed him off to his natural father. There are no fighting gangs in Puerto Rico, but Salvador brought the big city tricks with him and got into trouble. Papa Agron sent him back to New York.

In the dreary, dead-end Brooklyn factory-tenement street where they now lived, Gonzalez had his store-front Pentecostal Church messenger of Christ No. 1. He wanted Salvador to pray and to listen to his sermons, but sometimes Salvador would misbehave and Gonzalez would be enraged.

Salvador, an outcast, joined other outcasts. Sometimes they had a name, like the Vampires.

Away from home, that was where there was a life worth living. There were easy touches like "Bien Pagada" the good payer—a homosexual who was generous with those he favored. There was stuff to make a man giddy, beer or sometimes something stronger. There were the pushers with heroin and the guys with pot—marijuana. There were girls, too. But the craziest, wildest, best times were with the guys, the Vampires.

He was with some of them, and some guys from the Heart Kings and the Dragons, the night of Aug. 29. He was now 16, according to police records. But if the date of Oct. 1 is accepted as his birthdate, that meant he was 15.

BIG TALK

There was bigtalk. The guys — some 20 altogether — were going get even with some Irish and Italian guys for beating up a pal. And they were going to get the Italian who tried to sell pot to one guy's mother.

Salvador put on a black cape with a red lining—and became the figure of Dracula. He had a 12¼ inch dagger. One other had an umbrella. Another, a studded garrison belt. Still others, pipe lengths.

A few minutes after midnight, they invaded a playground off Tenth Avenue on Manhattan's West Side. They were after "American" enemies They found some neighborhood boys and girls, but not the ones they were seeking.

Salvador, off by himself for a moment, was jeered. "They were booing, booing," he says. All the aches of the unloved, all the rage of the unwanted, apparently set him in motion. There were coarse words — and then mayhem.

MAYHEM

The tapered blade of Salvador's dagger went quick and deep into Anthony Krzesinski's chest, piercing his lung and heart; it drove into the back of Robert Young, as his arms were pinned by other boys; it plunged into the stomach of Ewald Riemer.

Krzesinski ran a race with death, got to the safety of a tenement hallway across the street, and died there. Young ran, too, with blood flowing from the 7-inch tunnel left by the dagger. He got into a flat in the adjoining building — and died. Riemer lay in agony on the ground, writhing to avoid the stomping feet of his attackers. He lived to face Salvador in court.

What does Salvador think about his act, about the boys he killed? His answer shows the twisted law by which he lived.

"The fellows that got killed shouldn't be in the park at 12 o'clock at night. They should be in bed. Maybe God wanted them, so that if it was going to happen, it was going to happen. It happened."

No Need For New Taxes

The State Legislature now swings into its third successive special session—already designated in some press association dispatches from Baton Rouge as the "tax raising session."

There is no necessity for new taxes in behalf of the segregation fight at this time.

The new law for state educational grants to students attending private sessions cannot require more than dribbles of money for some time to come—perhaps next fall, perhaps never. Most of the New Orleans students remaining away from the two desegregated schools there are attending public schools in nearby St. Bernard Parish and thus are not eligible for state grants.

The Legislature meets in its regular fiscal session in May. At that time it will have a better picture of what the educational grants may cost. Also, it may know by that time whether the grant law is constitutional. If it is not, obviously new taxes are not needed for it.

Further, state revenues will gain a non-recurring windfall of around $10,000,000 during 1961 when payroll withholding of state income tax will mean temporary double payment of this tax to an estimated extent of $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 over 1960 collections plus $3,000,000 permanent increase expected from more complete collections of this tax.

Unfortunately, recent press association dispatches have given the public the impression that the tax angle of this third special session involves taxation only to fight for segregation with tax increases limited to the sales tax.

The call for this session leaves the door open for the Legislature to pass any new tax or tax increase it wishes, and for any purpose. The wording of the tax section of the call is as follows:

"5. To legislate relative to the revenues of the state of Louisiana and particularly to Chapter 2, Title 47, Louisiana Revised Statutes of 1950."

Chapter 2, Title 47 of the Revised Statutes of 1950 is the present sales tax, to which attention especially is called, but the phrase "to legislate relative to the revenues of the state of Louisiana" opens the door to any and all types of taxes or tax increases for any and all purposes.

If new state revenue will regain and retain segregation in Louisiana, we believe that the people as a whole unhesitatingly would be willing to pay it. But new revenue imposed under a cloak of helping segregation without any guarantee that it will give such help-new taxes put over hastily through taking advantage of public racial emotionalism—is quite a different proposition.

If the Legislature sees any way to regain and retain segregation through new tax revenue it should spell this out in clear and certain terms, including specific details of dollars and cents.

If the Legislature plans to use racial emotionalism to put over new taxes or tax increases it well knows would bring statewide public revolt under normal conditions, the public should understand this.

If the Legislature intends to use racial emotionalism simply to get more revenue for more state spending having no direct effect on the segregation fight, it should spell this out also, with complete details as to the need for such revenue.

As of the present, there is no established need for new revenue in connection with the fight to regain and retain segregation except to cover the $14,000 per day expenses of the Legislature itself.

No one believing in segregation, least of all The World, regrets in any way the public money which the Legislature has spent thus far in trying to fulfill its obligation to the people and to keep faith with them on the segregation issue. But there will be much regret and much resentment if the Legislature now uses segregation as a subterfuge for tax-hiking not needed in the segregation fight.

If there are valid reasons why even consideration of this matter should not be postponed until the May fiscal session they should be spelled out completely in every detail.

The Bobby Appointment

If there is one field in which the Chief Executive of government at any level must have personal rein it is in appointment of his "official family," whether it is known as "the Cabinet" or by any other name. A Chief Executive must have, in the high posts immediately around him, officials who are compatible politically, who see eye-to-eye with him on the general philosophies of government, and in whom he can place unlimited trust.

None of this, however, precludes public evaluation of the fitness of those chosen for the posts they are to fill, or of what the effect of their selection may be on the nation or any part of it.

President-elect Kennedy has named his brother, Robert, to be Attorney General. That is his privilege. Unquestionably the two see eye-to-eye. Just as the oldest brother, Joe Kennedy, Jr., who was killed in World War II, was the idol of Jack, the President-elect, so is Jack the idol of Bobby.

And Bobby undoubtedly is the one person President-elect Kennedy trusts above all others. They worked side-by-side in the McClellan Committee Labor Rackets investigation which brought Bobby his greatest fame—as Committee Counsel—and some condemnation for Senator Kennedy as a Committee member who seemed to want to go easy on labor legislation resulting from the Committee investigations.

Robert Kennedy has been criticized as unwilling to give Walter Ruether, a power in the Democratic Party, as tough an investigation as he gave Dave Beck, who had left the Democratic Party in 1952 to support Eisenhower. The Walter Ruether-George Meany labor group claims it "nominated" Senator Kennedy and was a major cog in his election. What could be virtually a "conflict of interests" might develop in any future Departments of Justice procedure directly or indirectly involving labor unions.

Also, if Robert Kennedy, as Attorney General, should find himself involved in critical situations concerning Department of Justice prosecutions in any field, President Kennedy may find himself in embarrassing positions as the brother of the Attorney General. It is a risk which both men could rise above, but it is a needless risk to take. There are plenty of men as worthy—far more worthy—than Robert Kennedy of being United States Attorney General.

The possibility of seeking a "Kennedy Dynasty" unquestionably will be raised critically against the President because of the appointment. The Kennedy family is very much of a clan. It moves as an entity whenever the hopes or desires of any member of it are at stake. It has demonstrated this repeatedly. With one Kennedy as President and one Kennedy as Attorney General, there is still the young brother, "Teddy," who has stated publicly that he looks forward to a political career at the federal level.

The South has an especial interest in this appointment. Robert Kennedy was anathema to most of the South, not only rank and file voters but many political leaders, before his brother's nomination, during the presidential campaign and even afterwards. President-elect Kennedy sneeringly spoke of his ability to be both nominated and elected without help from the South.

After the Democratic convention, Robert Kennedy publicly insulted the South in an interview at Atlanta, Georgia, when he denounced its "religious bigotry." Party leaders of both Alabama and Georgia, reportedly requested that he and candidate Kennedy stay of those states during the campaign. They did.

Robert Kennedy played the tune of "religious bigotry," particularly Southern, throughout the campaign. Candidate Kennedy, in more dignified manner, echoed some parts of his brother's fallacious and at time somewhat repulsively spoken propaganda. Yet, but for the fact that the South itself overrode whatever religious prejudices existed, Richard M. Nixon today would be President-elect.

Even after the election returns were in, Robert Kennedy publicly stated in New York City that the only reason the election was close was because of "religious bigotry," and implied that the South deserves no particular credit for its part in the Kennedy victory.

We hope that, as Attorney General, Robert Kennedy will treat the South exactly as he treats all other parts of the nation on all matters of concern to it, whether racial or otherwise. We hope Jack Kennedy, as President, will follow the same course. But, so far as Attorney General Kennedy is concerned, certainly the South will have no reason to expect anything but the most rigid types of "crack down" in any and all fields of possible federal prosecution on all racial issuse that can be brought into federal courts.

The South itself asked for this by its own votes, and there is no use denying it.

Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Arkansas all were fully aware of the attitude of both Robert Kennedy and John F. Kennedy toward the South as expressed by them, separately or together, during and before the presidential campaign. They were aware of the far more sympathetic viewpoint——the fairer minded viewpoint—of Richard M. Nixon.

But in each instance the people of these states gave clear majorities to Mr. Kennedy and Senator Johnson. Whatever comes as a result must be accepted as self-invited.

Elector Vote Count Vital

Possibility Seen That Kennedy Will Not Get Majority and That House Action May Be Required

Monday, December 19, may prove a critical date in American political history. On that day, the Presidential electors named in the national election November 1 will meet in the fifty states to cast their votes for the next President and Vice President.

Best guess is that Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts will receive a majority of the electorial votes for the Presidency, and Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas will get the same number for the Vice Presidency. If the electors follow the unofficial popular votes cast by their respective states, some of which are being challenged, the Kennedy - Johnson ticket will get a majority of the electoral votes, even through it failed to get a majority of the popular vote.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon and his Republican running mate, John Cabot Lodge, seem perfectly reconciled to this results in several states, particularly Texas and Illinois.

Nevertheless, complications could develop which might result in the failure of the electoral college canvass by states next Monday to definitely name the President and Vice President.

In this event, the final decision would not come until Congress, in joint session January 6, when it receives and records formally the electoral votes, and takes action. Even then, Congress, under existing law, might be prevented from reaching a final decision, since the margin is so close that if several states failed to certify their electors prior to that date, presumably they could not be counted.

What would happen under this circumstance, if it possibly would change the outcome of the election, no one is sure. The Constitutional provision for the election of the President and Vice President by electors selected by individual states, rather than by popular vote, does not specify what Congress should do, when canvassing the electoral votes, in event any state or states failed to certify the electors.

In view of the existing situation, which may very likely be resolved without any major crisis, but could result in another Hayes-Tilden controversy, the necessity for revamping the Constitution and attendant laws dealing with the election of the President and Vice President during the next four years, is, in the opinion of many members of Congress, a very vital one.

Not since Congress was forced to establish a special commission to decide the outcome of the Hayes - Tilden election in 1876, when Republican Rutherford B. Hayes was finally declared the winner over Democrat Samuel J. Tilden by a margin of only 185 to 184 electoral votes, even though Tilden had won in the popular election, has the issue appeared so important.

For several years after the Hayes - Tilden battle, Congress argued over various proposals to revise the electoral college method of electing a President and Vice President, but failed to reach a solution. The 87th Congress, meeting in January, will be asked to do the same.

The proposal which seems likely to have the most support in the coming Congress is very much like that offered by famous Senator Oliver P. Morton of Kentucky in 1887, as a result of the Hayes-Tilden controversy.

Democracy

Monroe, Louisiana

To The Editor:

Some members of the legislature, led by Rep. Mike John Jr. and Rep. Lawrence Gibbs, seek to catechize an L. S. U. professor on Americanism. They set up their own definition of Americanism and rush to the totalitarian insistence of "Conform or be Fired," "Dissent is Treason," "Deviation is Disloyalty."

This arrogant move to stifle freedom of thought reprisal ought to be met with the contempt it deserves. The right of an individual to differ with and criticize the actions of political leaders and government is fundamental to our American liberties. According to Webster, citizenship iss "the status of being a citizen." It does not have the same meaning as the word "subject," which suggests a person who is dominated, controlled, and ruled by a dictatorial authority. Instead, a citizen is a member of a state, one who has the opportunity to share his opinions and to take an active part in the activities of the government. He may not always agree with the majority, but he can disagree as long as he lives under free political institutions.

We Americans have seen the grosser forms of totalitarianism in both fascism and communism. In our fever to achieve security against the trust of communist imperialism, many unwittingly would invite totalitarianism in another guise to rule over us. We need to remember that patriotism which defies the state in the end destroys the state. It makes for the arrogance of assuming the state has the right to be a law onto itself.

These men would be better representatives of the people they serve if they would work to create a healthy and dynamic free society which will beat thought-controlled and regimented communist society in every human endeavor.

Sincerely Yours
Ben Oliphint

Burden Of World

To The Editor:

As I recall in 1952 when General Eisenhower ran for president he said the United States could not carry the burden of the world on our backs.

However, after, he was elected by an over whelming majority, instead of the conservative platform he ran on he went modern Republican. I think the definition for the liberal Democrat they are extremely liberal with the taxpayers' money. The modern Republican believes they can keep on spending more money than they take in and yet keep our economy strong.

Now almost after eight years in the presidents office he has come to realize the cold facts of what he said in 1952. The nations who have become prosperous through the help of the U. S. tax payers dollars that helped them to recover from the smouldering ruin of war.

Now when this nation's economy is in serious trouble and we appeal to them to share more of the burden the most we seem to get is moral support which does not lessen our burden or pay debts.

And while Senator Kennedy and Vice President Nixon were running for President they talked of more spending despite the fact that as fast as we help build up an un-developed country the Communists take over through infiltration, subversion and sabotage. While there is no real effort on the part of our government to get them out of the United States, although they have been warned of the danger we face.

Both Senator Kennedy and Vice President Nixon pointed with pride to the progress made under the Democrat and the Republican administrations. Neither of them pointed with pride to the national debt of 193 billions of dollars which was accumulated under both parties that future generations will have to pay with interest. We should warn the younger generation they do not get something for nothing and that the Government first takes it from them and only gives what is left after spreading their money around the world and taking their cut here at home.

On 'Alan Shivers'

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

With reference to some recent correspondence through this department of the Morning World, on the part of a fictitious "Alan Shivers," myself and, then, last Sunday, Mrs. Charles Rogers, of Girard, I think it is well that we should keep the record straight:

Certainly, constructive criticism of public officials, in the course of our discussions of public affairs, is not only desirable, but essential to the effective functioning of our form of government. No responsible citizen would argue to the contrary on that point.

But, public misrepresentation is entirely another matter. And anonymous destructive public misrepresentation is wholly indefensible.

That was the thesis of my recent letter to the Editor. I hope, of course — and believe — that my remarks were generally so interpreted.

May the spirit that is Christmas enrich your life and the lives of all your readers.

Carrier Succeeds

To the Editor:

I am writing to express to you my appreciation for business opportunities offered by your newspaper to young boys like my son, Leonard Vanderhoogt, who is sending the enclosed money for the Goodfellows drive. This amount is part of what he cleared on his paper route in November.

Almost a year ago Leonard took over a Monroe Morning World route of 120 customers, much against my wishes. He was only thirteen at the time and I was sure he would not be able to get up at five o'clock every morning and complete his route before school. I did all I could to discourage him. I was pleasantly surprised, however, and later in the summer he took over an additional route of 120 more customers. I felt certain then that he would realize his mistake and admit this was too much but again I was wrong and he has delivered 240 papers every morning since June.

It is obvious now that Leonard has become a much more dependable boy because of this and has learned a lesson in managing finances that will be of use to him all his life. He has learned to meet people with ease and has also learned to accept criticism. He has learned the joy of achievement and the satisfaction of responsibility.

For all this I feel I owe to you and Leonard's manager, Mr. Lloyd Alexander, a statement of gratitude.

Hits Immigration

To the Editor:

In an editorial of the 4th of December, Sunday edition of Morning World, was a complete analysis, of the system of legal means by which constitutional provisions, for elections, diverted, as a result good intentions aimed at when our constitutional methods were authorized and accepted.

Our immigration authorities have found numerous means, and ways in which these elements referred to in this editiorial have over run their quotas, misrepresented their identities, fooled our public officials, bribed, sneaked, and slipped into this country, from every nook, by every crook, conceivable.

You only have to get from the un-American activities committee, and imigration officers in Washington, the records to see the way they have poured into this country. You only have to read the supreme court decisions (U. S. Sup. Ct.) to see for yourself, what has been happening. And Doctor Goodman, if you are really interested in getting to the truth of this situation, I shall be glad to furnish you with documented cases, in which through exchange of visa, varying their citizenships to qualify for admission into this country through our slack laws. One case recently a particular race, got into Italy, secured visas, exchanged them in Cuba, sailed into the America, were held up by immigration authorities, at Miami, ordered released by the state department. It is general knowledge, of all fair minded, better informed people that this immigration racket is a business with foreign elements, drifted into this country for that special purpose. When the Americans had more interest in their country, and the preservation of the fundamental doctrines upon which it was founded exercised more diligence, in their choices for men of this heritage, to elevate as their leaders, and statesmen we had less trouble like this to deal with.

Since we have become involved into foreign affairs, financially, industrially, commercially, politically, militaristically, and one-world ideologically, we have just about lost every safeguard we ever had. To preserve ourselves as Americans, independent of the nations we have squeezed billions of dollars from our citizens to aid them. There are many, many cases whereby some relatives of these foreign elements have massed wealth in this country, and schemed to get other of their relatives in here, for no other purpose than to exploit the unthoughtful, indifferent American people.

The treason committed in the last ten years in this country, in our public offices, stealing secrets, plats, information for use for plotting against the American people is most shocking to any one with ordinary intelligence, of evaluation, of such misdeeds. Our criminal records, will reveal some astonishing facts, Doctor, if you should care to be better informed on the subject, as to the percentage of criminals, and crimes committed and their origin and race.

If it is not your purpose to confuse the minds of readers, that do not think for themselves, as unfortunately, too many way too many Americans seem to be unconcerned about thinking for themselves, in which they have developed an allergy I hope you doctors can find a remedy for. But, please, Dock, don't look for it through politics.

Mayors Speeding

VIDALIA, LA.

To the Editor:

I am writing to you about Mayor Jack Howard's speeding ticket that Patrolman Lumpkin gave him while speeding in Mississippi.

I know Patrolman Lumpkin and have met him. I don't believe he would have just given him a ticket because he is from Monroe, La. and a Mayor. I travel Natchez and Mississippi highways every day and haven't gone over the speed limit.

Mayor Jack Howard has a police force in Monroe and they are compelled to enforce the speed laws too.

I was raised in Monroe for 35 years and just recently moved to Vidalia just across the river from those bad law-enforcement officers as he call them.

I have been in several conversations about Mayor Howard. Some have asked me if he thinks he is a privileged character.

I believe he should just pay the fine and forget it as an ambassador from Monroe. It is causing a lot of trouble between Vidalia and Natchez already.

Please print something in the paper about this trouble. I would be glad to get a donation to pay his fine if he will forget it. There are some fine folks in Natchez and Mississippi.

CAROLERS

THERE are no songs of old to me . . . So sweet upon the night . . . As those from carolers that drift . . . Beneath the Yuletide light . . . The whole year long it seems I wait . . . Beside my window pane . . . In fervent hope that I may live . . . To hear their songs again . . . Their gentle voices in the blue . . . Like silver church bells chime . . . In ringing out the carols of . . . An ancient Christmas time . . . I sometimes think that angels walk . . . On earth this month of year . . . With samples of the songs that some . . . Of us may later hear . . . And when their lovely melodies . . . Beneath the heaven fade . . . I feel within my heart as though . . . My soul to God has prayed.

If the Legislature sees any way to regain and retain segregation through new tax revenue it should spell this out in clear and certain terms, including specific details of dollars and cents.

If the Legislature plans to use racial emotionalism to put over new taxes or tax increases it well knows would bring statewide public revolt under normal conditions, the public should understand this.

If the Legislature intends to use racial emotionalism simply to get more revenue for more state spending having no direct effect on the segregation fight, it should spell this out also, with complete details as to the need for such revenue.

As of the present, there is no established need for new revenue in connection with the fight to regain and retain segregation except to cover the $14,000 per day expenses of the Legislature itself.

No one believing in segregation, least of all The World, regrets in any way the public money which the Legislature has spent thus far in trying to fulfill its obligation to the people and to keep faith with them on the segregation issue. But there will be much regret and much resentment if the Legislature now uses segregation as a subterfuge for tax-hiking not needed in the segregation fight.

If there are valid reasons why even consideration of this matter should not be postponed until the May fiscal session they should be spelled out completely in every detail.

The Bobby Appointment

If there is one field in which the Chief Executive of government at any level must have personal rein it is in appointment of his "official family," whether it is known as "the Cabinet" or by any other name. A Chief Executive must have, in the high posts immediately around him, officials who are compatible politically, who see eye-to-eye with him on the general philosophies of government, and in whom he can place unlimited trust.

None of this, however, precludes public evaluation of the fitness of those chosen for the posts they are to fill, or of what the effect of their selection may be on the nation or any part of it.

President-elect Kennedy has named his brother, Robert, to be Attorney General. That is his privilege. Unquestionably the two see eye-to-eye. Just as the oldest brother, Joe Kennedy, Jr., who was killed in World War II, was the idol of Jack, the President-elect, so is Jack the idol of Bobby.

And Bobby undoubtedly is the one person President-elect Kennedy trusts above all others. They worked side-by-side in the McClellan Committee Labor Rackets investigation which brought Bobby his greatest fame—as Committee Counsel—and some condemnation for Senator Kennedy as a Committee member who seemed to want to go easy on labor legislation resulting from the Committee investigations.

Robert Kennedy has been criticized as unwilling to give Walter Ruether, a power in the Democratic Party, as tough an investigation as he gave Dave Beck, who had left the Democratic Party in 1952 to support Eisenhower. The Walter Ruether-George Meany labor group claims it "nominated" Senator Kennedy and was a major cog in his election. What could be virtually a "conflict of interests" might develop in any future Departments of Justice procedure directly or indirectly involving labor unions.

Also, if Robert Kennedy, as Attorney General, should find himself involved in critical situations concerning Department of Justice prosecutions in any field, President Kennedy may find himself in embarrassing positions as the brother of the Attorney General. It is a risk which both men could rise above, but it is a needless risk to take. There are plenty of men as worthy—far more worthy—than Robert Kennedy of being United States Attorney General.

The possibility of seeking a "Kennedy Dynasty" unquestionably will be raised critically against the President because of the appointment. The Kennedy family is very much of a clan. It moves as an entity whenever the hopes or desires of any member of it are at stake. It has demonstrated this repeatedly. With one Kennedy as President and one Kennedy as Attorney General, there is still the young brother, "Teddy," who has stated publicly that he looks forward to a political career at the federal level.

The South has an especial interest in this appointment. Robert Kennedy was anathema to most of the South, not only rank and file voters but many political leaders, before his brother's nomination, during the presidential campaign and even afterwards. President-elect Kennedy sneeringly spoke of his ability to be both nominated and elected without help from the South.

After the Democratic convention, Robert Kennedy publicly insulted the South in an interview at Atlanta, Georgia, when he denounced its "religious bigotry." Party leaders of both Alabama and Georgia, reportedly requested that he and candidate Kennedy stay of those states during the campaign. They did.

Robert Kennedy played the tune of "religious bigotry," particularly Southern, throughout the campaign. Candidate Kennedy, in more dignified manner, echoed some parts of his brother's fallacious and at time somewhat repulsively spoken propaganda. Yet, but for the fact that the South itself overrode whatever religious prejudices existed, Richard M. Nixon today would be President-elect.

Even after the election returns were in, Robert Kennedy publicly stated in New York City that the only reason the election was close was because of "religious bigotry," and implied that the South deserves no particular credit for its part in the Kennedy victory.

We hope that, as Attorney General, Robert Kennedy will treat the South exactly as he treats all other parts of the nation on all matters of concern to it, whether racial or otherwise. We hope Jack Kennedy, as President, will follow the same course. But, so far as Attorney General Kennedy is concerned, certainly the South will have no reason to expect anything but the most rigid types of "crack down" in any and all fields of possible federal prosecution on all racial issuse that can be brought into federal courts.

The South itself asked for this by its own votes, and there is no use denying it.

Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Arkansas all were fully aware of the attitude of both Robert Kennedy and John F. Kennedy toward the South as expressed by them, separately or together, during and before the presidential campaign. They were aware of the far more sympathetic viewpoint——the fairer minded viewpoint—of Richard M. Nixon.

But in each instance the people of these states gave clear majorities to Mr. Kennedy and Senator Johnson. Whatever comes as a result must be accepted as self-invited.

Elector Vote Count Vital

Possibility Seen That Kennedy Will Not Get Majority and That House Action May Be Required

Monday, December 19, may prove a critical date in American political history. On that day, the Presidential electors named in the national election November 1 will meet in the fifty states to cast their votes for the next President and Vice President.

Best guess is that Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts will receive a majority of the electorial votes for the Presidency, and Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas will get the same number for the Vice Presidency. If the electors follow the unofficial popular votes cast by their respective states, some of which are being challenged, the Kennedy - Johnson ticket will get a majority of the electoral votes, even through it failed to get a majority of the popular vote.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon and his Republican running mate, John Cabot Lodge, seem perfectly reconciled to this results in several states, particularly Texas and Illinois.

Nevertheless, complications could develop which might result in the failure of the electoral college canvass by states next Monday to definitely name the President and Vice President.

In this event, the final decision would not come until Congress, in joint session January 6, when it receives and records formally the electoral votes, and takes action. Even then, Congress, under existing law, might be prevented from reaching a final decision, since the margin is so close that if several states failed to certify their electors prior to that date, presumably they could not be counted.

What would happen under this circumstance, if it possibly would change the outcome of the election, no one is sure. The Constitutional provision for the election of the President and Vice President by electors selected by individual states, rather than by popular vote, does not specify what Congress should do, when canvassing the electoral votes, in event any state or states failed to certify the electors.

In view of the existing situation, which may very likely be resolved without any major crisis, but could result in another Hayes-Tilden controversy, the necessity for revamping the Constitution and attendant laws dealing with the election of the President and Vice President during the next four years, is, in the opinion of many members of Congress, a very vital one.

Not since Congress was forced to establish a special commission to decide the outcome of the Hayes - Tilden election in 1876, when Republican Rutherford B. Hayes was finally declared the winner over Democrat Samuel J. Tilden by a margin of only 185 to 184 electoral votes, even though Tilden had won in the popular election, has the issue appeared so important.

For several years after the Hayes - Tilden battle, Congress argued over various proposals to revise the electoral college method of electing a President and Vice President, but failed to reach a solution. The 87th Congress, meeting in January, will be asked to do the same.

The proposal which seems likely to have the most support in the coming Congress is very much like that offered by famous Senator Oliver P. Morton of Kentucky in 1887, as a result of the Hayes-Tilden controversy.

Views Of Our Readers

Burden Of World

To The Editor:

As I recall in 1952 when General Eisenhower ran for president he said the United States could not carry the burden of the world on our backs.

However, after, he was elected by an over whelming majority, instead of the conservative platform he ran on he went modern Republican. I think the definition for the liberal Democrat they are extremely liberal with the taxpayers' money. The modern Republican believes they can keep on spending more money than they take in and yet keep our economy strong.

Now almost after eight years in the presidents office he has come to realize the cold facts of what he said in 1952. The nations who have become prosperous through the help of the U. S. tax payers dollars that helped them to recover from the smouldering ruin of war.

Now when this nation's economy is in serious trouble and we appeal to them to share more of the burden the most we seem to get is moral support which does not lessen our burden or pay debts.

And while Senator Kennedy and Vice President Nixon were running for President they talked of more spending despite the fact that as fast as we help build up an un-developed country the Communists take over through infiltration, subversion and sabotage. While there is no real effort on the part of our government to get them out of the United States, although they have been warned of the danger we face.

Both Senator Kennedy and Vice President Nixon pointed with pride to the progress made under the Democrat and the Republican administrations. Neither of them pointed with pride to the national debt of 193 billions of dollars which was accumulated under both parties that future generations will have to pay with interest. We should warn the younger generation they do not get something for nothing and that the Government first takes it from them and only gives what is left after spreading their money around the world and taking their cut here at home.

On 'Alan Shivers'

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

With reference to some recent correspondence through this department of the Morning World, on the part of a fictitious "Alan Shivers," myself and, then, last Sunday, Mrs. Charles Rogers, of Girard, I think it is well that we should keep the record straight:

Certainly, constructive criticism of public officials, in the course of our discussions of public affairs, is not only desirable, but essential to the effective functioning of our form of government. No responsible citizen would argue to the contrary on that point.

But, public misrepresentation is entirely another matter. And anonymous destructive public misrepresentation is wholly indefensible.

That was the thesis of my recent letter to the Editor. I hope, of course — and believe — that my remarks were generally so interpreted.

May the spirit that is Christmas enrich your life and the lives of all your readers.

Democracy

Monroe, Louisiana

To The Editor:

Some members of the legislature, led by Rep. Mike John Jr. and Rep. Lawrence Gibbs, seek to catechize an L. S. U. professor on Americanism. They set up their own definition of Americanism and rush to the totalitarian insistence of "Conform or be Fired," "Dissent is Treason," "Deviation is Disloyalty."

This arrogant move to stifle freedom of thought reprisal ought to be met with the contempt it deserves. The right of an individual to differ with and criticize the actions of political leaders and government is fundamental to our American liberties. According to Webster, citizenship iss "the status of being a citizen." It does not have the same meaning as the word "subject," which suggests a person who is dominated, controlled, and ruled by a dictatorial authority. Instead, a citizen is a member of a state, one who has the opportunity to share his opinions and to take an active part in the activities of the government. He may not always agree with the majority, but he can disagree as long as he lives under free political institutions.

We Americans have seen the grosser forms of totalitarianism in both fascism and communism. In our fever to achieve security against the trust of communist imperialism, many unwittingly would invite totalitarianism in another guise to rule over us. We need to remember that patriotism which defies the state in the end destroys the state. It makes for the arrogance of assuming the state has the right to be a law onto itself.

These men would be better representatives of the people they serve if they would work to create a healthy and dynamic free society which will beat thought-controlled and regimented communist society in every human endeavor.

Sincerely Yours
Ben Oliphint

To the Editor:

I am writing to express to you my appreciation for business opportunities offered by your newspaper to young boys like my son, Leonard Vanderhoogt, who is sending the enclosed money for the Goodfellows drive. This amount is part of what he cleared on his paper route in November.

Almost a year ago Leonard took over a Monroe Morning World route of 120 customers, much against my wishes. He was only thirteen at the time and I was sure he would not be able to get up at five o'clock every morning and complete his route before school. I did all I could to discourage him. I was pleasantly surprised, however, and later in the summer he took over an additional route of 120 more customers. I felt certain then that he would realize his mistake and admit this was too much but again I was wrong and he has delivered 240 papers every morning since June.

It is obvious now that Leonard has become a much more dependable boy because of this and has learned a lesson in managing finances that will be of use to him all his life. He has learned to meet people with ease and has also learned to accept criticism. He has learned the joy of achievement and the satisfaction of responsibility.

For all this I feel I owe to you and Leonard's manager, Mr. Lloyd Alexander, a statement of gratitude.

Hits Immigration

To the Editor:

In an editorial of the 4th of December, Sunday edition of Morning World, was a complete analysis, of the system of legal means by which constitutional provisions, for elections, diverted, as a result good intentions aimed at when our constitutional methods were authorized and accepted.

Our immigration authorities have found numerous means, and ways in which these elements referred to in this editiorial have over run their quotas, misrepresented their identities, fooled our public officials, bribed, sneaked, and slipped into this country, from every nook, by every crook, conceivable.

You only have to get from the un-American activities committee, and imigration officers in Washington, the records to see the way they have poured into this country. You only have to read the supreme court decisions (U. S. Sup. Ct.) to see for yourself, what has been happening. And Doctor Goodman, if you are really interested in getting to the truth of this situation, I shall be glad to furnish you with documented cases, in which through exchange of visa, varying their citizenships to qualify for admission into this country through our slack laws. One case recently a particular race, got into Italy, secured visas, exchanged them in Cuba, sailed into the America, were held up by immigration authorities, at Miami, ordered released by the state department. It is general knowledge, of all fair minded, better informed people that this immigration racket is a business with foreign elements, drifted into this country for that special purpose. When the Americans had more interest in their country, and the preservation of the fundamental doctrines upon which it was founded exercised more diligence, in their choices for men of this heritage, to elevate as their leaders, and statesmen we had less trouble like this to deal with.

Since we have become involved into foreign affairs, financially, industrially, commercially, politically, militaristically, and one-world ideologically, we have just about lost every safeguard we ever had. To preserve ourselves as Americans, independent of the nations we have squeezed billions of dollars from our citizens to aid them. There are many, many cases whereby some relatives of these foreign elements have massed wealth in this country, and schemed to get other of their relatives in here, for no other purpose than to exploit the unthoughtful, indifferent American people.

The treason committed in the last ten years in this country, in our public offices, stealing secrets, plats, information for use for plotting against the American people is most shocking to any one with ordinary intelligence, of evaluation, of such misdeeds. Our criminal records, will reveal some astonishing facts, Doctor, if you should care to be better informed on the subject, as to the percentage of criminals, and crimes committed and their origin and race.

If it is not your purpose to confuse the minds of readers, that do not think for themselves, as unfortunately, too many way too many Americans seem to be unconcerned about thinking for themselves, in which they have developed an allergy I hope you doctors can find a remedy for. But, please, Dock, don't look for it through politics.

Mayors Speeding

VIDALIA, LA.

To the Editor:

I am writing to you about Mayor Jack Howard's speeding ticket that Patrolman Lumpkin gave him while speeding in Mississippi.

I know Patrolman Lumpkin and have met him. I don't believe he would have just given him a ticket because he is from Monroe, La. and a Mayor. I travel Natchez and Mississippi highways every day and haven't gone over the speed limit.

Mayor Jack Howard has a police force in Monroe and they are compelled to enforce the speed laws too.

I was raised in Monroe for 35 years and just recently moved to Vidalia just across the river from those bad law-enforcement officers as he call them.

I have been in several conversations about Mayor Howard. Some have asked me if he thinks he is a privileged character.

I believe he should just pay the fine and forget it as an ambassador from Monroe. It is causing a lot of trouble between Vidalia and Natchez already.

Please print something in the paper about this trouble. I would be glad to get a donation to pay his fine if he will forget it. There are some fine folks in Natchez and Mississippi.

Commander Jeff T. Parnell.

CAROLERS

THERE are no songs of old to me . . . So sweet upon the night . . . As those from carolers that drift . . . Beneath the Yuletide light . . . The whole year long it seems I wait . . . Men On The Moon

Tips On Setting Up Sky 'Housekeeping'

..EDITOR'S NOTE—Okay, so man manages to get up to the moon. How does he set up housekeeping on a sphere with no visible water supply, little or no oxygen and fantastic extremes of heat and cold? Here's the matter-of-fact answer of a distinguished astrophysicist.

By PROF. FRITZ ZWICKY
California Institute of Technology
Written for The Associated Press

On our march into the universe the moon is a natural first stage, which will be followed by journeys to the various planets and their moons. The main purpose of these journeys will be the exploration and later on the reconstruction of as many members of the solar system as possible for the purpose of making them habitable.

The moon appears to be a most inhospitable place because of its extreme heat and cold, its exposure to dangerous types of solar and of cosmic radiation and because of its lack of a life-sustaining atmosphere. A closer look, however, reveals that circumstances on the moon are much better than they appear at first sight.

From our knowledge of the composition of the earth, the sun, the planets, meteors and comets we may assume with confidence that all of the essential chemical elements will be found on the moon. With some imagination and determination toward the development of a few rather simple devices it should be possible to make the moon readily habitable and actually quite an exciting place to live on for us earthlings.

The seemingly adverse conditions on the moon actually in any ways facilitate the operation of devices for the production of oxygen, water and food, as well as fuels and propellants for conventional power plants and for rockets.

Take for example the absence of an atmosphere; that is, a perfect vacuum is curiously enough one of the most valuable means for processing essential materials into things which we use in everyday life. Metals such as aluminum and some of its alloys can be produced with a purity and a "specificity" of properties not attainable even in the highest artificial vacuum in our laboratories.

Such metals can for instance be welded by simply hammering them together. Indeed, as my colleague Prof. Pol Duwez has pointed out, no oxides will be formed on our metals which in the earth's atmosphere prevent perfect cohesion of two pieces of metal on cold contact alone and thus necessitate hot welding or riveting.

In the full glare of the sun the lunar surface temperature rises above that of boiling water. During the lunar night it sinks to below-150 degrees Fahrenheit. Astronauts therefore must dig in or construct shelters immediately upon their arrival on the moon in order to protect themselves against temperature extremes as well as against the dangerous particle radiations which are sporadically being ejected from the sun. With the aid of solar furnaces the dust, sand or gravel on the moon's surface can readily be melted and cast into bricks. Also, available rocks may be hot-welded to build walls for shelters.

Construction on the moon will be easier than on the earth since all weights of materials are reduced to one-sixth because of the lower pull of gravity. A man thus can handle huge beams, plates and blocks for construction.

The astronauts' next concern will be to fill the shelters with a breathable atmosphere and to produce water and foodstuffs out of the moon's surface materials. For these purposes the simplest and most readily available power source is the radiation from the sun which can be concentrated with solar furnaces. Each group of astronauts will mount a number of these devices to produce respectively water, oxygen, nitrogen, foodstuffs, propellants and power. The furnaces consist of flat and of concave mirrors which can be adjusted from time to time, or with a simple drive are made to follow the course of the sun and continually focus radiation onto a spot on the moon's surface which is tightly covered by a transparent bell jar.

Water can be obtained first. The igneous rocks in the earth's crust contain from 1 to 10 per cent of water of crystallization. Similar percentages may be expected on the moon, at least in shallow subsurface layers. This water will be driven out of the rocks as they are exposed to the intense heat at temperatures of over 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit, in the focal spots of the solar furnaces. The water vapor steaming out of the rocks can be used to drive turbines and thus produce power before being condensed into water for drinking purposes. The steam can also be condensed directly or be used for assimilation in a closed plant garden.

Carbon dioxide is the next gas to be liberated from the rocks in the hot focal spot of a solar furnace, where for instance calcium carbonate will be disassociated (broken apart) into carbon calcium and calcium oxide. The carbon dioxide may subsequently be fed through a covered garden for digestion in chlorella algae and the like, or it may be disassociated into oxygen, carbon and carbon monoxide in a second more efficient solar furnace which is capable of generating temperatures of 7000 to 8000 degrees Fahrenheit. For these processes the use of plants will of course be far more efficient for long term operations.

Large transparently covered gardens can easily be constructed which make direct and efficient use of sunlight and which thus eliminate the necessity of too many or too large solar furnaces. In addition, the chlorella algae, with the aid of sunlight produce food rapidly through their fantastic ability to synthesize starches and proteins from carbon dioxide, water, sulphur, nitrogen and phosphorus which we can make available in our moon garden. It will be no problem to convert some of the starches into alcohol for an occasional cocktail.

As to the size of the mirrors which are necessary to carry out the described operations, a solar furnace of one square yard aperture collects and concentrates enough energy to generate 70 gallons of oxygen per hour at atmospheric pressure from the disassociation of carbon dioxide, from water or from any of the metal oxides available. This is enough for more than 15 persons, since the amount of oxygen used up in breathing is about four gallons per person per hour. On the other hand, for the production of water we need a larger solar furnace. Unless our astronauts were lucky and found rocks right away in which the water of crystallization is very loosely bound they would need a solar furnace the size of the 200-inch mirror of the great Hale Telescope on Palomar Mountain to produce a lavish six gallons of water a day. Or, if they can be satisfied with a daily six quarts, they can get this from a mirror the size and the quality of the usual 60-inch search lights, the kind currently used for advertising movie premieres, market and service station openings, and so forth.

For the production of power the astronaut can use two methods. He may first produce propellants, hot steam being the simplest, followed by hydrogen and oxygen which he gets from the thermal dissociation (heating) of water; or he may produce metals, carbon and silicon from the dissociation of their oxides. These elements may subsequently be reacted with either oxygen or hydrogen in combustion chambers which are designed for the operation of gas turbines or, if need be, of jet engines and rockets.

The astronaut may also use a very efficient solar furnace which produces temperatures high enough not only to dissociate the rocks on the moon down to their chemical elements, but to ionize most of the latter. In a properly designed focal reaction chamber built, for instance, from some carbide with a very high melting point, jets of electrically charged positive and negative ions can be produced and shot through the space between the poles of a magnet. From electrodes placed on both sides of the jet, parallel to it and to the magnetic field, an electric current can be drawn off with this "jet induction generator."

Oxygen, water, food, propellants and energy stored in batteries must be produced in excess quantity during the lunar day for purposes of storage and use during the lunar night, about two weeks long each. Also the shelter and especially the food raising gardens must be protected against the intense cold.

As to the equipment which, say, three astronauts must take along for their first trip to the moon, this includes parts for the flat and concave mirrors of solar furnaces with a combined aperture of perhaps one hundred square yards, supports for the furnaces, plastic bell jars, high temperature crucibles, pipes and jars for traps, small magnets, wires, durable or titanium alloys, and some auxiliary devices like pumps, solar batteries. Furthermore some salts, vitamins, medicines, sun lotions etc. All in all, the three should get along on a thousand pounds of equipment.

Summarizing, we must emphasize that none of the operations described in the preceding goes beyond scientific and technological knowledge which is already at hand. Some slight degree of imagination and an indomitable determination is all that is needed for success. It is to be hoped that the scientists, engineers, the military and the politicians of the free nations will wake up and remove all of those individuals among the policy makers who, because of a multitude of aberrations and because of weakness, inertia and plain stupidity have let the Russians get the jump on us.

Even larger vistas will open since we master the nuclear fusion ignitions of all of the lighter chemical elements in the rocks and can transform them with tremendous release of energy into the heavier elements, iron being the ultimate goal. Most of the research on the ignition of nuclear fusion at the present time is concerned with electromagnetic means which might produce the necessary conditions for the desired nuclear reactions to take place within clouds or plasmas of electrically charged positive and negative ions. Personally I am of the opinion that quite different and more promising methods of nuclear fusion ignition are possible. I hope that free men will succeed in realizing these methods before the Russians do. For this to come to pass, however, it will be necessary that lone wolf investigators, with whom real breakthroughs most often originate, be given a greater chance than heretofore.

Once nuclear fusion of the elements in the rocks is mastered, the following operations become possible on the moon. First, most of the activities which I have described in this study become simpler and can be carried out on a larger scale. The lunar night in particular can then be made very comfortable. In the second place, with the large energies available from nuclear fusion reactions, we might visualize endowing the moon with an atmosphere of heavy molecules, for instance carbon dioxide, heavy enough not to be swept off the moon in spite of its low pull of gravity. And finally, with the aid of nuclear energy we can literally "move mountains," or even shrink the size of the moon and thus increase its pull of gravity for the purpose of allowing it to hold a breathable atmosphere like our own.

It must be emphasized that the projects which I have sketched can be realized with the aid of present-day knowledge and techniques. No intrinsic difficulties face us which are of the magnitude of those which must be overcome by the investigators into the fundamental laws of physics, biology and medicine.

In conclusion it should be pointed out that a few shots at the moon with small projectiles and spectroscopic observation of their impact with the 200-inch telescope on Palomar would give us most valuable information about the mineral composition on the moon's surface. I have therefore advocated the launching of fast pellets from rocket-born, shaped explosive charges for the past 15 years. A first attempt, on Dec. 17, 1946, with a V-2 rocket at White Sands proving grounds failed. After much frustrating delay, Mr. J. Cuneo and I succeeded in launching at the Holloman Air Force Base a first small pellet from an Aerobee rocket, with a speed of 50,000 feet per second, which actually became the first man-made body to escape permanently from the earth and which now travels around the sun in interplanetary space. Unfortunately no sponsor has been found as yet to continue these relatively very uncostly tests for the purpose of exploring the surface of the moon and the atmospheres of some of the planets.

Christmas Series Are Excellent

PRAIRIE CHRISTMAS. By Paul Engle. CHRISTMAS AT SAGAMORE HILL. By Helen Topping Miller. Each Longmans, Green; each $2.50.

The sight, sound, smell and taste of Christmas and its wonderful kind and loving spirit — that's what you find in Yuletide abundance in Engle's little book.

Poet, critic and for some time teacher at the University of Iowa, Engle recalls here fondly the big day of all his boyhood years in Cedar Rapids: Christmas. The family got together in the country, everybody traveled by sleigh, they stabled the horses in the big barn, settled down in the great kitchen where all the food was being prepared and cooked. Only men and women who worked as hard as they did could have survived those grand killing menus — duck, rabbit, cabbage, carrots, pickles, gingerbread, jelly and jam, all sorts of nuts, spiced apples, maple sugar, cakes, cookies, ice cream. The boys went sliding; the men swigged once sweet cider; they rubbed goose grease on hurts; they cracked hard - shelled nuts on the flatiron which at night they heated and wrapped in cloth to keep their feet warm in bed.

Mrs. Miller takes us to Teddy Roosevelt's home for the Christmas of 1898. The Rough Rider has returned victorious, he's about to go to Albany, and here he is caught between his demanding children, his second wife, and visiting politicians greedy to get the most the first out of the new governor. This is as much, maybe more, for young readers as for adults, but it brims over with the happy holiday spirit.

Chronicle Of Tragic Career Of President

ANDREW JOHNSON. President on Trial. By Milton Lomask. Farrar, Straus & Cudahy. $6.

At 10 a.m., Saturday, April 15, 1865, Andrew Johnson became Lincoln's successor in the White House and began one of the stormiest and most tragic presidential careers in American history.

His problem was the South: How should the Federal Government handle the 11 Confederate states. Lincoln favored leniency, like Grant's to Lee; Johnson was known to hate the southern aristocracy from close contacts with it in his Tennessee, and so could be supposed to favor severity; Congress was controlled by Radical Republicans who schemed to hold down Southern whites, exalt the Negroes and get their own man into the presidency.

When Johnson, an uncouth man too free in his talk but too honest for his foes, indeed for his friends, decided to follow Lincoln's course, his enemies ganged up on him. They were a mean crowd and the American picture is much less deserving because of their blemish: Ben Wade, Charles Sumner, Benjamin F. Butler and, in the cabinet itself, untrustworthy Stanton. But the leader was Pennsylvania's Thad Stevens, and on Johnson's dismissal of Stanton, Stevens engineered impeachment proceedings. The move failed by one vote.

Lomask turns the savage congressional attack, vindictive and unprincipled, with no holds barred, into a gripping drama.

It makes us wonder whether our historians are not too lenient with some so-called heroes. The Negro must inevitably have had a happier course with some champion other than Stevens, whose support of his black brother was utterly unscrupulous and whose political past in Pennsylvania was lurid with corruption and graft.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Even though this is the busiest season of the year, there is still time to stop and read a book, for pleasure and relaxation. "Lay Siege to Heaven" is another of the delightful books by Luis de Wohl, based on the lives of Christian saints. This one deals with the career of St. Catherine of Sena. This is the story of an extraordinary woman, who lived at one of the most troubled periods of world history. It can truly be said that she did lay siege to Heaven and the face of her world. A delightful modern novel is "Love and Mrs. Sargent" written by Virginia Rowans. This is the story of Mrs. Sargent, lovely, witty, charming and successful, who wrote a column of advice to the lovelorn. She knew all about love, or so she thought, but this is the story of what happened when she met a much younger, and attractive man and how he changed her life. If you want to read a highly thrilling account of the perilous world of men vs. mountains with a colorful cast of characters, an unusual, remote atmosphere and a chilling climax, do not overlook "Man on The End of the Rope" by Paul Townsend.

The legend of Mary Margaret McBride began in the mid-thirties when five days a week, her soft, homelike voice brought books, events and drama into American living rooms by way of the radio. The many millions of women who heard and enjoyed her interviews with author, actors, politicians, Swiss Bell ringers, trapeze artists etc. will want to read her own book called "Out of The Air." This is an account of her adventurous years and of the people she met and introduced to the American public. This is a delightful book and will be wisely read.

It is the constant aim of the Board of Control of the Ouachita Parish Public Library to build up the book collection. We spend a very high percentage of our income for the purchase of new books and are aided materially by the lovely gift books we receive each month. Among the additions this week are some very fine books of permanent interest. Those who are interested in the work which is being done for retarded children will want to read "Retarded Children: God's Children" by Sigurd Petersen. A most interesting account of mysterious disappearance is "They Never Came Back" written by Allen Churchill. "I Was a Spy" by Marion Miller is the story of an American housewife who worked as an undercover agent for the F. B. I. An inspiring story of how one woman conquered the problem of blindness is "Farewell to Fear" by Tomi Keitlen. This is a heartening account and should be widely read.

Cookbooks are always popular and they are especially in demand at Christmas time. This week we have four new titles to recommend to you. "The I Hate to Cook Book" is a humorous book written by Peg Bracken, which contains many short cuts to good cooking for the career girl. One of the most beautiful cookbooks of recent years is "The Ladies Home Journal Cookbook" which contains reprints of many of the fine recipes which have appeared in that periodical. It is beautifully illustrated and would make a lovely Christmas gift. "The Hospitality Cookbook" compiled by Elizabeth Bonnell McCuaig is a collection of the favorite recipes of minister's wives. It contains many hints on cooking for large crowds. If you are interested in exotic and unusual food, you will want to see "The Complete Book of Gourmet Cooking for the American Kitchen" by Myra Waldo. It contains recipes which you are not apt to find in other places.

"Figleaf" by Eve Merriam is a very interesting account of the fashion industry and will interest women who buy clothes and people who sell them. "On Art and Artists" is a very splendid collection of essays by Aldous Huxley. Our patrons are always interested in books about gardens and gardening and a new title in this category is welcome. The latest one in this field is "A Pictorial Guide to American Gardens" by Louis H. Frohman and Jean Elliot. This is a book which will be heartily enjoyed.

An interesting book about current world affairs is "Assignment in Israel" by Bernard Mandelbaum. It contains much up - to - date information and is most authentic. An exciting account of adventure during World War II is called "The Rome Escape Line" and was written by Sam Derry. It is an account of the British organization in Rome, designed to help escaped Prisoners of War. Terrence Prittie is the author of "Germany Divided" which tells just how the division of Germany into East and West has affected the German people. "The Sabres of Paradise" by Lesly Blanch deals with the conflict between the Russians and the muslims in early nineteenth century. It is an exciting book which deals with a little - known period of history. Those who are concerned with the communist regime in Cuba should read "Red Star Over Cuba" by Nathaniel Weyl. This is a thoughtful and informative book.

Another of the many books being published this year about the Civil War is "She Rode With the Generals" by Sylvia G. L. Dannett. It is an account of Sara Emma Edmundson who masqueraded as a man during the war period.

Biographies are always in demand and there are two new ones this week. One is "The Buried Day," a very thoughtful and penetrating book by Cecil Day-Lewis. The other is "Uncorking Old Sherry" by Oscar Sherwin. This is an account of the life and times of Richard Brinsley Sheridan and will be widely used by students of the history of English drama. Reference books are the backbone of our collection and we added two fine ones this week. One is "The Reader's Adviser and Bookman's Manual" by Hester R. Hoffman and the other is the 1961 edition of the Monroe - West Monroe City Directory. This book is in constant demand and we have one in each of our four branches. The use of the Ouachita Parish Public Library is growing all the time and we invite all of you who are not using it, to do so.

RUNNING THE SCALES

Live Performances For Year Reviewed

By JOHN CALE
Staff Music Critic

As Christmas week comes our way again, we are tempted to modify the phrase, "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," to "America glories in excesses."

Many things, particularly automatic carols, are overdone during the Christmas - New Year season. On the other hand, more "hand tailored" locally performed Christmas music is taking place in homes, churches and schools throughout the country than ever before.

SOUNDS BETTER

Let it be declared therefore that pop's or big brother's vocal chords do a better job on "Silent Night," or "Deck the Halls" than electronic copies of Perry Como or even Bing Crosby.

As the year draws to an end, there are summary accounts making the rounds on everything from population growth and police statistics to the weather. Certainly the year 1960 had plenty to offer on the music and drama department in northeast Louisiana.

Little Theatre saw last spring's season to a finish with "Sabrina Fair," and a real costume ball, "Guys and Dolls." The latter brought a new voice and face to the local art players in the person of John Pierpont, who has a pleasing baritone, genial stage appearance and the ability to swat a mean Salvation Army drum when the script calls for it.

The same organization opened the fall season with: a new director, Richard M. Clark, and promise of a new playhouse before the 1960-61 run closes out. Production thus far, "The Seven Year Itch" and "The Gazebo" both have shown a wide range of expression and excellent pacing.

MUSICALS

Other than "Guys and Dolls," Northeast presented "The King and I," also with a local cast, and a touring company came forward only several weeks ago with a first rate production of "Fiorello."

The Boris Goldovsky company's performance of "Don Giovanni" at Louisiana Tech marked a decided improvement over the same company's presentation of "Rigoletto" a season ago.

For lovers of band music, there was the U. S. Navy Band on the Northeast Concerts series last spring to be followed by the U.S. Marine Band which made appearances in Ruston and Ferriday. The Air Force Band will appear here next spring on the Northeast series.

Of different dimensions, but unique in its field, the Chris Barber Dixieland Band performed here after mastering the true New Orleans idiom in the heart of London, England. Perhaps more universal was the appeal of the Mantovani orchestra which played here in October.

Northeast student plays, which not only afford prospective teachers an opportunity to project their voices and dramatize a lesson, but are also ideal refresher courses for critics, included "Antigone," "The Cajun," "I'm a Fool," and "Ghosts." No reports as yet on action following measurements of seating and stage space in Brown Hall auditorium last spring. But hopes are high the much needed improvements will come during the next season or two.

"Dark at the Top of the Stairs," and "The Moon is Blue" were plays by touring companies which missed the dramatic mark. In both cases, weaknesses in the cast caused the fumble.

To end on the opening subject of excesses, the year also brought one of the chillers of the century in the Alfred Hitchcock movie, "Psycho." Of course, one of the players in this horror piece was three times sick. But how many more were also made ill for having gone through the hitches under Hitchcock in the audience? This movie may prove to be the "last word" in a gruesome era.

Social Lion Hunter Draws Another Bead

WHO KILLED SOCIETY? By Cleveland Amory. Harper. $6.50.

First "The Proper Bostonians," then "The Last Resorts" and now this book to climax the trilogy—this winds up a major probe of life spectacularly on the right side of the railroad tracks, the very tracks being torn up today in so many places.

For 350 years society, according to social commentators, has been dying, and there are obituary quotes, often surprisingly hilarious, from 1945, 1913, 1868, 1847, 1774 and so on back. We cover the country, too, as does Amory's whole story, ranging from Boston and New York to Detroit, Charleston, Dallas, Baltimore, San Francisco, Cleveland, St. Louis, Cincinnati. The reasons for its demise, Amory suggests, come under four or five headings; among some 73 subtopics are the servant problem, taxes, the Windsors, two wars, the telephone, the auto, the Russians, Elsa Maxwell, Perle Mesta, the Diners' Club.

Society, by this author's definition, is a comparative state: "To anyone who made his society debut, a generation earlier, someone who made it a generation later is socially suspect." Then he goes on to examine social levels, groups, clubs, and individuals. Society is in the middle, social figures disintegrate or they occasionally take on stature; the direction is celebrity to society to aristocracy. While Amory is harsh on Astors, Vanderbilts, Guggenheims, Dukes and some others, he finds persisting quality in other names: Rockefeller, Lowell, Byrd, Adams, Lehman.

For serious history, this has very many very funny stories: The woman who twitted a fellow with having only one pair of shoes, and his retort: She had to ask what they were; the social club now so deteriorated "they can't even keep in the men they used to keep out;" "people in public relations seem to have an awful lot of trouble with private relations."

Whether you're creme de la creme or hoi polloi, this book will fascinate you. Amory the social lion hunter is a crack shot.

An Actor Gets No Passes Of His Own

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some notes on Broadway first nights:

It is a rare production in these years of restricted production and theater space that doesn't open to a full house, and all of the tickets except those for the critics, columnists and the like have been paid for by someone. An actor gets no passes for the premiere of his show.

So the importance of an opening is not necessarily gauged by the crowd inside the theater. The number of sidewalk curious is the indicator. The weather is a factor here, of course, but only in the case of a really fine night.

The sidewalk crowd is largest as the customers arrive at the theater. There are never as many onlookers when they leave.

There are no super - Hollywood touches to a stage opening, no blinding lights, no sidewalk radio ballyhoo. But the people are there mainly for the same reason that they go to the fancy motion picture premieres—hoping to get a look at celebrities as they arrive and leave. Show business personalities get the major attention.

Not all of the gawking is outside the theater either. Some first-nighters of non - celebrity caliber are reluctant to take their seats until the last minute, jamming up the lobby so they can watch the "names" go by.

There are always a few autograph-seekers on hand outside the theater. You see the same faces all the time; you might call them pros. They are the same ones you often see outside restaurants known to be favored by celebrities. Some of them carry cameras with which to photograph the stars.

The police detail in a block where an opening occurs is heavy, with mounted cops much in evidence. There is seldom an incident even in the case of the largest crowds.

A fixture beside the ticket-taker at every opening is a retired New York City detective who worked in the theater district for years while on the force and knows every dubious character by sight. The theater owners feel safer with him at the door.

Tribute To The Unknown Father In America

"What am I doing here?" novelist Jesse Stuart writes me not from his native Kentucky hills but from Cairo. "I am teaching at American University. I teach in Education and English. I'm 53 now and have been teaching since I was 17. I've been writing since I can remember. All you have to do to know why my sisters (three, all teachers), my brother — a former teacher and yet he wants to get back to it — and I are all teachers and have drive—you just read 'God's Oddling.' Our father did something, his, no waste of time, work for the night is coming, amount to something in life, conserve soil for the future, take care of animals and natural resources. He never let up. We had Spartan training at home. What a father!"

Susskind's Stormy World

He Lives In A World That Is All His Own

By SAUL PETT
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—"Get me as I am!" David Susskind cried out during the monologue that began as an interview.

"I'm no kook! I'm serious! I'm dedicated! I'm full of ideals!"

His face, as always fighting the inadequacy of words, contorted in frustration. Pain creased the brow under his dark, graying Ivy League cut. The veins of his neck tightened above the button-down collar. His arms were spread out wide, palms forward, ready for nailing.

His despair was deep. The money-changers were still running the temple.

"It's worse than ever. The minions are legion."

Thus spoke David Susskind, 39, out of Harvard and Warner Brothers, producer of television shows, movies and plays, lecturer, budding author, critic at large, Galahad doggedly seeking the Holy Grail along Madison Avenue, controversial cheerleader of culture, the last angry man of show business, little David fighting the Goliath of mediocrity, the immoderate moderator of the TV discussion program known to its friends as "Open End" and, to its detractors, "Open Mouth."

There is an inevitable irony about a man like Susskind. His own good works—many stimulating dialogues on "Open End," network productions of "The Moon and Sixpence," "The Browning Version," and other tasteful TV specials—tend to get lost in the strident shadow of his own personality.

Detractors find, as he continues to cry out from his bed of cultural pain, the inference that he alone is trying to do something about inanity on television. Thus, they tend to forget his good shows.

A baseball player who is constantly critical of the rest of the batters in the league better have a whale of an average himself. Susskind is good, critics agree, but not that good.

In his solo interview with Nikita Khrushchev on "Open End," many critics found the Susskind personality too intrusive. They found him too anxious to practice personal summitry, too ill-equipped in that battle of wits, too naive in what looked like an attempt to wear down the Soviet leader by relentless, heavy-handed cross-examination in the hope that sometime before the last station break the witness would break down and confess his sins.

To such criticism Susskind entered at least a partial plea of guilty on the day I saw him in his busy Madison Avenue office, the home of "Talent Associates," where he dealt with repeated production crisis on the phone or in the hands of aides rushing in without losing sight of the larger world Susskind worries about.

"More than anything," he said, "I'd like another crack at Khrushchev. I'd do it differently this time. The trouble before was that I think the hysteria preceding the show (pickets, editorials, letters protesting Khrushchev's appearance) got to me subconsciously.

"I found myself constrained on the air to prove my Americanism. The animosity got to me. I felt compelled to challenge Khrushchev and argue with him instead of just getting information."

But mostly Susskind discussed the shortcomings of the world around him, in a marathon, self-winding soliloquy which required little more provocation from me than the word, hello.

In the process, he revealed that he has just finished a movie, "A Raisin in the Sun," that he is now delivering about 40 or 50 lectures a year on such topics as "The Menace of Mass Complacency" and "The TV Tempest," that he has written 40 pages into a book, that he has now extended his list of targets to include, not only the indifferent masters of communication, but the public itself.

"Why do I do so much?" he said, anticipating my question. "It springs from a desire to express myself. Oh, there are just not enough ways to do what I want to say. TV, theater, movies, lectures—no one outlet is enough. I'm doing a book, too.

"Some people are getting out of television, it's so bad. But who could abandon television? There is no greener pasture. Where else can one present exciting ideas to so many people at once? Fifty or sixty million people saw 'The Moon and Sixpence.' Yet people walk away from TV.

"Oh, it's getting rougher all the time. It's more difficult to sell the kind of show you believe in and, once sold, it's difficult to get it done. The networks, the agencies the sponsors, the minions are legion. 'Perhaps you're a season ahead of your time, David,' they used to say to me. Now the rejection is more blunt. 'Who wants that artistic bunk? they say now. 'We want action. Give us a good private eye or a Western.' Now I know a new kind of exhaustion. The odds are more overwhelming than ever. Too many sponsors are running with the tide. I have to work harder all the time at getting up off the mat."

I can vouch for the substance of these quotes but not their completeness because Susskind talked so fast and, more important, his repertory of gestures proved a wondrous distraction.

Men On The Moon

Tips On Setting Up Sky 'Housekeeping'

EDITOR'S NOTE—Okay, so man manages to get up to the moon. How does he set up housekeeping on a sphere with no visible water supply, little or no oxygen and fantastic extremes of heat and cold? Here's the matter-of-fact answer of a distinguished astrophysicist.

By PROF. FRITZ ZWICKY
California Institute of Technology
Written for The Associated Press

On our march into the universe the moon is a natural first stage, which will be followed by journeys to the various planets and their moons. The main purpose of these journeys will be the exploration and later on the reconstruction of as many members of the solar system as possible for the purpose of making them habitable.

The moon appears to be a most inhospitable place because of its extreme heat and cold, its exposure to dangerous types of solar and of cosmic radiation and because of its lack of a life-sustaining atmosphere. A closer look, however, reveals that circumstances on the moon are much better than they appear at first sight.

From our knowledge of the composition of the earth, the sun, the planets, meteors and comets we may assume with confidence that all of the essential chemical elements will be found on the moon. With some imagination and determination toward the development of a few rather simple devices it should be possible to make the moon readily habitable and actually quite an exciting place to live on for us earthlings.

The seemingly adverse conditions on the moon actually in many ways facilitate the operation of devices for the production of oxygen, water and food, as well as fuels and propellants for conventional power plants and for rockets.

Take for example the absence of an atmosphere; that is, a perfect vacuum is curiously enough one of the most valuable means for processing essential materials into things which we use in everyday life. Metals such as aluminum and some of its alloys can be produced with a purity and a "specificity" of properties not attainable even in the highest artificial vacuum in our laboratories.

Such metals can for instance be welded by simply hammering them together. Indeed, as my colleague Prof. Pol Duwez has pointed out, no oxides will be formed on our metals which in the earth's atmosphere prevent perfect cohesion of two pieces of metal on cold contact alone and thus necessitate hot welding or riveting.

In the full glare of the sun the lunar surface temperature rises above that of boiling water. During the lunar night it sinks to below-150 degrees Fahrenheit. Astronauts therefore must dig in or construct shelters immediately upon their arrival on the moon in order to protect themselves against temperature extremes as well as against the dangerous particle radiations which are sporadically being ejected from the sun. With the aid of solar furnaces the dust, sand or gravel on the moon's surface can readily be melted and cast into bricks. Also, available rocks may be hot-welded to build walls for shelters.

Construction on the moon will be easier than on the earth since all weights of materials are reduced to one-sixth because of the lower pull of gravity. A man thus can handle buge beams, plates and blocks for construction.

The astronauts' next concern will be to fill the shelters with a breathable atmosphere and to produce water and foodstuffs out of the moon's surface materials. For these purposes the simplest and most readily available power source is the radiation from the sun which can be concentrated with solar furnaces. Each group of astronauts will mount a number of these devices to produce respectively water, oxygen, nitrogen, foodstuffs, propellants and power. The furnaces consist of flat and of concave mirrors which can be adjusted from time to time, or with a simple drive are made to follow the course of the sun and continually focus radiation onto a spot on the moon's surface which is tightly covered by a transparent bell jar.

Water can be obtained first. The igneous rocks in the earth's crust contain from 1 to 10 per cent of water of crystallization. Similar percentages may be expected on the moon, at least in shallow subsurface layers. This water will be driven out of the rocks as they are exposed to the intense heat at temperatures of over 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit, in the focal spots of the solar furnaces. The water vapor steaming out of the rocks can be used to drive turbines and thus produce power before being condensed into water for drinking purposes. The steam can also be condensed directly or be used for assimilation in a closed plant garden.

Carbon dioxide is the next gas to be liberated from the rocks in the hot focal spot of a solar furnace, where for instance calcium carbonate will be disassociated (broken apart) into carbon calcium and calcium oxide. The carbon dioxide may subsequently be fed through a covered garden for digestion in chlorella algae and the like, or it may be disassociated into oxygen, carbon and carbon monoxide in a second more efficient solar furnace which is capable of generating temperatures of 7000 to 8000 degrees Fahrenheit. For these processes the use of plants will of course be far more efficient for long term operations.

Large transparently covered gardens can easily be constructed which make direct and efficient use of sunlight and which thus eliminate the necessity of too many or too large solar furnaces. In addition, the chlorella algae, with the aid of sunlight produce food rapidly through their fantastic ability to synthesize starches and proteins from carbon dioxide, water, sulphur, nitrogen and phosphorus which we can make available in our moon garden. It will be no problem to convert some of the starches into alcohol for an occasional cocktail.

As to the size of the mirrors which are necessary to carry out the described operations, a solar furnace of one square yard aperture collects and concentrates enough energy to generate 70 gallons of oxygen per hour at atmospheric pressure from the disassociation of carbon dioxide, from water or from any of the metal oxides available. This is enough for more than 15 persons, since the amount of oxygen used up in breathing is about four gallons per person per hour. On the other hand, for the production of water we need a larger solar furnace. Unless our astronauts were lucky and found rocks right away in which the water of crystallization is very loosely bound they would need a solar furnace the size of the 200-inch mirror of the great Hale Telescope on Palomar Mountain to produce a lavish six gallons of water a day. Or, if they can be satisfied with a daily six quarts, they can get this from a mirror the size and the quality of the usual 60-inch search lights, the kind currently used for advertising movie premieres, market and service station openings, and so forth.

For the production of power the astronaut can use two methods. He may first produce propellants, hot steam being the simplest, followed by hydrogen and oxygen which he gets from the thermal dissociation (heating) of water; or he may produce metals, carbon and silicon from the dissociation of their oxides. These elements may subsequently be reacted with either oxygen or hydrogen in combustion chambers which are designed for the operation of gas turbines or, if need be, of jet engines and rockets.

The astronaut may also use a very efficient solar furnace which produces temperatures high enough not only to dissociate the rocks on the moon down to their chemical elements, but to ionize most of the latter. In a properly designed focal reaction chamber built, for instance, from some carbide with a very high melting point, jets of electrically charged positive and negative ions can be produced and shot through the space between the poles of a magnet. From electrodes placed on both sides of the jet, parallel to it and to the magnetic field, an electric current can be drawn off this "jet induction generator."

Oxygen, water, food, propellants and energy stored in batteries must be produced in excess quantity during the lunar day for purposes of storage and use during the lunar night, about two weeks long each. Also the shelter and especially the food raising gardens must be protected against the intense cold.

As to the equipment which, say, three astronauts must take along for their first trip to the moon, this includes parts for the flat and concave mirrors of solar furnaces with a combined aperture of perhaps one hundred square yards, supports for the furnaces, plastic bell jars, high temperature crucibles, pipes and jars for traps, small magnets, wires, aluminum tubing, simple tools of dural or titanium alloys, and some auxiliary devices like pumps, solar batteries. Furthermore some salts, vitamins, medicines, sun lotions etc. All in all, the three should get along on a thousand pounds of equipment.

Summarizing, we must emphasize that none of the operations described in the preceding goes beyond scientific and technological knowledge which is already at hand. Some slight degree of imagination and an indomitable determination is all that is needed for success. It is to be hoped that the scientists, engineers, the military and the politicians of the free nations will wake up and remove all of those individuals among the policy makers who, because of a multitude of aberrations and because of weakness, inertia and plain stupidity have let the Russians get the jump on us.

Even larger vistas will open since we master the nuclear fusion ignitions of all of the lighter chemical elements in the rocks and can transform them with tremendous release of energy into the heavier elements, iron being the ultimate goal. Most of the research on the ignition of nuclear fusion at the present time is concerned with electromagnetic means which might produce the necessary conditions for the desired nuclear reactions to take place within clouds or plasmas of electrically charged positive and negative ions. Personally I am of the opinion that quite different and more promising methods of nuclear fusion ignition are possible. I hope that free men will succeed in realizing these methods before the Russians do. For this to come to pass, however, it will be necessary that lone wolf investigators, with whom real breakthroughs most often originate, be given a greater chance than heretofore.

Once nuclear fusion of the elements in the rocks is mastered, the following operations become possible on the moon. First, most of the activities which I have described in this study become simpler and can be carried out on a larger scale. The lunar night in particular can then be made very comfortable. In the second place, with the large energies available from nuclear fusion reactions, we might visualize endowing the moon with an atmosphere of heavy molecules, for instance carbon dioxide, heavy enough not to be swept off the moon in spite of its low pull of gravity. And finally, with the aid of nuclear fusion we can literally "move mountains," or even shrink the size of the moon and thus increase its pull of gravity for the purpose of allowing it to hold a breathable atmosphere like our own.

It must be emphasized that the projects which I have sketched can be realized with the aid of present-day knowledge and techniques. No intrinsic difficulties face us which are of the magnitude of those which must be overcome by the investigators into the fundamental laws of physics, biology and medicine.

In conclusion it should be pointed out that a few shots at the moon with small projectiles and spectroscopic observation of their impact with the 200-inch telescope on Palomar would give us much valuable information about the mineral composition on the moon's surface. I have therefore advocated the launching of fast pellets from rocket-born, shaped explosive charges for the past 15 years. A first attempt, on Dec. 17, 1946, with a V-2 rocket at White Sands proving grounds failed. After much frustrating delay, Mr. J. Cuneo and I succeded in launching at the Holloman Air Force Base a first small pellet from an Aerobee rocket, with a speed of 50,000 feet per second, which actually became the first man-made body to escape permanently from the earth and which now travels around the sun in interplanetary space. Unfortunately no sponsor has been found as yet to continue these relatively very uncostly tests for the purpose of exploring the surface of the moon and the atmospheres of some of the planets.

"Some people are getting out of television, it's so bad. But who could abandon television(There is no greener pasture. Where else can one present exciting ideas to so many people at once? Fifty or sixty million people saw 'The Moon and Sixpence.' Yet people walk away from TV.

"Oh, it's getting rougher all the time. It's more difficult to sell the kind of show you believe in and, once sold, it's difficult to get it done. The networks, the agencies the sponsors, the minions are legion. 'Perhaps you're a season ahead of your time, David,' they used to say to me. Now the rejection is more blunt. 'Who wants that artistic bunk? they say now. 'We want action. Give us a good private eye or a Western.' Now I know a new kind of exhaustion. The odds are more overwhelming than ever. Too many sponsors are running with the tide. I have to work harder all the time at getting up off the mat."

I can vouch for the substance of these quotes but not their completeness because Susskind talked so fast and, more important, his repertory of gestures proved a wondrous distraction.

Christmas Series Are Excellent

PRAIRIE CHRISTMAS. By Paul Engle. CHRISTMAS AT SAGAMORE HILL. By Helen Topping Miller. Each Longmans, Green; each $2.50.

The sight, sound, smell and taste of Christmas and its wonderful kind and loving spirit — that's what you find in Yuletide abundance in Engle's little book.

Poet, critic and for some time teacher at the University of Iowa, Engle recalls here fondly the big day of all his boyhood years in Cedar Rapids: Christmas. The family got together in the country, everybody traveled by sleigh, they stabled the horses in the big barn, settled down in the great kitchen where all the food was being prepared and cooked. Only men and women who worked as hard as they did could have survived those grand killing menus — duck, rabbit, cabbage, carrots, pickles, gingerbread, jelly and jam, all sorts of nuts, spiced apples, maple sugar, cakes, cookies, ice cream. The boys went sliding; the men swigged once sweet cider; they rubbed goose grease on hurts; they cracked hard - shelled nuts on the flatiron which at night they heated and wrapped in cloth to keep their feet warm in bed.

Mrs. Miller takes us to Teddy Roosevelt's home for the Christmas of 1898. The Rough Rider has returned victorious, he's about to go to Albany, and here he is caught between his demanding children, his second wife, and visiting politicians greedy to get the most the first out of the new governor. This is as much, maybe more, for young readers as for adults, but it brims over with the happy holiday spirit.

Chronicle Of Tragic Career Of President

ANDREW JOHNSON. President on Trial. By Milton Lomask. Farrar, Straus & Cudahy. $6.

At 10 a.m., Saturday, April 15, 1865, Andrew Johnson became Lincoln's successor in the White House and began one of the stormiest and most tragic presidential careers in American history.

His problem was the South: How should the Federal Government handle the 11 Confederate states. Lincoln favored leniency, like Grant's to Lee; Johnson was known to hate the southern aristocracy from close contacts with it in his Tennessee, and so could be supposed to favor severity; Congress was controlled by Radical Republicans who schemed to hold down Southern whites, exalt the Negroes and get their own man into the presidency.

When Johnson, an uncouth man too free in his talk but too honest for his foes, indeed for his friends, decided to follow Lincoln's course, his enemies ganged up on him. They were a mean crowd and the American picture is much less deserving because of their blemish: Ben Wade, Charles Sumner, Benjamin F. Butler and, in the cabinet itself, untrustworthy Stanton. But the leader was Pennsylvania's Thad Stevens, and on Johnson's dismissal of Stanton, Stevens engineered impeachment proceedings. The move failed by one vote.

Lomask turns the savage congressional attack, vindictive and unprincipled, with no holds barred, into a gripping drama.

It makes us wonder whether our historians are not too lenient with some so-called heroes. The Negro must inevitably have had a happier course with some champion other than Stevens, whose support of his black brother was utterly unscrupulous and whose political past in Pennsylvania was lurid with corruption and graft.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Even though this is the busiest season of the year, there is still time to stop and read a book, for pleasure and relaxation. "Lay Siege to Heaven" is another of the delightful books by Luis de Wohl, based on the lives of Christian saints. This one deals with the career of St. Catherine of Sena. This is the story of an extraordinary woman, who lived at one of the most troubled periods of world history. It can truly be said that she did lay siege to Heaven and the face of her world. A delightful modern novel is "Love and Mrs. Sargent" written by Virginia Rowans. This is the story of Mrs. Sargent, lovely, witty, charming and successful, who wrote a column of advice to the lovelorn. She knew all about love, or so she thought, but this is the story of what happened when she met a much younger, and attractive man and how he changed her life. If you want to read a highly thrilling account of the perilous world of men vs. mountains with a colorful cast of characters, an unusual, remote atmosphere and a chilling climax, do not overlook "Man on The End of the Rope" by Paul Townsend.

The legend of Mary Margaret McBride began in the mid-thirties when five days a week, her soft, homelike voice brought books, events and drama into American living rooms by way of the radio. The many millions of women who heard and enjoyed her interviews with author, actors, politicians, Swiss Bell ringers, trapeze artists etc. will want to read her own book called "Out of The Air." This is an account of her adventurous years and of the people she met and introduced to the American public. This is a delightful book and will be wisely read.

It is the constant aim of the Board of Control of the Ouachita Parish Public Library to build up the book collection. We spend a very high percentage of our income for the purchase of new books and are aided materially by the lovely gift books we receive each month. Among the additions this week are some very fine books of permanent interest. Those who are interested in the work which is being done for retarded children will want to read "Retarded Children; God's Children" by Sigurd Petersen. A most interesting account of mysterious disappearance is "They Never Came Back" written by Allen Churchill. "I Was a Spy" by Marion Miller is the story of an American housewife who worked as an undercover agent for the F. B. I. An inspiring story of how one woman conquered the problem of blindness is "Farewell to Fear" by Tomi Keitlen. This is a heartening account and should be widely read.

Cookbooks are always popular and they are especially in demand at Christmas time. This week we have four new titles to recommend to you. "The I Hate to Cook Book" is a humorous book written by Peg Bracken, which contains many short cuts to good cooking for the career girl. One of the most beautiful cookbooks of recent years is "The Ladies Home Journal Cookbook" which contains reprints of many of the fine recipes which have appeared in that periodical. It is beautifully illustrated and would make a lovely Christmas gift. "The Hospitality Cookbook" compiled by Elizabeth Bonnell McCuaig is a collection of the favorite recipes of minister's wives. It contains many hints on cooking for large crowds. If you are interested in exotic and unusual food, you will want to see "The Complete Book of Gourmet Cooking for the American Kitchen" by Myra Waldo. It contains recipes which you are not apt to find in other places.

"Figleaf" by Eve Merriam is a very interesting account of the fashion industry and will interest women who buy clothes and people who sell them. "On Art and Artists" is a very splendid collection of essays by Aldous Huxley. Our patrons are always interested in books about gardens and gardening and a new title in this category is welcome. The latest one in this field is "A Pictorial Guide to American Gardens" by Louis H. Frohman and Jean Elliot. This is a book which will be heartily enjoyed.

An interesting book about current world affairs is "Assignment in Israel" by Bernard Mandelbaum. It contains much up - to - date information and is most authentic. An exciting account of adventure during World War II is called "The Rome Escape Line" and was written by Sam Derry. It is an account of the British organization in Rome, designed to help escaped Prisoners of War. Terrence Prittie is the author of "Germany Divided" which tells just how the division of Germany into East and West has affected the German people. "The Sabres of Paradise" by Lesly Blanch deals with the conflict between the Russians and the muslims in early nineteenth century. It is an exciting book which deals with a little - known period of history. Those who are concerned with the communist regime in Cuba should read "Red Star Over Cuba" by Nathaniel Weyl. This is a thoughtful and informative book.

Another of the many books being published this year about the Civil War is "She Rode With the Generals" by Sylvia G. L. Dannett. It is an account of Sara Emma Edmundson who masqueraded as a man during the war period.

Biographies are always in demand and there are two new ones this week. One is "The Buried Day," a very thoughtful and penetrating book by Cecil Day-Lewis. The other is "Uncorking Old Sherry" by Oscar Sherwin. This is an account of the life and times of Richard Brinsley Sheridan and will be widely used by students of the history of English drama. Reference books are the backbone of our collection and we added two fine ones this week. One is "The Reader's Adviser and Bookman's Manual" by Hester R. Hoffman and the other is the 1961 edition of the Monroe - West Monroe City Directory. This book is in constant demand and we have one in each of our four branches.

The use of the Ouachita Parish Public Library is growing all the time and we invite all of you who are not using it, to do so.

RUNNING THE SCALES

Live Performances For Year Reviewed

By JOHN CALE
Staff Music Critic

As Christmas week comes our way again, we are tempted to modify the phrase, "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," to "America glories in excesses."

Many things, particularly automatic carols, are overdone during the Christmas - New Year season. On the other hand, more "hand tailored" locally performed Christmas music is taking place in homes, churches and schools throughout the country than ever before.

SOUNDS BETTER

Let it be declared therefore that pop's or big brother's vocal chords do a better job on "Silent Night," or "Deck the Halls" than electronic copies of Perry Como or even Bing Crosby.

As the year draws to an end, there are summary accounts making the rounds on everything from population growth and police statistics to the weather. Certainly the year 1960 had plenty to offer on the music and drama department in northeast Louisiana.

Little Theatre saw last spring's season to a finish with "Sabrina Fair," and a real costume ball, "Guys and Dolls." The latter brought a new voice and face to the local art players in the person of John Pierpont, who has a pleasing baritone, genial stage appearance and the ability to swat a mean Salvation Army drum when the script calls for it.

The same organization opened the fall season with a new director, Richard M. Clark, and promise of a new playhouse before the 1960-61 run closes out. Production thus far, "The Seven Year Itch" and "The Gazebo" both have shown a wide range of expression and excellent pacing.

MUSICALS

Other than "Guys and Dolls," Northeast presented "The King and I," also with a local cast, and a touring company came forward only several weeks ago with a first rate production of "Fiorello"

The Boris Goldovsky company's performance of "Don Giovanni" at Louisiana Tech marked a decided improvement over the same company's presentation of "Rigoletto" a season ago.

For lovers of band music, there was the U. S. Navy Band on the Northeast Concerts series last spring to be followed by the U.S. Marine Band which made appearances in Ruston and Ferriday. The Air Force Band will appear here next spring on the Northeast series.

Of different dimensions, but unique in its field, the Chris Barber Dixieland Band performed here after mastering the true New Orleans idiom in the heart of London, England. Perhaps more universal was the appeal of the Mantovani orchestra which played here in October.

Northeast student plays, which not only afford prospective teachers an opportunity to project their voices and dramatize a lesson, but are also ideal refresher courses for critics, included "Antigone," "The Cajun," "I'm a Fool," and "Ghosts." No reports as yet on action following measurements of seating and stage space in Brown Hall auditorium last spring. But hopes are high the much needed improvements will come during the next season or two.

"Dark at the Top of the Stairs," and "The Moon is Blue" were plays by touring companies which missed the dramatic mark. In both cases, weaknesses in the cast caused the fumble.

To end on the opening subject of excesses, the year also brought one of the chillers of the century in the Alfred Hitchcock movie, "Psycho." Of course, one of the players in this horror piece was three times sick. But how many more were also made ill for having gone through the hitches under Hitchcock in the audience? This movie may prove to be the "last word" in a gruesome era.

Social Lion Hunter Draws Another Bead

WHO KILLED SOCIETY? By Cleveland Amory. Harper. $6.50.

First "The Proper Bostonians," then "The Last Resorts" and now this book to climax the trilogy—this winds up a major probe of life spectacularly on the right side of the railroad tracks, the very tracks being torn up today in so many places.

For 350 years society, according to social commentators, has been dying, and there are obituary quotes, often surprisingly hilarious, from 1945, 1913, 1868, 1847, 1774 and so on back. They cover the country, too, as does Amory's whole story, ranging from Boston and New York to Detroit, Charleston, Dallas, Baltimore, San Francisco, Cleveland, St. Louis, Cincinnati. The reasons for its demise, Amory suggests, come under four or five headings; among some 75 subtopics are the servant problem, taxes, the Windsors, two wars, the telephone, the auto, the Russians, Elsa Maxwell, Perle Mesta, the Diners' Club.

Society, by this author's definition, is a comparative state: "To anyone who made his social reputation a generation earlier, someone who made it a generation later is socially suspect." Then he goes on to examine social levels, groups, clubs, and individuals. Society is in the middle, social figures disintegrate or they occasionally take on stature; the direction is celebrity to society to aristocracy. While Amory is harsh on Astors, Vanderbilts, Guggenheims, Dukes and some others, he finds persisting quality in other names: Rockefeller, Lowell, Byrd, Adams, Lehman.

For serious history, this has very many very funny stories: The woman who twitted a fellow with having only one pair of shoes, and his retort: She had to ask what they were; the social club now so deteriorated "they can't even keep in the men they used to keep out;" "people in public relations seem to have an awf lot of trouble with private relations."

Whether you're creme de la creme or hoi polloi, this book will fascinate you. Amory the social lion hunter is a crack shot.

An Actor Gets No Passes Of His Own

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some notes on Broadway first nights:

It is a rare production in these years of restricted production and theater space that doesn't open to a full house, and all of the tickets except those for the critics, columnists and the like have been paid for by someone. An actor gets no passes for the premiere of his show.

So the importance of an opening is not necessarily gauged by the crowd inside the theater. The number of sidewalk curious is the indicator. The weather is a factor here, of course, but only in the case of a really foul night.

The sidewalk crowd is largest as the customers arrive at the theater. There are never as many onlookers when they leave.

There are no super - Hollywood touches to a stage opening, no blinding lights, no sidewalk radio ballyhoo. But the people are there mainly for the same reason that they go to the fancy motion picture premieres—hoping to get a look at celebrities as they arrive and leave. Show business personalities get the major attention.

Not all of the gawking is outside the theater either. Some first-nighters of non - celebrity calibre are reluctant to take their seats until the last minute, jamming up the lobby so they can watch the "names" go by.

There are always a few autograph-seekers on hand outside the theater. You see the same faces all the time; you might call them pros. They are the same ones you often see outside restaurants known to be favored by celebrities. Some of them carry cameras with which to photograph the stars.

The police detail in a block where an opening occurs is heavy, with mounted cops much in evidence. There is seldom an incident even in the case of the largest crowds.

A fixture beside the ticket-taker at every opening is a retired New York City detective who worked in the theater district for years while on the force and knows every dubious character by sight. The theater owners feel safer with him at the door.

Tribute To The Unknown Father In America

"What am I doing here?" novelist Jesse Stuart writes me not from his native Kentucky hills but from Cairo. "I am teaching at American University. I teach in Education and English. I'm 53 now and have been teaching since I was 17. I've been writing since I can remember. All you have to do to know why my sisters (three, all teachers), my brother — a former teacher and yet he wants to get back to it — and I are all teachers and have drive—you just read 'God's Oddling.' Our father did something, no waste of time, work for the night is coming, amount to something in life, conserve soil for the future, take care of animals and natural resources. He never let up. We had Spartan training at home. What a father!"

AT ELECTORS MEET

Kennedy To Get Gremillion Vote

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Jack P. F. Gremillion, Louisiana's segregationist attorney general, said Saturday he will cast his electoral vote for Democratic President-Elect John F. Kennedy.

Louisiana's 10 presidential electors meet in the office of Secretary of State Wade O. Martin here at 2 p.m. Monday to cast their ballots in the electoral college.

They were pledged to the Kennedy ticket. The Democratic president-elect had a 176,000-vote majority in Louisiana. The unpledged States Rights ticket, strongly segregationist, ran a poor third in the race.

The 56 -year- old Gremillion, elected to office last year on a segregation platform and known for his court battles against integration, came under intense pressure from hard core segregationists and White Citizens Councils to unpledge his electoral vote.

But Gremillion said in an interview he definitely will vote Democratic and he doesn't consider himself in a position of divided loyalty.

"The only course left," he said, "is the Democratic party, which we believe will look upon us with favor. I make this statement only for the benefit of those who seem to be confused."

Louisiana's nine other presidential electors also appeared set to cast their votes for Kennedy. Their position had not been as vulnerable as that of Gremillion.

The Louisiana attorney general, serving his second term in the post, is a Catholic like the incoming president and is from dominantly Catholic south Louisiana.

The Citizens Councils in a recent telegram demanded that he publicly state whether he is a champion of segregation or an elector who will vote for the Democratic party, whose civil rights platform gave no comfort whatever to the South.

Gremillion replied he was a loyal American, loyal Democrat and loyal Louisianian.

"I regard my electoral vote for Kennedy and Johnson as an expression of the public mind," Gremillion said. "If the system of unpledged electors succeeds as a measure of bargaining power it has to be an expression of the public mind."

He said only half the 300 or so letters and telegrams he received on the electoral vote issue urged him to unpledge his electoral vote.

MY ANSWER

by - Billy Graham

QUESTION: Do you think alcoholism is a sin?

P.P.B.

ANSWER: Alcoholism is one of the greatest tragedies of our day. There are probably five or six million of these unfortunate people in this country. Yes, alcoholism is a sin and the Bible clearly so states many times. But all of us are sinners in God's sight and what the alocholic needs is love and compassion, not blame. Through the constant use of alochol these people are usually covering up some deep emotional or personality sickness. They have come to the place where they are sick sinners, physically and spiritually. Alcoholics Anonymous is doing a wonderful work for these people, a work the Church needs to study and share in for they have developed techniques in dealing with the alcoholic which Christians should understand and use. While many people have been brought back to useful lives they all need in addition the presence and power of the living Christ in their lives. It is this message which the Church has but many alcoholics will never be reached by the Church until there is shown more compassion and understanding. It is my hope that the Church and individual Christians will undertake a broad program to help. In some ways alcoholics are comparable to the lepers of our Lord's time. He loved them and touched them to heal. The Church must do the same.

Many Church Groups Plan Yule Events

Churches throughout the Monroe area and the district are scheduling special programs and observances of the Christmas season.

Some of the programs will be held this evening, others are planned for mid-week, while others will take place on Christmas eve.

In connection with the Christmas season, church officials are reminding members and others, to remember the significance of the event being celebrated.

SOURCE

The reminder is also being offered that the source of the greatest Christmas story is the Bible, where the dramatic account of the birth of Christ unfolds.

Church services next Sunday will give many persons the opportunity to pause briefly in the rush of holiday activities and pay tribute to the one whose birthday is being remembered.

Living Nativity Scenes Arranged

"Living Nativity Scenes," presented by St. Paul's Methodist Church, Lexington Avenue, will depict the Christmas story on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

A project of the high school young people of the church, the scenes will show the traditional Christmas story in four views with real people and animals. Persons may drive by the church and view the scenes from their cars each night between 6:00 and 7:00. Last year almost 500 cars brought spectators through to share in the presentation.

Christmas Play Will Be Staged This Evening

A special Christmas program will be presented this evening at the College Town Assembly of God Church, 308 south McGuire, it was announced by the pastor, the Rev. E. J. Graves.

A play, "Angel on a Step Ladder," will be presented at 7:30 p.m., under the direction of Mrs. C. W. Martin, president of Christ Ambassadors, the church's young people's department. Members of the department will be in the cast, with the principal role, that of "Donnie Curtis," being portrayed by Gary Armstrong.

There will be 17 persons in the cast, and the play will last around an hour and 20 minutes.

Texas Speaker To Appear At Local Church

The scientific availability of God - given freedom will be the topic of a lecture scheduled for 3 p.m. today at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, auditorium, North 2nd and Auburn Ave.

The speaker will be Inman H. Douglass of Dallas, Tex., a member of the The Christian Science Board of Lectureship. He will speak on "Christian Science: Its Message of God - Given Freedom."

Douglass recently was a moderator on a number of television programs in the series, "How Christian Science Heals."

Annual Joy Gift Program Is Set By Church Here

Members of Covenant Presbyterian Church will stage the annual "Joy Gift" program this afternoon at 5, with a portrayal of the Christmas theme under the title of "Joy to the World."

Mrs. C. H. Wells will be in charge of the presentation. The service will be followed by a sandwich supper and then with a Christmas party for the Sunday School.

On Christmas morning the Sunday school and worship service will be combined into one service for the entire family at 10:30, with the Sunday School department having parts in the service.

Choir Scheduled For Appearance

The McClendon Baptist Church adult choir of West Monroe, under the direction of Billy C. Vaughn, will present a program of Christmas music entitled, "The Night of Miracles," this evening at 5 at the Gordon Avenue Methodist Church.

The Rev. W. M. Allen is pastor of the Gordon Avenue Church.

Film Feature To Be Shown

A film, "The Lottie Moon Story," will be shown at 6:45 this evening at Trinity Baptist Church, 214 Reagan Street, West Monroe.

Another feature of the same evening's program will be a sermon presented in song entitled, "The Story of Christmas."

THIS IS THE SEASON to remember that the greatest of all Christmas stories is contained in a book written as a guide to daily living and eternal life—the Bible.

ON CHRISTMAS CARDS

Peace On Earth, Popular Theme

NEW YORK (AP)—"Peace on earth," the message of the angels at Bethlehem, is more popular this year than ever before as a theme for Christmas cards.

"I think it must have something to do with concern over world tensions," said Stephen Q. Shannon, executive director of Greeting Card Association which studies such trends.

"And if there's no let up in the cold war," he said, "it wouldn't surprise me if the trend assumed major proportions."

Already assuming major proportions is the popularity of cards with a religious motif. This year more than 750 million cards—about 30 per cent of the total—stress the religious significance of Christmas. The trend has been growing steadily the past decade.

Shannon observes there is added emphasis this year on the idea of continuing peace, rather than just a repetition of the familiar "On earth, peace to men of good will."

Many cards, for example, have some variation of, "May the peace of Christmas remain with you forever." One says, "Peace on earth is here to stay if we live Christmas every day."

The latter example is typical of the spirit but not the meter inside this year's religious cards. Unlike most of the nonreligious type, the religious messages generally avoid sing-songy couplets in preference for simple, meaningful phrases.

"May the blessings of Christmas be with you today and always," says one. Other examples:

"May the spirit of Christmas bring joy to you and yours."

'Empty Room' Drama Slated

"The Empty Room," a dramatic presentation of the Christmas story, will be given at the College Place Baptist Church, Wednesday evening at 7:45.

The young people of the church are presenting the play which is being directed by Mrs. Joe Tippit. The cast for the play includes Pat Otwell, Jennie Clare Carroll, Susan Ferguson, Holly Sue Bayne, Wayne Bushnell, Deuel Smith, and Earl Posey.

Church pastor is the Rev. T. Earl Ogg.

Cantata Feature Is Scheduled

"The Cradle of Bethlehem," a Christmas cantata by Irene Berge, will be presented this evening at 7 at evening worship services of McGuire Methodist Church in West Monroe.

It will feature the choir under direction of Eugene Smith. Organist will be Mrs. John Clark Jr. Soloists will be, soprano, Mrs. Eugene Smith; alto, Miss Biddy Dupree; tenor, Peter Mangum; bass David Norris.

The Rev. Don Wineinger is pastor of the church.

Plans Are Set For Christmas Pageant Today

"Joy to the World," is the name of the Christmas pageant to be given at Memorial Presbyterian Church, North 4th at Mill Street in West Monroe, this evening at the 7:30 hour of worship.

Mrs. Percy Ford is pageant director. Music will be furnished by children of the Sunday school, the adult choir, and the congregation.

The pageant features the joy of Christ's coming with angels, shepherds and wise men joining in the praise of God for the gift of His Son. The center of the worship will be a manger scene, Joseph and Mary, and a light representative of Christ, the light of the world.

The climax of this dramatic worship will come when the minister lights his candle from one representative of the Christ, with elders of the church lighting the candles of the congregation.

Wednesday at 7 p.m. the annual Christmas tree program will be held at the church. Christmas carols will be sung, apples, oranges and candy given by Santa, and the Christmas story will be told.

Former Monroe Man Is Ordained

A former Monroe radio announcer and businessman, Wayne Gentry, last Sunday was ordained in services at Paron Baptist Church at Sterlington, where he will serve as minister.

He was a resident of Monroe for 25 years. He is married, has a son 3½, and will reside at Spencer. He attended Baptist College at Springfield, Mo.

The ordination sermon was delivered by the Rev. Paul Sullivan of Spencer Baptist Church. The Rev. P. M. Guice, of Monroe, former pastor of the Victory Baptist Church delivered the charge to the church.

Many Church Groups Plan Yule Events

Churches throughout the Monroe area and the district are scheduling special programs and observances of the Christmas season.

Some of the programs will be held this evening, others are planned for mid-week, while others will take place on Christmas eve.

In connection with the Christmas season, church officials are reminding members and others, to remember the significance of the event being celebrated.

SOURCE

The reminder is also being offered that the source of the greatest Christmas story is the Bible, where the dramatic account of the birth of Christ unfolds.

Church services next Sunday will give many persons the opportunity to pause briefly in the rush of holiday activities and pay tribute to the one whose birthday is being remembered.

Living Nativity Scenes Arranged

"Living Nativity Scenes," presented by St. Paul's Methodist Church, Lexington Avenue, will depict the Christmas story on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

A project of the high school young people of the church, the scenes will show the traditional Christmas story in four views with real people and animals. Persons may drive by the church and view the scenes from their cars each night between 6:00 and 7:00. Last year almost 500 cars brought spectators through to share in the presentation.

Christmas Play Will Be Staged This Evening

A special Christmas program will be presented this evening at the College Town Assembly of God Church, 308 south McGuire, it was announced by the pastor, the Rev. E. J. Graves.

A play, "Angel on a Step Ladder," will be presented at 7:30 p.m., under the direction of Mrs. C. W. Martin, president of Christ Ambassadors, the church's young people's department. Members of the department will be in the cast, with the principal role, that of "Donnie Curtis," being portrayed by Gary Armstrong.

There will be 17 persons in the cast, and the play will last around an hour and 20 minutes.

Texas Speaker To Appear At Local Church

The scientific availability of God - given freedom will be the topic of a lecture scheduled for 3 p.m. today at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, auditorium, North 2nd and Auburn Ave.

The speaker will be Inman H. Douglass of Dallas, Tex., a member of the The Christian Science Board of Lectureship. He will speak on "Christian Science: Its Message of God - Given Freedom."

Douglass recently was a moderator on a number of television programs in the series, "How Christian Science Heals."

Annual Joy Gift Program Is Set By Church Here

Members of Covenant Presbyterian Church will stage the annual "Joy Gift" program this afternoon at 5, with a portrayal of the Christmas theme under the title of "Joy to the World."

Mrs. C. H. Wells will be in charge of the presentation. The service will be followed by a sandwich supper and then with a Christmas party for the Sunday School.

On Christmas morning the Sunday school and worship service will be combined into one service for the entire family at 10:30, with the Sunday School department having parts in the service.

Choir Scheduled For Appearance

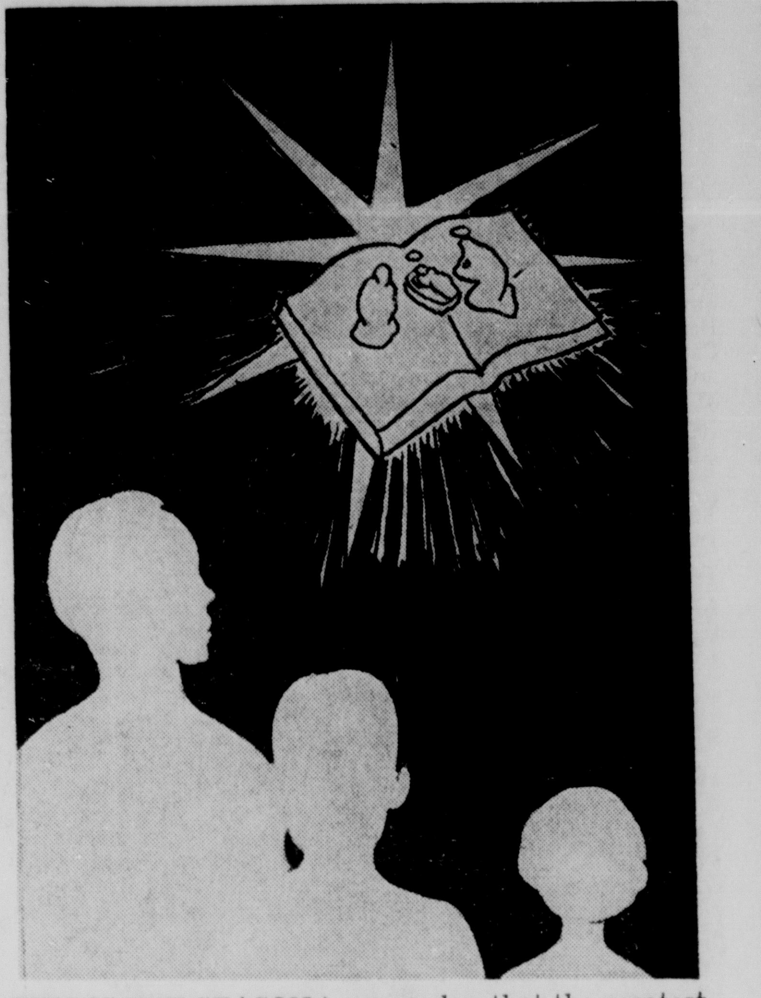
The McClendon Baptist Church adult choir of West Monroe, under the direction of Billy C. Vaughn, will present a program of Christmas music entitled, "The Night of Miracles," this evening at 5 at the Gordon Avenue Methodist Church.

The Rev. W. M. Allen is pastor of the Gordon Avenue Church.

Film Feature To Be Shown

A film, "The Lottie Moon Story," will be shown at 6:45 this evening at Trinity Baptist Church, 214 Reagan Street, West Monroe.

Another feature of the same evening's program will be a sermon presented in song entitled, "The Story of Christmas."



THIS IS THE SEASON to remember that the greatest of all Christmas stories is contained in a book written as a guide to daily living and eternal life—the Bible.

ON CHRISTMAS CARDS

Peace On Earth, Popular Theme

NEW YORK (AP)—"Peace on earth," the message of the angels at Bethlehem, is more popular this year than ever before as a theme for Christmas cards.

"I think it must have something to do with concern over world tensions," said Stephen Q. Shannon, executive director of Greeting Card Association which studies such trends.

"And if there's no let up in the cold war," he said, "it wouldn't surprise me if the trend assumed major proportions."

Already assuming major proportions is the popularity of cards with a religious motif. This year more than 750 million cards—about 30 per cent of the total—stress the religious significance of Christmas. The trend has been growing steadily the past decade.

Shannon observes there is added emphasis this year on the idea of continuing peace, rather than just a repetition of the familiar "On earth, peace to men of good will."

Many cards, for example, have some variation of, "May the peace of Christmas remain with you forever." One says, "Peace on earth is here to stay if we live Christmas every day."

The latter example is typical of the spirit but not the meter inside this year's religious cards. Unlike most of the nonreligious type, the religious messages generally avoid sing-songy couplets in preference for simple, meaningful phrases.

"May the blessings of Christmas be with you today and always," says one. Other examples: "May the spirit of Christmas bring joy to you and yours."

'Empty Room' Drama Slated

"The Empty Room," a dramatic presentation of the Christmas story, will be given at the College Place Baptist Church, Wednesday evening at 7:45.

The young people of the church are presenting the play which is being directed by Mrs. Joe Tippit. The cast for the play includes Pat Otwell, Jennie Clare Carroll, Susan Ferguson, Holly Sue Bayne, Wayne Bushnell, Deuel Smith, and Earl Posey.

Church pastor is the Rev. T. Earl Ogg.

Cantata Feature Is Scheduled

"The Cradle of Bethlehem," a Christmas cantata by Irene Berge, will be presented this evening at 7 at evening worship services of McGuire Methodist Church in West Monroe.

It will feature the church choir under direction of Eugene Smith. Organist will be Mrs. John Clark Jr. Soloists will be Mrs. Eugene Smith; alto, Miss Biddy Dupree; tenor, Peter Mangum; bass David Norris.

The Rev. Don Wineinger is pastor of the church.

Plans Are Set For Christmas Pageant Today

"Joy to the World," is the name of the Christmas pageant to be given at Memorial Presbyterian Church, North 4th at Mill Street in West Monroe, this evening at the 7:30 hour of worship.

Mrs. Percy Ford is pageant director. Music will be furnished by children of the Sunday school, the adult choir, and the congregation.

The pageant features the joy of Christ's coming with angels, shepherds and wise men joining in the praise of God for the gift of His Son. The center of the worship will be a manger scene, Joseph and Mary, and a light representative of Christ, the light of the world.

The climax of this dramatic worship will come when the minister lights his candle from one representative of the Christ, with elders of the church lighting the candles of the congregation.

Wednesday at 7 p.m. the annual Christmas tree program will be held at the church. Christmas carols will be sung, apples, oranges and candy given by Santa, and the Christmas story will be told.

JACQUELINE KENNEDY

Future First Lady Planning Wardrobe

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Future First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy is not only planning her own wardrobe for the White House, but that of her daughter Caroline, .

Convalescing after the birth of her second child, Mrs. Kennedy has been busy seeing that Caroline has everything from bathing suits to party dresses for some time to come.

While Mrs. Kennedy herself is staying at home, she sent Caroline out this week with her governess and a Secret Service agent to a Palm Beach shop that specializes in children's clothes, fine lingerie and linens, and has long been patronized by the Kennedys.

The shop owner, Estelle Parker, who helped provide Mrs. Kennedy's trousseau when she married Sen. John F. Kennedy, was busy outfitting Caroline.

With an eye to the future, dresses and garments for Caroline "now a perfect size 3" have been ordered in sizes "toddler 4, regular 4 and some 5's" so she can grow into them.

Governess Maude Shaw came in with a description of what Mrs. Kennedy wanted for her daughter and a goodly selection was sent to the Kennedy home for approval.

Mrs. Parker's shop on Worth Avenue, swank shopping center, has children's dresses costing as much as $79.50 each.

In fact, Mrs. Parker said one such item, "real lace, hand embroidered and very elaborate," was sent in the batch for Mrs. Kennedy's selection, but she sent it back according to Mrs. Parker as being "too elaborate and too expensive."

Mrs. Parker, an international appraiser of antique lace for museums and private collections, said Mrs. Kennedy has "very good taste and likes simplicity, good texture and good coloring."

All the clothes she selected were "very simple and very tailored," and the prices averaged about $17.95. Mrs. Parker didn't say how big Mrs. Kennedy's order was.

A party dress of pale pink, with hand embroidered roses and tucks so it can be lengthened as Caroline grows, cost $39.50, she said, and was the most expensive one ordered.

Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy, wife of the president-elect's brother, also paid a visit to the Parker shop and got her seven children outfits, each embroidered with a tiny Christmas tree emblem, to wear to their family holiday party to be held at their McLean, Va., home on Christmas Day.

Castro Unleashes Wrath At Church

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro again unleashed his wrath on the Roman Catholic Church Saturday with an accusation that "some priests" in Cuba encourage the murder of government officials.

He also promised to purge Cuba's judicial system, criticizing it for failing to adapt to the revolution. He thundered that he will throw out bad judges.

The bearded prime minister poured out his fury in a 3½-hour oration at a labor rally held after midnight. He ordered a big military parade held Jan. 2.

Manuel Cardinal Arteaga, infirm and semiretired at 81, was called a Judas. The aged cardinal heads the church hierarchy in Cuba, which privately has vowed not to bend before the regime.

Castro said the cardinal went to the presidential palace during the old regime of Fulgencio Batista "to exchange the kiss of Judas with the bloody dictator."

He said some priests "have reached really daring extremes in their counterrevolutionary activities: encouraging terrorism, encouraging crime, encouraging even assassination of officials of the revolutionary government, encouraging the criminal hands of blood-thirsty henchmen."

Castro indicated he would like to avoid conflicts with the church, saying "we hope they will reconsider that they become aware they are making a mistake."

He ridiculed a recent open letter from the Catholic bishops of Cuba, the most outspoken critics of Communist influence in the country. The letter protested the spread of Communist ideology and detailed a long list of grievances, including the detention of priests.

Castro said the letter was designed to depict his government as a persecutor in the eyes of the world.

"Allow me to remind you archbishops that one commandment of God is not to lie," he said.

Castro stated that religion and politics don't mix. He asked: "What does agrarian reform have to do with the Holy Trinity? What does a cooperative have to do with a convent?"

Castro bluntly ratified as a government line the concept "We indeed believe that to be anti-Communist is to be counterrevolutionary." But he added this concept is true in another sense as well—that to be anti-Catholic or to promote anything that divides the people also is counterrevolutionary.

High Catholic officials had no immediate reaction to Castro's outbursts. One source said such an outcry had been expected.

Castro's blast at the judges was prompted by a recent wave of defections within judicial ranks, including the Cuban Supreme Court president and an associate justice.

He accused the judicial branch of always having been an instrument of the rich and said the defections were no surprise to him.

Northeast R TC Honor Society Initiates Seven

Four Northeast State ROTC cadets and three associate members have been initiated into "B" Company, 13th Regiment of Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military fraternity.

Students who have become active members are Cadet 1st Lt. Norman Garlington of Dry Prong; Cadet M-Sgt. Larry Denmon of Forest; Cadet 1st Sgt. Otis Hart of Monroe; and Cadet SFC Thomas Bates of Natchez, Miss.

The three associate members are Dr. W. R. Hammond, dean of the Division of Liberal Arts, Lt. Col. Lawrence R. Longfellow, professor of military science, and Capt. Jack B. Wilkes, assistant professor of military science.

Members officiating at the ceremony were Capt. Benjamin Robert Tatum, Halls Tenn.; 1st Lt. Robert McGough, Monroe; nd Lt. Donny Nolan, West Monroe; 1st Sgt. Don Holton, William Nielson, Jack Harper, all of Monroe; and Joe Swendsen, Oak Ridge.

Also present for the ritual was Capt. Earl Trabue, assistant professor of military science at Northeast, who is faculty adviser of Scabbard and Blade on campus.

Message Goes Mile Long Way

SINGAPORE (AP) — The U.S. and British embassies in Vientiane are about a mile apart but a message had to travel more than 4,000 miles to get from one to the other during last week's street fighting in the Laotian capital.

American officials wanted to inform the British that a British official was safe in American Embassy. The message fas radioed to Manila, relayed to the American consulate here, delivered to the British, who transmitted the information to their embassy in Vientiane.

Solon Calls For Election Law Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont) called Saturday — with the obvious general approval of President-elect John F. Kennedy — for an overhauling of the nation's elections system.

Mansfield, who is expected to become the Senate's majority leader, said he will introduce at the beginning of next month's session of Congress two measures to change the machinery in which Kennedy won one of the closest presidential contests in history.

One of these will be a proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college and choose presidents by direct popular vote.

The other would be proposed legislation to establish a national presidential primary, shorten presidential campaigning, provide for government financing of major party expenses and advance the inaugural date of new presidents to one month after the election.

Mansfield said in an interview that while he has not discussed these proposals specifically with Kennedy he is confident the incoming president wants something done to modernize the election machinery.

"I am making these proposals in black and white for the Senate to consider them," Mansfield said. "I don't expect them to be adopted in the form I have offered them. We have competent committees to work out the best formulas.

"But we must do something about a system in which an elector doesn't have to vote for the presidential candidate who carried his state."

Of Alabama's 11 electors, six who ran unpledged to any candidate have announced they will vote for Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., who was not a candidate. The other five plan to vote for Kennedy, who carried the state.

All the nation's electors will meet in state capitals Monday to cast their ballots.

If Mansfield's proposal for popular vote election of a president had been in effect, Kennedy would have won by a margin of 112,881 votes. But the outcome would have been in doubt until last Thursday when the final official vote was completed.

Mansfield said he is proposing to shorten campaigns by a law providing that national conventions shall not meet until September.

He said lengthy campaigns not only weary the candidates and the public but cause dangerous uncertainty abroad about American policies and intentions. He said the length of time between the November election and the Jan. 20 inaugural adds to this uncertainty.

Mansfield conceded there will be opposition to his proposal for the nominating of presidential candidates by a nationwide primary. But he said it is a matter that ought to be considered by Congress along with the suggestion for government financing of major party campaigns.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican Senate leader, said in a separate interview he agrees that there should be some overhauling of the election system.

Annual Rabbit Hunt Is Staged

HARMONY, N.C. (UPI) — The baying of the hounds drowned out cries of protest from the Humane Society Saturday and the annual "sticks and stones" rabbit hunt was held as scheduled.

More than 20 men and boys, accompanied by packs of flop-eared beagles fanned out over more than 1,000 acres of farmland for the hunt which the Humane Society termed "barbarous and cruel."

Despite threats by the protective group to put a stop to the event, in which shotguns and other firearms are barred, no Humane Society officials put in an appearance.

Participants gathered around a big bonfire prior to the hunt, sponsored by the North Iredell (county) American Legion post.

Castro indicated he would like to avoid conflicts with the church, saying "we hope they will reconsider that they become aware they are making a mistake."

He ridiculed a recent open letter from the Catholic bishops of Cuba, the most outspoken critics of Communist influence in the country. The letter protested the spread of Communist ideology and detailed a long list of grievances, including the detention of priests.

Castro said the letter was designed to depict his government as a persecutor in the eyes of the world.

"Allow me to remind you archbishops that one commandment of God is not to lie," he said.

Castro stated that religion and politics don't mix. He asked: "What does agrarian reform have to do with the Holy Trinity? What does a cooperative have to do with a convent?"

Castro bluntly ratified as a government line the concept "We indeed believe that to be anti-Communist is to be counterrevolutionary." But he added this concept is true in another sense as well—that to be anti-Catholic or to promote anything that divides the people also is counterrevolutionary.

High Catholic officials had no immediate reaction to Castro's outbursts. One source said such an outcry had been expected.

Castro's blast at the judges was prompted by a recent wave of defections within judicial ranks, including the Cuban Supreme Court president and an associate justice.

He accused the judicial branch of always having been an instrument of the rich and said the defections were no surprise to him.

Message Goes Mile Long Way

SINGAPORE (AP) — The U.S. and British embassies in Vientiane are about a mile apart but a message had to travel more than 4,000 miles to get from one to the other during last week's street fighting in the Laotian capital.

American officials wanted to inform the British that a British official was safe in American Embassy. The message fas radioed to Manila, relayed to the American consulate here, delivered to the British, who transmitted the information to their embassy in Vientiane.

Solon Calls For Election Law Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont) called Saturday — with the obvious general approval of President-elect John F. Kennedy — for an overhauling of the nation's elections system.

Mansfield, who is expected to become the Senate's majority leader, said he will introduce at the beginning of next month's session of Congress two measures to change the machinery in which Kennedy won one of the closest presidential contests in history.

One of these will be a proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college and choose presidents by direct popular vote.

The other would be proposed legislation to establish a national presidential primary, shorten presidential campaigning, provide for government financing of major party expenses and advance the inaugural date of new presidents to one month after the election.

Mansfield said in an interview that while he has not discussed these proposals specifically with Kennedy he is confident the incoming president wants something done to modernize the election machinery.

"I am making these proposals in black and white for the Senate to consider them," Mansfield said. "I don't expect them to be adopted in the form I have offered them. We have competent committees to work out the best formulas.

"But we must do something about a system in which an elector doesn't have to vote for the presidential candidate who carried his state."

Of Alabama's 11 electors, six who ran unpledged to any candidate have announced they will vote for Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., who was not a candidate. The other five plan to vote for Kennedy, who carried the state.

All the nation's electors will meet in state capitals Monday to cast their ballots.

If Mansfield's proposal for popular vote election of a president had been in effect, Kennedy would have won by a margin of 112,881 votes. But the outcome would have been in doubt until last Thursday when the final official vote was completed.

Mansfield said he is proposing to shorten campaigns by a law providing that national conventions shall not meet until September.

He said lengthy campaigns not only weary the candidates and the public but cause dangerous uncertainty abroad about American policies and intentions. He said the length of time between the November election and the Jan. 20 inaugural adds to this uncertainty.

Mansfield conceded there will be opposition to his proposal for the nominating of presidential candidates by a nationwide primary. But he said it is a matter that ought to be considered by Congress along with the suggestion for government financing of major party campaigns.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican Senate leader, said in a separate interview he agrees that there should be some overhauling of the election system.

Annual Rabbit Hunt Is Staged

HARMONY, N.C. (UPI) — The baying of the hounds drowned out cries of protest from the Humane Society Saturday and the annual "sticks and stones" rabbit hunt was held as scheduled.

More than 20 men and boys, accompanied by packs of flop-eared beagles fanned out over more than 1,000 acres of farmland for the hunt which the Humane Society termed "barbarous and cruel."

Despite threats by the protective group to put a stop to the event, in which shotguns and other firearms are barred, no Humane Society officials put in an appearance.

Participants gathered around a big bonfire prior to the hunt, sponsored by the North Iredell (county) American Legion post.

BREAK WITH PAST

Kennedy Regime Begins New Era

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect John E. Kennedy's administration will be the first wave of the future.

By electing Kennedy, 43, president, this country—alone among the big nations — has made the first clean break with the past.

One by one in the 1960s the giants who dominate the world scene now—all either ancient or aging—will disappear off the stage of history.

By the end of this decade most, probably all, will be out of position of leadership.

Kennedy alone among the big world leaders is both young and new in the sense that he has no direct link with the past in making, shaking or shaping the world.

The others, like retiring President Eisenhower, are holdovers from the past.

Eisenhower, now 70, is typical of those others. In one way or another—in his case in several ways—he was one of the active forces in molding the world of the pre-1960s.

He was allied commander in Europe during the war, commander of NATO in Europe in the early 1950s, and President eight years.

But all of the present world leaders either came to prominence, and retained it, during and after the war or even preceding the war.

Nowhere among the big nations since the war, until now in the case of Kennedy, has a new and young man appeared.

Take some examples: West Germany's Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, now 84, emerged after the war and has been the German leader since.

French President Charles de Gaulle, now 70, emerged as leader of the Free French during the war, served as president, retired, and now has come back to dominate France again.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev, 66, built up stature during the war by his services under Stalin and has been the real Soviet leader since the old dictator died in 1953.

British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, 66, has a long record of public service but didn't reach the top spot until 1957.

Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito, 68, became his country's leader during the war and still is in charge.

Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek, 72, was a towering figure in China as long ago as the 1920s and, although the Red Chinese threw him off the mainland, he's still boss on Formosa. Of all the present world leaders, Chiang has the longest record of holding the top job.

India's Prime Minister Nehru, 71, was long a prominent figure in his country, although overshadowed by Ghandi. He became a giant after the war.

In Spain there is Generalissimo Francisco Franco, 68, who took charge in the 1930s and is still boss.

And finally there is Red China's Mao Tze-tung, 67. He was leader of the Chinese Communists before the war and now that they dominate mainland China he, still is top man.

While it may seem extraordinary that this country should have chosen a man of 43 for its leader, young leaders may be the rule by the end of this decade, not the exception.

With the younger men will come new ideas and new energies which in retrospect may make the turmoil of 1960 look like a collection of stupidities or, by comparison with what lies ahead, a golden age of peace and quiet.

GETS CABINET POST

Robert Kennedy Outspoken Type

PERSONALITY SPOTLIGHT
By United Press International

At one period in the recent past, Robert F. Kennedy whose appointment as U. S. Attorney General was announced Friday—often found himself in this kind of conversation at an airport, railroad station or on a street:

Citizen: Aren't you Sen. Kennedy?

Kennedy: Well, I'm Kennedy, but not . . .

Citizen: Senator, I'm glad to meet you. Say, who is that fellow who sits next to you on the Senate Rackets Committee? He's a dead ringer for you.

Now that Americans have taken a closer look at all the Kennedys, the chance of confusing Sen. John F. Kennedy, the President-elect, with Robert F. Kennedy—the fellow sitting next to the senator—is less likely.

Those who have watched the two men at work in Washington in the last 10 years never have had trouble keeping their identities separate.

Robert, at 35, the younger brother by seven years, is far more vigorous and outgoing in speech and manner than the more withdrawn senator. He smiles easier and gets angry quicker than the senator.

The senator dresses like a fashion plate; Robert has often been seen coatless, his shirt-tail out, striding about the Senate off building.

Robert Kennedy, who even his severest critics usually end up calling "Bobby," has already had one year of experience in the Justice Department's Criminal Division; one year's experience on the legal staff of the Hoover government reorganization commission; and more than six year's experience with Senate investigating committees—the most notable as chief counsel of the Senate Committee on Improper Practices in Labor and Management.

Back of this, Kennedy has degrees from Harvard College — where he played two years of varsity football—and the University of Virginia Law School. He also was a seaman for two years aboard the destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy Jr.—named in honor of another older brother who was killed in World War II—and covered the war in Palestine for one year for a Boston newspaper. The Junior Chamber of Commerce named him one of the nation's "10 outstanding young men" in 1954.

And finally, he's the leading family man of the entire Kennedy clan, save his father who had nine children.

Kennedy and his wife, the former Ethel Skakel, have had seven children since 1950, three girls and four boys aged 9, 8, 6, 5, 4, 2 and 1.

This boisterous crew lives in a 12-bedroom house built before the Civil War near McLean, Va., outside Washington. The property has room for horseback riding and most important the Kennedy family sport—touch football.

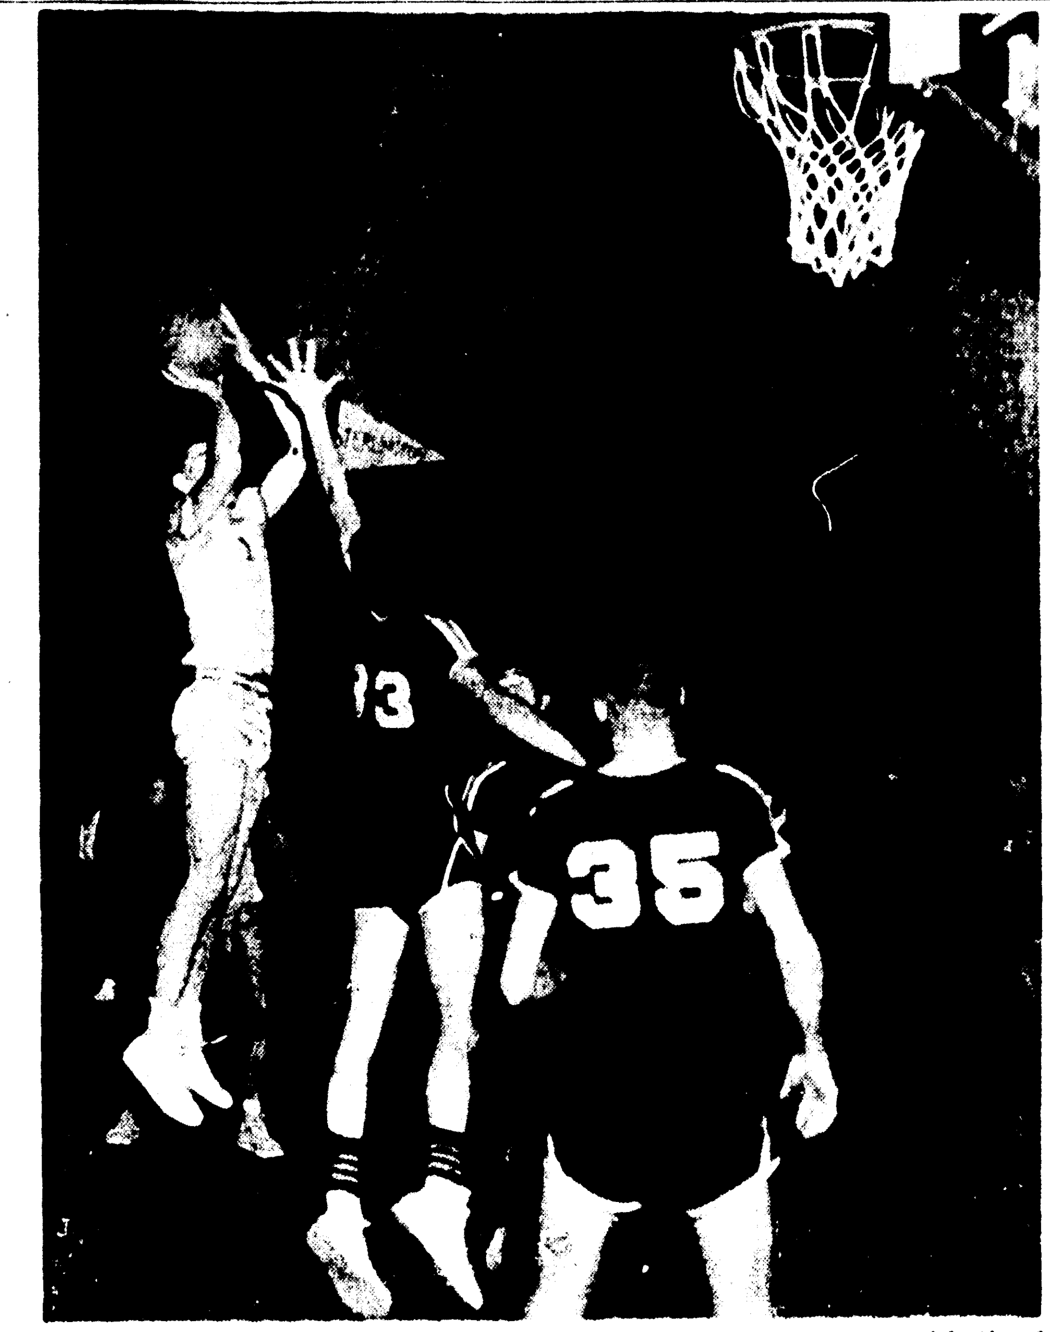
Dubberly Edges Neville In Title Finals



DUBBERLY'S J. C. Bearden prepares to launch one of his deadly jump shots against Neville in the finals of the Neville Invitational Tournament at the Tiger gym last night but Bengal star Truett Nolan (33) makes with the defense. Rebounding specialist for the Tigers, Butch Cerniglia, (35), awaits the shot. Dubberly won the game, 46-45, in final seconds of play.

Tigers Lose, 46-45 In Last 10 Seconds

By JERRY HARKNESS
Staff Sports Writer

Dubberly High School, pushed every second of the way by Neville's fast-breaking cagers, watched two Tiger field goal attempts roll off the rim in the last ten seconds of play and held on to grab a 45-46 win over the Bengals in the finals of the Neville Invitational Tournament last night.

Jena's well - coached girls downed West Monroe, 49-41 to take top honors in the girls' bracket, and Forest took an earlier loss to Dubberly out on Calhoun, 93-54 in the boys' consolation game. Neville won the girls' consolation trophy by downing Ouachita, 51-35.

Dubberly, going into the final game favored over Neville, had to come from behind as George Davis' Tigers stunned the visitors with a swift offense to open the tilt and pushed into an 18-13 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Frank Keith hit from the outside and Truett Nolan handled the inside shooting for the Tigers, with Mike Fettinger and Butch Cerniglia clearing the boards over the high jumping Bearden twins from Dubberly throughout most of the first half.

Dubberly began to nail its share of the rebounds in the second quarter and Bootsie Holley led a rally that cut the Tiger lead to 32-30 during the third period and sent the Eagles into the lead, 36-34, going into the final period.

The last quarter was a wild give and take affair that had the crowd standing for the last two minutes of play. The Eagles jumped out ahead 46-43 with 1:15 minutes left but the Tigers took advantage of a four foul situation on both the Bearden twins to drive in for a layup that brought the locals to within one point, 46-45 with 30 seconds left.

Dubberly, trying to freeze the ball for the remaining seconds, lost possession and as Eddie Kincaid grabbed the ball for the Tigers and called time out. With only ten seconds left the Tigers got off two shots, one by Truett Nolan that hung on the rim and then fell no good, and the other as the buzzer sounded, by Eddie Kincaid, that took two bounces and also fell no good.

J. C. Bearden scored 15 points for the Bengals and Truett Nolan canned 19 for the Tigers.

Neville broke into the finals by shooting down Calhoun's Chieftans, 69-56. The Tigers were red-hot from the start, getting a 12-2 first quarter advantage and opening it up to 28-14 at the half. Calhoun's smooth - working star Scottie Sims played his usual fine game, racking up 31 points against the Bengals but Neville's well balanced attack of big Truett Nolan, playmaking Eddie Kincaid and steady Butch Cerniglia spread the scoring and nailed down the win.

Nolan got 17 points, Kincaid 16, and Cerniglia 11 for the Tigers.

Dubberly jumped into its final berth with a complete rout of Forest, a team that held a 14-1 record going into the game. Dubberly's Eagles, coached by Don Stahl, threw a fired-up attack at Forest and had Larry Butler and crew completely helpless in the final quarter, scoring almost at will in roaring to the 64-33 win. High-jumping J. C. Bearden scored 31 points for the Eagles, while brother W. C., got 10 points and helped control the backbaords against Forest.

West Monroe's girls advanced to the finals by whipping Ouachita, 57-42. Smith led West Monroe with 33 points and Ouachita's Glynn scored 33.

In the consolation game Raymond Mariche scored 43 points to pace the Forest win over Calhoun and Scotty Sims got 26 for the Chieftans.

In the girls' finals Edwina Skrable picked up 30 points in Jena's win over West Monroe, while Nancy Smith got 21 for the Rebels.

Nixon On Way Out As Skin Grid Coach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mike Nixon is on his way out as coach of the Washington Redskins who Saturday end their worst season since pitching their tents here 23 years ago.

The signs point to Bill McPeak, now Nixon's top assistant, to become the next head of the tail-enders of the National Football League's Eastern Division.

Even if the 'Skins should upset the Philadelphia Eagles, it would not be enough to save the 49-year-old Nixon's job. The Washington team had a 1-8-2 record.

Owner George Preston Marshall hasn't committed himself publicly, but he has said a pro football coach's life is governed by the fans.

And the long-loyal Redskin fans are grumbling about a team that's been able to beat only the winless Dallas Cowboys this year.

Last season — Nixon's first as head Redskin coach — his team had a 3-9 record. Until this year, that tied the Skins' worst performance.

Although Nixon reportedly has been offered a job as Redskins director of player personnel, indications are he will leave the club.

His contract expires this year, his 17th in the NFL as player and coach.

Nixon was moved up from assistant coach when Joe Kuharich left to coach at Notre Dame.

And it appears the pattern will hold this time, with the 34-year-old McPeak stepping in behind the man he has been assisting.

Like Nixon, McPeak starred at the University of Pittsburgh. He was All-Pro defensive end for the Pittsburgh Steelers before turning to coaching.

A native of New Castle, Pa., McPeak joined the Redskins' staff last year.

RINGGOLD DOWNS LAGRANGE

St. Matthew's Places Third By Stopping Sulphur, 64-51

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) — A couple of defending state champions, Class A St. Matthew's of Monroe and Class B Ringgold were the masters of triple-A opponents as they brushed aside Sulphur and LaGrange of Lake Charles in the consolation and championship finals of the American Press Basketball Tournament here last night.

Ringgold emerged as tournament champion by shelling LaGrange, 65-54, after the Fighting Irish of St. Matthew's had outlasted Sulphur, 64-51, in a rip-snorter.

The St. Matthew's - Sulphur game was tied nine times and the lead changed hands eleven times in the first three quarters. The Irish led only one point at the end of the third period after seeing the Tors ahead 26-24 at the half.

Sulphur grabbed a quick lead in the fourth, but "Buddy" Embanato, Charles Biggar, and John Varino hit on jump shots, and Frankie Accardo got in a gift shot to shoot the Irish into a 50-44 lead. Then Sulphur rallied to whittle the edge to 52-49 with three minutes left, but the Irish went wild at the foul line.

St. Matthew's wrapped it up with eight straight points, all on 1-and-1 free throws as Sulphur committed fouls pressing to get possession of the ball. The eight straight fouls went Embanato, four; Varino and Biggar, two each.

Barrie Hayne scored 22 points in leading the Ringgold victory over LaGrange. Charlie Mims was high scorer for the Gators with 21.

High scorers in the Sulphur-St. Matthew's scramble were Varino, 21; Embanato, 14; Accardo, 12, and Biggar, 10, for the Monroe cagers, and Eddie Nelson, 19, and Bob Bornscheuer, 13, Sulphur. Twelve of Embanato's 14 points were made from the foul line.

Tired Virginia Suffers Sixth Straight Loss

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP)—A 32-point blast by West Virginia's sophomore sensation, Bob Thorn, helped send a weary and winless Virginia basketball team reeling to its sixth straight defeat Saturday night, 104-85.

The Cavaliers showed weariness early in the game. They had a long 10-hour train ride from Charlottesville, Va., to Charleston. They left at 4 a.m. after losing to Wake Forest at home Friday night.

The Mountaineers, now 4-2, were never behind and had a 62-40 halftime bulge.

Tony LaQuintano, Virginia junior, scored 41 points and his 19 field goals set a school record.

Tigers Lose, 46-45 In Last 10 Seconds

By JERRY HARKNESS
Staff Sports Writer

Dubberly High School, pushed every second of the way by Neville's fast-breaking cagers, watched two Tiger field goal attempts roll off the rim in the last ten seconds of play and held on to grab a 45-46 win over the Bengals in the finals of the Neville Invitational Tournament last night.

Jena's well - coached girls downed West Monroe, 49-41 to take top honors in the girls' bracket, and Forest took an earlier loss to Dubberly out on Calhoun, 93-54 in the boys' consolation game. Neville won the girls' consolation trophy by downing Ouachita, 51-35.

Dubberly, going into the final game favored over Neville, had to come from behind as George Davis' Tigers stunned the visitors with a swift offense to open the tilt and pushed into an 18-13 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Frank Keith hit from the outside and Truett Nolan handled the inside shooting for the Tigers, with Mike Fettinger and Butch Cerniglia clearing the boards over the high jumping Bearden twins from Dubberly throughout most of the first half.

Dubberly began to nail its share of the rebounds in the second quarter and Bootsie Holley led a rally that cut the Tiger lead to 32-30 during the third period and sent the Eagles into the lead, 36-34, going into the final period.

The last quarter was a wild give and take affair that had the crowd standing for the last two minutes of play. The Eagles jumped out ahead 46-43 with 1:15 minutes left but the Tigers took advantage of a four foul situation on both the Bearden twins to drive in for a layup that brought the locals to within one point, 46-45 with 30 seconds left.

Dubberly, trying to freeze the ball for the remaining seconds, lost possession and as Eddie Kincaid grabbed the ball for the Tigers and called time out. With only ten seconds left the Tigers got off two shots, one by Truett Nolan that hung on the rim and then fell no good, and the other as the buzzer sounded, by Eddie Kincaid, that took two bounces and also fell no good.

J. C. Bearden scored 15 points for the Bengals and Truett Nolan canned 19 for the Tigers.

Neville broke into the finals by shooting down Calhoun's Chieftans, 69-56. The Tigers were red-hot from the start, getting a 12-2 first quarter advantage and opening it up to 28-14 at the half. Calhoun's smooth - working star Scottie Sims played his usual fine game, racking up 31 points against the Bengals but Neville's well balanced attack of big Truett Nolan, playmaking Eddie Kincaid and steady Butch Cerniglia spread the scoring and nailed down the win.

Nolan got 17 points, Kincaid 16, and Cerniglia 11 for the Tigers.

Dubberly jumped into its final berth with a complete rout of Forest, a team that held a 14-1 record going into the game. Dubberly's Eagles, coached by Don Stahl, threw a fired-up attack at Forest and had Larry Butler and crew completely helpless in the final quarter, scoring almost at will in roaring to the 64-38 win. High-jumping J. C. Bearden scored 31 points for the Eagles, while brother W. C., got 10 points and helped control the backbaords against Forest.

West Monroe's girls advanced to the finals by whipping Ouachita, 57-42. Smith led West Monroe with 38 points and Ouachita's Glynn scored 33.

In the consolation game Raymond Mariche scored 43 points to pace the Forest win over Calhoun and Scotty Sims got 26 for the Chieftans.

In the girls' finals Edwina Skrable picked up 30 points in Jena's win over West Monroe, while Nancy Smith got 21 for the Rebels.

Brenda Cobb scored 33 points to push Neville over Ouachita in girls' consolation and Janett Glyn scored 19 for Ouachita.

All - tournament selections in the boys' division were Scotty Sims, Calhoun; J. C. Bearden, Dubberly; Truett Nolan, Neville; Raymond Mariche, Forest; and W.C. Bearden, Dubberly.

All - tournament selections in girls' action were Edwina Skrable, Jena; Velma Walpole, Jena; Bonnie Jeter, Jena; Nancy Smith, West Monroe; Brenda Cobb, Neville; and Dianne LaGrange, Neville.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mike Nixon is on his way out as coach of the Washington Redskins who Saturday end their worst season since pitching their tents here 23 years ago.

The signs point to Bill McPeak, now Nixon's top assistant, to become the next head of the tail-enders of the National Football League's Eastern Division.

Even if the 'Skins should upset the Philadelphia Eagles, it would not be enough to save the 49-year-old Nixon's job. The Washington team had a 1-8-2 record.

Owner George Preston Marshall hasn't committed himself publicly, but he has said a pro football coach's life is governed by the fans.

And the long-loyal Redskin fans are grumbling about a team that's been able to beat only the winless Dallas Cowboys this year.

Last season — Nixon's first as head Redskin coach — his team had a 3-9 record. Until this year, that tied the Skins' worst performance.

Although Nixon reportedly has been offered a job as Redskins director of player personnel, indications are he will leave the club.

His contract expires this year, his 17th in the NFL as player and coach.

Nixon was moved up from assistant coach when Joe Kuharich left to coach at Notre Dame.

And it appears the pattern will hold this time, with the 34-year-old McPeak stepping in behind the man he has been assisting.

Like Nixon, McPeak starred at the University of Pittsburgh. He was All-Pro defensive end for the Pittsburgh Steelers before turning to coaching.

A native of New Castle, Pa., McPeak joined the Redskins' staff last year.

RINGGOLD DOWNS LAGRANGE

St. Matthew's Places Third By Stopping Sulphur, 64-51

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) — A couple of defending state champions, Class A St. Matthew's of Monroe and Class B Ringgold were the masters of triple-A opponents as they brushed aside Sulphur and LaGrange of Lake Charles in the consolation and championship finals of the American Press Basketball Tournament here last night.

Ringgold emerged as tournament champion by shelling LaGrange, 65-54, after the Fighting Irish of St. Matthew's had outlasted Sulphur, 64-51, in a rip-snorter.

The St. Matthew's - Sulphur game was tied nine times and the lead changed hands eleven times in the first three quarters. The Irish led only one point at the end of the third period after seeing the Tors ahead 26-24 at the half.

Sulphur grabbed a quick lead in the fourth, but "Buddy" Embanato, Charles Biggar, and John Varino hit on jump shots, and Frankie Accardo got in a gift shot to shoot the Irish into a 50-44 lead. Then Sulphur rallied to whittle the edge to 52-49 with three minutes left, but the Irish went wild at the foul line.

St. Matthew's wrapped it up with eight straight points, all on 1-and-1 free throws as Sulphur committed fouls pressing to get possession of the ball. The eight straight fouls went Embanato, four; Varino and Biggar, two each.

Barrie Hayne scored 22 points in leading the Ringgold victory over LaGrange. Charlie Mims was high scorer for the Gators with 21.

High scorers in the Sulphur-St. Matthew's scramble were Varino, 21; Embanato, 14; Accardo, 12, and Biggar, 10, for the Monroe cagers, and Eddie Nelson, 19, and Bob Bornscheuer, 13, Sulphur. Twelve of Embanato's 14 points were made from the foul line.

Embanato and Varino represented St. Matthew's on the ten-man all - tournament team that included Nelson and Bornscheuer, Sulphur; Haynie and Billy Ray, Ringgold; Joe Sovoie, Reeves; Glendon Hillman, Simpson; and Harold Watkins and Bryan Hirsch LaGrange.

Tired Virginia Suffers Sixth Straight Loss

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP)—A 32-point blast by West Virginia's sophomore sensation, Bob Thorn, helped send a weary and winless Virginia basketball team reeling to its sixth straight defeat Saturday night, 104-85.

Thorn, playing only three-fourths of the game, also pulled down 22 rebounds and turned in a fine floor game. He made 14 of 23 field goal attempts.

The Cavaliers showed weariness early in the game. They had a long 10-hour train ride from Charlottesville, Va., to Charleston. They left at 4 a.m. after losing to Wake Forest at home Friday night.

The Mountaineers, now 4-2, were never behind and had a 62-40 halftime bulge.

Tony LaQuintano, Virginia junior, scored 41 points and his 19 field goals set a school record.

Six Area Class B Football Stars Make All-State Team

By BERNELL BALLARD
Morning Advocate

BATON ROUGE, La. (Special)—Mighty St. James, shooting for its second straight Class B state championship, and scrappy Oberlin, a power - packed contender from the other side of the play-off bracket, lassoed three positions each to pace the 1960 Class B All - State football team selected by the Louisiana Sports Writers' Association.

For the second time, a 22-player first team was picked by Louisiana's binocular - eyed sports scribes, with double positions at each berth composing the star-studded mythical gridiron honor outfit.

Besides the pace - setting trio of posts nabbed by St. James and Oberlin, only two other schools, St. Bernard and Waterproof, were able to land more than one position on the squad with two berths a piece.

From St. James are back Gordon Troxclair, tackle Donovan Scioneaux and guard Erroll Lassere.

Oberlin is represented by back Hoyle Granger, quarterback Ray Reed and center Doward LaFleur.

St. Bernard's duo is composed of quarterback Dewey Robin and end Richard Emmons while Waterproof's pair of all - stars are guard Vic Mahoney and center Thomas Taylor.

Twelve other schools are represented on the team with one position each.

Sparking the talent - packed backfield unit are senior quarterbacks Dewey Robin of St. Bernard and Ray Reed of Oberlin, both repeaters from last year's Class B All - State team and unanimous choices on this season's squad.

While both had near - 50 per cent completion marks in the passing department, they turned in slick ball - handling performances while handling mostly ground-attack minded elevens this year.

Joining Robin and Reed in the backfield are Craig Henry of St. Michael, Hoyle Granger of Oberlin, Merlin Walet of Loreauville, C. J. Boudreaux of Dutchtown, Gordon Troxclair of St. James and Claud Patrick of Holly Ridge.

Granger and Patrick both juniors, and Henry and Walet were unanimous picks while Troxclair and Boudreaux received strong support to win berths in a star-rich race for all - state backfield honors.

Walet, a hard - charging 200-pounder, leads the team in scoring with 189 points. He carried the ball 159 times and stepped for 1,376 yards while sparking Loreauville a District 7- B championship.

Henry toted the pigskin 97 times for St. Michael's state playoff semi - finals runnersup, streaking for 1,420 yards and 163 points for the Crusaders.

Granger powered the drive for Oberlin's championship outfit as the line - cracking 215 - pound junior smashed for 1,394 yards in 115 trips and scored 139 points during regular - season action.

Patrick, another star who's only a junior this year, was a workhorse all the way for Holly Ridge's District 2-B titleholders. At 180 pounds, Patrick carried the mail 152 times, gobbled up 1,295 yards and scored 114 points.

Troxclair, St. James' dizzy stepping scatback, propelled the Wildcats into the Class B state finals for the second straight year by racing for 1,051 yards and 78 points in 167 carries during the regular season. Add to that his performance in three playoff victories for the title - seeking Wildcat eleven.

Boudreaux, the smallest man on the all - state squad at 128 pounds, didn't show it on the Dutchtown gridiron this season. He galloped right alongside the big boys in the statistics, picking up 1,004 yards in 171 carries while scoring 73 points for his 10 - B champion Dutchtown teammates.

At the ends, four players won unanimous selections. Named to the terminal posts were LeRoy McIntyre of Jonesville, Richard Emmons of St. Bernard, David Hartman of Donaldsonville and Brian Heinen of St. Edmund. All are seniors.

Seniors Donovan Scioneeux of St. James, Joe McCain of Newellton Girault Bird of Sicily Island, Plain Dealing furnish the team speed and power at the tackle spots. McCain, at 5 - 11 is the shortest of the quartet while s-worth, at 180 pounds, is the lightest.

At the guards are Kenneth Brousard of Louisiana School for the Deaf, Ronald Cady of Iowa, Erroll Lassere of St. James, all seniors, and Vic Mahoney of Waterproof, a junior.

The center positions are handled by Thomas Taylor, 186 - pound senior from Waterproof, and Dward LaFLeur, 175 - pound senior from Oberlin.

Groat's .325 Gets Official Batting Title

CINCINNATI (AP)—The National League made it official Saturday that Dick Groat of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates won the 1960 league batting championship with the lowest winning average since 1919.

Official averages showed Groat, with 186 hits in 573 times at bat in 138 games, hit .325. Groat, who missed most of September because of an injury, nosed out Norm Larker of the Los Angeles Dodgers by two percentage points.

Ed D. Roush of the Cincinnati Reds led the league with a .319 mark in 1919.

Milwaukee's Hank Aaron, the 1959 champ with .355, finished in a tie for 12th with Eddie Kasko of the Cincinnati Reds at .292.

It was the first championship for Groat and the first for a Pittsburgh player since Debs Garms won in 1940 with .355. The last shortstop to win the batting title was Arky Vaughn, also a Pirate, in 1935.

The 1960 season saw a sharp decline in .300 hitters. Of players eligible for the batting crown with a minimum of 477 plate appearances, only five were in the .300 class. Last year there were 12.

The five were Groat Larker at .323; Willie Mays of San Francisco at .319; Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh at .314 and Ken Boyer of St. Louis at .304.

The Pirates won the team batting championship with an average of .276. Last year they were fourth with .263. The Cincinnati Reds, who had the top team average of .274 in 1959, skidded to sixth with .250.

The Pirates also led in hits (1,493), total bases (2,201), doubles (236), runs scored (734) and runs batted in (689).

Milwaukee was the team leader in home runs with 170. San Francisco led in triples with 62.

Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs led the home run hitters with 41. Aaron was tops in runs batted in (126) and total bases (334). Mays led in hits with 190.

Bill Bruton of the Braves, who since has been traded to Detroit, was tops in runs with 112 and in triples with 13. Vada Pinson of the Reds led in doubles with 37.

Only six of last year's top 15 hitters made that select group again although it took only an average of .287 or better. Repeaters were Orlando Cepeda of the Giants, Pinson, Mays, Frank Robinson of the Reds, Boyer and Wally Moon of the Dodgers.

Cream Puffers Are Triumphant In Bloomer Tilt

The game program said she weighed 295 pounds and stood seven - foot - two (all in fun of course), and Stella Bass measured big with the crowd as she quarterbacked the Cream Puffs gold-clad gridders to a 16-0 victory over the Powder Puffs in the first annual Bloomer Bowl game at Northeast State yesterday.

The co-eds kept a paid crowed of about 300 happy with their performance.

Perry Beaver, an honest-to-goodness Indian member of the Northeast varsity football team, was crowned "queen" of the bowl by President George Walker. Beaver's "maids" were regular gridders Bill McGraw, Ferdie Cruse, and Edwin Thomas.

Quarterback Annette Ford was outstanding for the Powder Puffs.

Only game casualty was Carolyn Wroten who injured an ankle while playing in the Cream Puff backfield.

Holy Cross coach Dr. Eddie Anderson says that trying to stop Syracuse junior halfback Ernie Davis is much like trying to halt a runaway express train.

BOUNCE RAMS, 35-21

Packers Wearing Western Crown

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Green Bay Packers sailed into their first National Football League division title in 16 years Saturday, winging to a 35-21 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

Performing before a crowd of 53,445 in Memorial Coliseum, plus a nationwide television audience, the Packers' quarterback Bart Starr and right halfback Boyd Dowler connected with a spectacular 91-yard pass in the second quarter.

It was the go ahead score for the long-starving Packers and the first of three explosive touchdowns by Green Bay in the second period.

The victory gave Green Bay the clear title to the Western Conference, erasing any possible playoff with the San Francisco 49ers, Detroit Lions or the defending champion Baltimore Colts.

Green Bay now goes into a playoff Dec. 26 with the Eastern Conference champions, the Eagles at Philadelphia.

A jubilant squad of Packers carried their coach, Vince Lombardi, halfway across the field after the final gun.

The outcome was Green Bay's eighth victory of the season against four losses, a tribute to the Lomboardi regime since he took over at Green Bay in 1959.

The long-range aerial attack paid off for the Packers.

Starr completed touchdown strikes to Max McGee for 57 yards, to Dowler for the 91-yarder. Then Paul Hornung completed the devastation through the airlanes with a 40-yard scoring pass to McGee.

Defensive halfback Paul Winslow blocked a Ram punt in the end zone and recovered it for another Packer touchdown. A controversial pass interference penalty against Los Angeles set up the fifth and final Green Bay score with Hornung piling over from the 1.

For the injury-riddled, patched-up Rams, who had players working both offense and defense and several of their regulars out entirely, the club put on a great show in closing out the regular season.

The vaunted Packer running attack was held to 20 yards in the first half and 38 in the second half as Hornung and fullback Jim Taylor were throttled time and again.

Quarterback Bill Wade threw passes for the three Ram touchdowns, one for 40 yards to Tom Wilson, who contributed a brilliant broken field bit of running; to Jon Arnett for one yard and to rookie end Carroll Dale for eight.

A big rhubarb developed in the final quarter and the game was held up several minutes to get the crowd quiet enough for the Packers to hear their signals.

The score was 28-14 and the Rams were still in a threatening position. The officials called interference on defensive halfback Vernon Valdez on a pass from Starr to McGee and the Packers had the ball with a first down on the Ram 4. Hornung's dive over the line for the touchdown put the Packers pretty well out of danger, 35-14. The Rams stormed back 64 yards with Wade passing to Dale for the final score of the game.

Fisticuffs broke out in the waning moments and the Rams' Arnett and Packers' Ron Kramer were tossed out of the game.

In the confusion, a fan rushed on the field and the police tossed him out of the stadium.

The Rams took the opening kick off and marched 80 yards in nine plays, climaxed by Wilson's run with a Wade pass.

Just before the quarter ended, McGee fielded Starr's 57-yard throw to tie it up.

Then came the deluge in the second. A holding penalty had placed the Packers back on their 9. Starr arched his long throw, Dowler took it on about the 48, behind the Ram defensive backs, and went all the way tip-toeing down the sideline in front of his own bench.

Before the half had ended, the Packers had completed five out of five passes for three touchdowns and a healthy 28-7 lead. Starr completed four of them for two touchdowns and Hornung completed the fifth for the third tally.

Hornung, who missed two field goal tries from 32 and 41 yards, brought his NFL record point scoring total to 176 with 11 points.

Celtics Half Game Ahead In Division

BOSTON (AP)—Boston's hard-running Celtics put together an 82-point second half Saturday night, punished Los Angeles 140-112 and took a half-game lead in the Eastern Division of the National Basketball Association.

The defending champion Celtics led by only three points at intermission, but put together a 35-point third quarter for a comfortable 13-point lead.

It was Boston's second straight victory and lifted the Celtics ahead of the idle Philadelphia Warriors.

A 10-point burst early in the third period—while Los Angeles was held scorless—wrapped it up, and a 47-point final quarter had the Celtics going away.

Only a superlative third period performance by Jerry West kept the Lakers within shouting distance. He popped in 17 of his 26 points in that period, but it wasn't enough.

Boston's well-spread scoring put seven men in double figures, with Bob Cousy leading the pack with 25. Tommy Heinsohn had 24, Frank Ramsey 21 and Bill Russell 20.

A trio of alternating defensemen couldn't completely contain the Lakers' great Elgin Baylor, who led all scorers with 29. Rudy LaRusso had 23 for the losers.

Lake Providence Girls Host West Monroe Monday

LAKE PROVIDENCE La. (Special) — The Lake Providence High School girl's basketball team will host West Monroe tomorrow.

There will be a freshmen girls game at 7 o'clock with the varsity game to follow immediately.

The Pantherettes defeated West Monroe, 40-38, in a thriller in the finals of the Bastrop Tournament Dec. 3. The Rebels will be out for revenge against the Pantherettes. The Dec. 3 defeat is the only loss this season for the Rebel girls. The Pantherettes have not been defeated.

The Lake Providence girls were 1960 Class B state champions and the West Monroe girls were champions in the AAA division when Triple-A quit state title play.

Bucs Set Slate

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The world champion Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday announced their 1961 home schedule, highlighted by 47 night games.

Opening day at Forbes Field will be Tuesday, April 18, against the Chicago Cubs. The Pirates wind up the season Sunday, Oct. 1, against the Cincinnati Reds.

Only two home doubleheaders are scheduled, both with the Cubs —Memorial Day, May 30, and Sunday, Aug. 27.

Golden Gate Futurity To Captain Fair

ALBANY, Calif. (AP)—Robert S. Lesage's Captain Fair scored a length and a half victory over the Alberta Ranch's Flutterby in the $18,125 Golden Gate Futurity Saturday and won the 2-year-old championship of the Golden Gate Fields fall racing season.

Hesacorker finished third in the field of 12 juveniles.

Hesacorker took the lead at the start of the mile run but gave way to Captain Fair rounding the first turn. Captain Fair opened up three lengths down the back stretch and coasted home in 1:36 3-5. Flutterby, a slight favorite, made a strong bid in the stretch but weakened in the final furlong.

It was the ninth victory in 14 starts for Captain Fair. He paid $5, $2.80 and $2.40. Flutterby returned $3 and $2.80 and Hesacorker $5.40.

The daily double paid $1,902.20 each to 25 $2 daily double ticket holders and $9,511 each to three bettors with $10 tickets. The payoff was surpassed only by the California record double return of $8,711.80 at Golden Gate Fields Nov. 16.

The newlywed Mrs. Jimmy Durante had a half interest in one of the winning $2 double tickets, on Looks Better in the first race and Lon's Lad in the second. The other half of the ticket belonged to Mrs. Edie Hirsch, wife of Clement Hirsch, owner of a stable of horses.

Fancy Tar Heels Drop Engineers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's fancy passwork and deft shooting Saturday night powered the Wolfpack to an 82-76 inter-conference basketball triumph over Georgia Tech.

In notching its fifth victory in six games, State hit on 32 of 59 field goal attempts for a 56.5 shooting percentage. George Tech (3-3) made 30 of 62 for 48.4 per cent.

Spurred by the passing and playmaking of sophomore backcourt star Ken Rohloff of Paterson, N.J., the Wolfpack advanced to a 17-point advantage, 68-51, with about 12 minutes left in the game.

The winners then played sloppily and enabled the Yellow Jackets to narrow the margin.

Georgia Tech ace Roger Kaiser tallied 28 points on 10 of 16 field goals and eight straight free throws to gain high scoring honors.

Five State players hit in double figures. Stan Niewierowski led the parade with 20 and was followed by Bob DiStefano with 18, Bruce Hoadley with 11 and Rohloff and Russ Marvel with 10 each.

Indiana Claims Rebound Mark Beating Nevada

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana's fourth-ranked Hoosiers set a school rebound record Saturday night while trouncing Nevada 80-52 with All-America candidate Walt Bellamy scoring 26 points.

The Hoosiers pulled down 90 rebounds, topping the previous high of 85 grabbed against Purdue in 1952. Bellamy also led the rebounders with 21. Sophomore Tom Bolyard grabbed 15 rebounds and scored 15 points.

The traveling Wolfpack kept in the game for the first 10 minutes and led 17-15 before the Hoosiers shot ahead for good. Indiana built its lead to 41-26 by intermission and coasted through the second period.

Little Craig Hall paced Nevada with 17 points.

3-3 IN BLUEBONNET

Texas Longhorns In Tie With 'Bama'

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Tommy Booker and Dan Petty swapped last half field goals Saturday as Alabama and Texas fought to a 3-3 standoff in the second annual Bluebonnet Bowl game before 68,000 fans.

Petty, a reserve 210-pound tackle, had other chances to pull the game out of the fire for the underdog Southwest Conference team, one of them after the final gun had sounded, but missed both of them from the 25-yard line.

Brooker, a letterman end who had given Alabama a 3-0 victory over Auburn during the regular Southeastern Conference season, put Alabama in front 3-0 with a 30-yard kick midway the third quarter and Petty had tied it up with a 20-yard boot with just 3:44 left in the game.

The game had been touted as a possible defensive kicking duel and wound up just that way, although Alabama blew one tremendous chance to score when it failed to penetrate the Texas defense in two plays from the one-yard line in the fading moments of the first quarter.

The remainder of the time, booming punts by Alabama's Lauren Stapp and Texas' Bobby Nunis figured strongly in the outcome.

The Crimson Tide, playing in its 14th bowl game, drew only one penalty during the game, but the 15-yard personal foul call was a big factor in Texas getting close enough for Petty's successful kick.

Another blow, a pass interference call at the Tide 18 as the clock ran out on the game, set the stage for Petty's futile field goal try after the gun went off.

The touted Alabama defense, spearheaded by linebacker Darwin Holt, kept Texas bottled up in its own end of the field most of the first half, but in the second half the Longhorns got rolling and wound up with a wide statistical edge, 232 yards to 155.

But they could never crack the stout tide line when the chips were down anywhere close to touchdown territory.

Texas came out in a weird single-wing formation for a few plays in the first half, but abandoned it after some small success with jitterbug James Saxton operating as the tailback.

Both teams made sporadic use of the pass and an aerial was the key play in each of the strong drives.

The Line Score

Texas	0	0	0	3	—3
Alabama	0	0	3	0	—3

Scoring:
Ala — Fb Brooker 30.
Tex — Fg Petty 20.

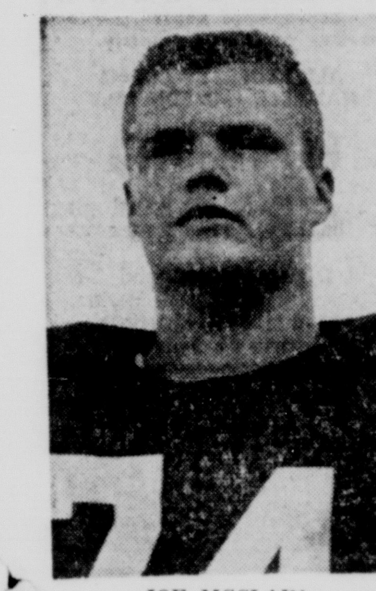
Six Area Class B Football Stars Make All-State Team

By BERNELL BALLARD
Morning Advocate

VIC MAHONEY

THOMAS TAYLOR

CLAUDE PATRICK



JOE McCLAIN

BATON ROUGE, La. (Special)—Mighty St. James, shooting for its second straight Class B state championship, and scrappy Oberlin, a power - packed contender from the other side of the playoff bracket, lassoed three positions each to pace the 1960 Class B All - State football team selected by the Louisiana Sports Writers' Association.

For the second time, a 22-player first team was picked by Louisiana's binocular - eyed sports scribes, with double positions at each berth composing the star-studded mythical gridiron honor outfit.

Besides the pace - setting trio of posts nabbed by St. James and Oberlin, only two other schools, St. Bernard and Waterproof, were able to land more than one position on the squad with two berths a piece.

From St. James are back Gordon Troxclair, tackle Donovan Scioneaux and guard Erroll Lassere.

Oberlin is represented by back Hoyle Granger, quarterback Ray Reed and center Doward LaFleur.

St. Bernard's duo is composed of quarterback Dewey Robin and end Richard Emmons while Waterproof's pair of all - stars are guard Vic Mahoney and center Thomas Taylor.

Twelve other schools are represented on the team with one position each.

Sparking the talent - packed backfield unit are senior quarterbacks Dewey Robin of St. Bernard and Ray Reed of Oberlin, both repeaters from last year's Class B All - State team and unanimous choices on this season's squad.

While both had near - 50 per cent completion marks in the passing department, they turned in slick ball - handling performances while handling mostly ground-attack minded elevens this year.

Joining Robin and Reed in the backfield are Craig Henry of St. Michael, Hoyle Granger of Oberlin, Merlin Walet of Loreauville, C. J. Boudreaux of Dutchtown, Gordon Troxclair of St. James and Claud Patrick of Holly Ridge.

Granger and Patrick both juniors, and Henry and Walet were unanimous picks while Troxclair and Boudreaux received strong support to win berths in a star-rich race for all - state backfield honors.

Walet, a hard - charging 200-pounder, leads the team in scoring with 189 points. He carried the ball 159 times and stepped for 1,376 yards while sparking Loreauville to a District 7- B championship.

Henry toted the pigskin 97 times for St. Michael's state playoff semi - finals runnersup, streaking for 1,420 yards and 163 points for the Crusaders.

Granger powered the drive for Oberlin's championship outfit as the line - cracking 215 - pound junior smashed for 1,394 yards in 115 trips and scored 139 points during regular - season action.

Patrick, another star who's only a junior this year, was a workhorse all the season for Holly Ridge's District 2-B titleholders. At 180 pounds, Patrick carried the mail 152 times, gobbled up 1,295 yards and scored 114 points.

Troxclair, St. James' dizzy stepping scatback, propelled the Wildcats into the Class B state finals for the second straight year by racing for 1,051 yards and 78 points in 167 carries during the regular season. Add to that his performance in three playoff victories for the title - seeking Wildcat eleven.

Boudreaux, the smallest man on the all - state squad at 128 pounds, didn't show it on the Dutchtown gridiron this season. He galloped right alongside the big boys in the statistics, picking up 1,004 yards in 171 carries while scoring 73 points for his 10 - B champion Dutchtown teammates.

Up front, the ends, four players won unanimous selections. Named to the terminal posts were LeRoy McIntyre of Jonesville, Richard Emmons of St. Bernard, David Hartman of Donaldsonville and Brian Heinen of St. Edmund. All are seniors.

Seniors Donovan Scioneeux of St. James, Joe McCain of Newellton Girault Bird of Sicily Island, and Plain Dealing furnish the team speed and power at the tackle spots. McCain, at 5 - 11 is the shortest of the quartet while s-worth, at 180 pounds, is the lightest.

At the guards are Kenneth Broussard of Louisiana School for the Deaf, Ronald Cady of Iowa, Erroll Lassere of St. James, all seniors, and Vic Mahoney of Waterproof, a junior.

The center positions are handled by Thomas Taylor, 186 - pound senior from Waterproof, and Doward LaFleur, 175 - pound senior from Oberlin.

3-3 IN BLUEBONNET

Texas Longhorns In Tie With 'Bama'

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Tommy Booker and Dan Petty swapped last half field goals Saturday as Alabama and Texas fought to a 3-3 standoff in the second annual Bluebonnet Bowl game before 68,000 fans.

Petty, a reserve 210-pound tackle, had other chances to pull the game out of the fire for the underdog Southwest Conference team, one of them after the final gun had sounded, but missed both of them from the 25-yard line.

Brooker, a letterman end who had given Alabama a 3-0 victory over Auburn during the regular Southeastern Conference season, put Alabama in front 3-0 with a 30-yard kick midway the third quarter and Petty had tied it up with a 20-yard boot with just 3:44 left in the game.

The Tide had been touted as a possible defensive kicking duel and wound up just that way, although Alabama blew one tremendous chance to score when it failed to penetrate the Texas defense in two plays from the one yard line in the fading moments of the first quarter.

The remainder of the time, booming punts by Alabama's Lauren Stapp and Texas' Bobby Nunis figured strongly in the outcome.

The Crimson Tide, playing in its 14th bowl game, drew only one penalty during the game, but the 15-yard personal foul call was a big factor in Texas getting close enough for Petty's successful kick.

Another blow, a pass interference call at the Tide 18 as the clock ran out on the game, set the stage for Petty's futile field goal try after the gun went off.

The touted Alabama defense, spearheaded by linebacker Darwin Holt, kept Texas bottled up in its own end of the field most of the first half, but in the second half the Longhorns got rolling and wound up with a wide statistical edge, 232 yards to 155.

Texas could never crack the stout tide line when the chips were down but Alabama was outplayed.

Texas came out in a weird single-wing formation for a few plays in the first half, but abandoned it after Alabama caught on to it. The Tide countered with jitterbug James Saxton operating as the tailback.

Both teams made sporadic use of the pass and an aerial was the key play in each of the strong drives.

The Line Score

Texas	0	0	0	3	—3
Alabama	0	0	3	0	—3

Scoring:

Groat's .325 Gets Official Batting Title

CINCINNATI (AP)—The National League made it official Saturday that Dick Groat of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates won the 1960 league batting championship with the lowest winning average since 1919.

Official averages showed Groat, with 186 hits in 573 times at bat in 138 games, hit .325. Groat, who missed most of September because of an injury, nosed out Norm Larker of the Los Angeles Dodgers by two percentage points.

Ed D. Roush of the Cincinnati Reds led the league with a .319 mark in 1919.

Milwaukee's Hank Aaron, the 1959 champ with .355, finished in a tie for 12th with Eddie Kasko of the Cincinnati Reds at .292.

It was the first championship for Groat and the first for a Pittsburgh player since Debs Garms won in 1940 with .355. The last shortstop to win the batting title was Arky Vaughn, also a Pirate, in 1935.

The 1960 season saw a sharp decline in .300 hitters. Of players eligible for the batting crown with a minimum of 477 plate appearances, only five were in the .300 class. Last year there were 12.

The five were Groat Larker at .323; Willie Mays of San Francisco at .319; Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh at .314 and Ken Boyer of St. Louis at .304.

The Pirates won the team batting championship with an average of .276. Last year they were fourth with .263. The Cincinnati Reds, who had the top team average of .274 in 1959, skidded to sixth with .250.

The Pirates also led in hits (1,493), total bases (2,201), doubles (236), runs scored (734) and runs batted in (689).

Milwaukee was the team leader in home runs with 170. San Francisco led in triples with 62.

Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs led the home run hitters with 41. Aaron was tops in runs batted in (126) and total bases (334). Mays led in hits with 190.

Bill Bruton of the Braves, who since has been traded to Detroit, was tops in runs with 112 and in triples with 13. Vada Pinson of the Reds led in doubles with 37.

Only six of last year's top 15 hitters made that select group again although it took only an average of .287 or better. Repeaters were Orlando Cepeda of the Giants, Pinson, Mays, Frank Robinson of the Reds, Boyer and Wally Moon of the Dodgers.

Cream Puffers Are Triumphant In Bloomer Tilt

The game program said she weighed 295 pounds and stood seven - foot - two (all in fun of course), and Stella Bass measured big with the crowd as she quarterbacked the Cream Puffs gold-clad gridders to a 16-0 victory over the Powder Puffs in the first annual Bloomer Bowl game at Northeast State yesterday.

The co-eds kept a paid crowed of about 300 happy with their performance.

Perry Beaver, an honest-to-goodness Indian member of the Northeast varsity football team, was crowned "queen" of the bowl by President George Walker. Beaver's "maids" were regular gridders Bill McGraw, Ferdie Cruse, and Edwin Thomas.

Quarterback Annette Ford was outstanding for the Powder Puffs.

Only game casualty was Carolyn Wroten who injured an ankle while playing in the Cream Puff backfield.

Holy Cross coach Dr. Eddie Anderson says that trying to stop Syracuse junior halfback Ernie Davis is much like trying to halt a runaway express train.

BOUNCE RAMS, 35-21

Packers Wearing Western Crown

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Green Bay Packers sailed into their first National Football League division title in 16 years Saturday, winging to a 35-21 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

Performing before a crowd of 53,445 in Memorial Coliseum, plus a nationwide television audience, the Packers' quarterback Bart Starr and right halfback Boyd Dowler connected with a spectacular 91-yard pass in the second quarter.

It was the go ahead score for the long-starving Packers and the first of three explosive touchdowns by Green Bay in the second period.

The victory gave Green Bay the clear title to the Western Conference, erasing any possible playoff with the San Francisco 49ers, Detroit Lions or the defending champion Baltimore Colts.

Green Bay now goes into a playoff Dec. 26 with the Eastern Conference champions, the Eagles at Philadelphia.

A jubilant squad of Packers carried their coach, Vince Lombardi, halfway across the field after the final gun.

The outcome was Green Bay's eighth victory of the season against four losses, a tribute to the Lombardi regime. Lombardi took over at Green Bay in 1959.

The long-range aerial attack paid off for the Packers.

Starr completed touchdown strikes to Max McGee for 57 yards, to Dowler for the 91-yarder. Then Paul Hornung completed the devastation through the airlanes with a 40-yard scoring pass to McGee.

Defensive halfback Paul Winslow blocked a Ram punt in the end zone and recovered it for another Packer touchdown. A controversial pass interference penalty against Los Angeles set up the fifth and final Green Bay score with Hornung piling over from the 1.

For the injury-riddled, patched-up Rams, who had players working both offense and defense and several of their regulars out entirely, the club put on a great show in closing out the regular season.

The vaunted Packer running attack was held to 20 yards in the first half and 38 in the second half as Hornung and fullback Jim Taylor were throttled time and again.

Quarterback Bill Wade threw passes for the three Ram touchdowns, one for 40 yards to Tom Wilson, who contributed a brilliant broken field bit of running; to Jon Arnett for one yard and to rookie end Carroll Dale for eight.

A big rhubarb developed in the final quarter and the game was held up several minutes to get the crowd quiet enough for the Packers to hear their signals.

The score was 28-14 and the Rams were still in a threatening position. The officials called interference on defensive halfback Vernon Valdez on a pass from Starr to McGee and the Packers had the ball with a first down on the Ram 4. Hornung's dive over the line for the touchdown put the Packers pretty well out of danger, 35-14. The Rams stormed back 64 yards with Wade passing to Dale for the final score of the game.

Fisticuffs broke out in the waning moments and the Rams' Arnett and Packers' Ron Kramer were tossed out of the game.

In the confusion, a fan rushed on the field and the police tossed him out of the stadium.

The Rams took the opening kick off and marched 80 yards in nine plays, climaxed by Wilson's run for 40 yards.

Just before the quarter ended, McGee fielded Starr's 57-yard throw to tie it up.

Then came the deluge in the second. A holding penalty had placed the Packers back on their 9. Starr arched his long throw, Dowler took it on about the 48, behind the Ram defensive backs, and went all the way tip-toeing down the sideline in front of his own bench.

Before the half had ended, the Packers had completed five out of five passes for three touchdowns and a healthy 28-7 lead. Starr completed four of them for two touchdowns and Hornung completed the fifth for the third touchdown.

Hornung, who missed two field goal tries from 32 and 41 yards, brought his NFL record point scoring total to 176 with 11 points.

Celtics Half Game Ahead In Division

BOSTON (AP)—Boston's hard-running Celtics put together an 82-point second half Saturday night, punished Los Angeles 140-112 and took a half-game lead in the Eastern Division of the National Basketball Association.

The defending champion Celtics led by only three points at intermission, but put together a 35-point third quarter for a comfortable 13-point lead.

It was Boston's second straight victory and lifted the Celtics ahead of the idle Philadelphia Warriors.

A 10-point burst early in the third period—while Los Angeles was held scoreless—wrapped it up, and a 47-point final quarter had the Celtics going away.

Only a superlative third period performance by Jerry West kept the Lakers within shouting distance. He popped in 17 of his 26 points in that period, but it wasn't enough.

Boston's well-spread scoring put seven men in double figures, with Bob Cousy leading the pack with 25. Tommy Heinsohn had 24, Frank Ramsey 21 and Bill Russell 20.

A trio of alternating defensemen couldn't completely contain the Lakers' great Elgin Baylor, who led all scorers with 29. Rudy LaRusso had 23 for the losers.

Lake Providence Girls Host West Monroe Monday

LAKE PROVIDENCE La. (Special) — The Lake Providence High School girl's basketball team will host West Monroe tomorrow.

There will be a freshmen girls game at 7 o'clock with the varsity game to follow immediately.

The Pantherettes defeated West Monroe, 40-33, in a thriller in the finals of the Bastrop Tournament Dec. 3. The Rebels will be out for revenge against the Pantherettes. The Dec. 3 defeat is the only loss this season for the Rebel girls. The Pantherettes have not been defeated.

The Lake Providence girls were 1960 Class B state champions and the West Monroe girls were champions in the AAA division when Triple-A quit state title play.

Bucs Set Slate

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The world champion Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday announced their 1961 home schedule, highlighted by 47 night games.

Opening day at Forbes Field will be Tuesday, April 18, against the Chicago Cubs. The Pirates wind up the season Sunday, Oct. 1, against the Cincinnati Reds.

Only two home doubleheaders are scheduled, both with the Cubs —Memorial Day, May 30, and Sunday, Aug. 27.

Golden Gate Futurity To Captain Fair

ALBANY, Calif. (AP)—Robert S. Lesage's Captain Fair scored a length and a half victory over the Alberta Ranch's Flutterby in the $18,125 Golden Gate Futurity Saturday and won the 2-year-old championship of the Golden Gate Fields fall racing season.

Hesacorker finished third in the field of 12 juveniles.

Hesacorker took the lead at the turn of the mile run but gave way to Captain Fair rounding the first turn. Captain Fair opened up three lengths down the back stretch and won the race in 1:36 3-5. Flutterby, a slight favorite, made a strong bid in the stretch but weakened in the final furlong.

It was the ninth victory in 14 starts for Captain Fair. He paid $5, $2.80 and $2.40. Flutterby returned $3 and $2.80 and Hesacorker $5.40.

The daily double paid $1,902.20 each to 25 $2 daily double ticket holders and $9,511 each to three bettors with $10 tickets. The payoff was surpassed only by the California record double return of $8,711.80 at Golden Gate Fields Nov. 16.

The newlywed Mrs. Jimmy Durante had a half interest in one of the winning $2 double tickets, on Looks Better in the first race and Lon's Lad in the second. The other half of the ticket belonged to Mrs. Edie Hirsch, wife of Clement Hirsch, owner of a stable of horses.

Fancy Tar Heels Drop Engineers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's fancy passwork and deft shooting Saturday night powered the Wolfpack to an 82-76 inter-conference basketball triumph over Georgia Tech.

In notching its fifth victory in six games, State hit on 32 of 57 field goal attempts for a 56.3 shooting percentage. George Tech (3-3) made 30 of 62 for 48.4 per cent.

Spurred by the passing and playmaking of sophomore backcourt star Ken Rohloff of Paterson, N.J., the Wolfpack advanced to a 17-point advantage, 68-51, with about 12 minutes left in the game.

The winners then played sloppily and enabled the Yellow Jackets to narrow the margin.

Georgia Tech ace Roger Kaiser tallied 28 points on 10 of 16 field goals and eight straight free throws to gain high scoring honors.

Five State players hit in double figures, Stan Niewierowski led the parade with 20 and was followed by Bob DiStefano with 18, Bruce Hoadley with 11 and Rohloff and Russ Marvel with 10 each.

Indiana Claims Rebound Mark Beating Nevada

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana's fourth-ranked Hoosiers set a school rebound record Saturday night while trouncing Nevada 80-52 with All-America candidate Walt Bellamy scoring 26 points.

The Hoosiers pulled down 90 rebounds, topping the previous high of 85 grabbed against Purdue in 1952. Bellamy also led the rebounders with 21. Sophomore Tom Bolyard grabbed 15 rebounds and scored 15 points.

The traveling Wolfpack kept in the game for the first 10 minutes and led 17-15 before the Hoosiers shot ahead for good. Indiana built its lead to 41-26 by intermission and coasted through the second half.

Little Craig Hall paced Nevada with 17 points.

DUKE HAS OFFENSE

Arkansas Defense May Provide Edge

DALLAS (AP)—How does the 25th Cotton Bowl football game between Arkansas and Duke shape up?

Cold statistics say it will be offense vs. defense and defense won more games for Arkansas than offense did for Duke.

There is a paradox. While Duke gained more yards and moved the ball better, it didn't score as well as Arkansas.

First, the game pits a team with an 8-2 record (Arkansas) against a team with a 7-3 record (Duke). Duke lost two of its games by fairly wide margins—31-6 to Michigan, 27-6 to UCLA. Arkansas lost one game by three points (to Mississippi 10-7) and the other by 14 (28-14 to Baylor). It won four games by 7 points or less.

In other words, every game was a ball game with Arkansas.

Duke beat Navy 19-10, one of the big victories of the season in college football. Arkansas didn't knock over any team rated as highly as Navy.

Duke rolled up 1,872 yards rushing and 939 passing. Duke got more yards on the ground than Arkansas, which moved for 1,670 yards, but Arkansas got more yards in the air, going to the air for 953. Duke passed more but got less yardage out of it.

Defensively, Duke wasn't too hot. The Blue Devils gave up 265.5 per game. Arkansas allowed 197.5, which is 68 yards less.

Individually, Duke also boasts an edge offensively. Mark Leggett ran for 436 yards and Dean Wright for 323 in the Blue Devil rushing attack. Lance Alworth got 375 and Billy Moore 215 in the Arkansas ground offensive.

Don Altman completed 68 passes for 552 yards for Duke. George McKinney connected on 39 for 723 yards for Arkansas. Altman completed more but didn't get as much yardage out of them as McKinney did with 29 fewer completions. That should prove something.

Arkansas has been more accustomed to winning lately. It has grabbed 21 of its last 25 games. Duke has won only 11 of its last 20.

All this appears to be building up a case for Arkansas, which will be favored to win. But Coach Frank Broyles wonders if it actually isn't a handicap.

He said, after Duke lost its last game of the season to UCLA, "It's going to be hard to get by boys in the proper frame of mind to play this one."

Arkansas won its last four games of the season, the final one by 23 points. The Razorbacks might get the idea Duke was in a slump since it lost its last two.

With those psychological factors working against Arkansas and Duke obviously a strong team when "on its game," the Jan. 2 Cotton Bowl might be one of the best from the standpoint of competition in the quarter-century history of the post-season classic.

Penn Staters Planned Way With Oregon

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "We tried to make them play two games and we did. But it took that last big drive to give us the game."

Smiling, relaxed and "surely surprised" by the ease of Penn State's 41-1 victory over Oregon in the Liberty Bowl Saturday, Coach Rip Engle thus summed up his strategy.

Engle explained that his "two games" plan was the constant shuffling in and out of his two Penn State units of almost equal calibre. It kept the pressure on undermanned Oregon and finally disorganized the West Coast team.

Grim and shaken by the outcome, Coach Len Casanova said his Oregon team made too many mistakes. "You can't fumble a kickoff in your own territory, and do the other things we did, and beat a team like Penn State. They are too good for that kind of play."

Engle, making the rounds of a fairly quiet winners' dressing room, said that if he had to make a choice for outstanding player it would be Dick Hoak, his senior quarterback who didn't even start the game.

It was Hoak who brought State from behind after Oregon had struck swiftly for a 6-0 lead. Hoak started his magnificent day—one that "I guess was about as good as I've ever had"—by throwing a fourth down, 16-yard pass to Capt. Henry Oppermann on the Oregon 10. It set up State's first touchdown.

He sprinted 12 and 11 yards in the second TD drive, carried six for the third TD and intercepted passes that set up the last two State touchdowns. He passed 33 yards for one and ran for the other himself.

Hoak, voted the game's most versatile player, gained 61 yards running and completed three of five passes for 67 yards in addition to his two touchdowns and two interceptions that led to scores. The withering Penn State attack rolled up 420 yards, 301 of them on the ground.

State's offensive performance was particularly noteworthy since Oregon held its last seven foes to a total of 45 points.

Grayson, who gained 95 yards on 16 carries, and Grosz, with nine completions in 15 passes for 178 yards, kept Oregon in the game through the first three periods. The Webfoots gained 360 yards—187 rushing. They were, however, unable to sustain the attack when it counted.

State's power and depth asserted itself in the second quarter as Coach Rip Engle alternated what he calls his "2-man first team." Jonas, a rugged halfback, burst over for the tying TD from the 1, climaxing a 19-play, 62-yard drive on short gains by Gursky, Pae, Dave Hayes, Hoak and Jonas.

Midway through the period, Jonas returned a punt 3 yards to the Oregon 37. State scored in seven plays with Gursky ripping across from the 2 after setting up the score with a 13-yard run. On the ensuing kickoff, Oregon end Len Burnett fumbled and Jim Kerr recovered for State on the Ducks' 27. This time it took five plays for the Nittany Lions to move into the end zone, Hoak scoring on a keeper play through the left side from the 6.

Raiders Sink Broncs With Late Splurge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Oakland Raiders buried the Denver Broncos in the American Football League's Western Division cellar by a 48-10 count Saturday, exploding for 31 points in the final period before an estimated 7,000 in Candlestick Park.

Sharing honors in the Raiders' biggest scoring outburst of the campaign were quarterbacks Tom Flores and Babe Parilli, halfback Tony Teresa and fullback Billy Lott.

Flores scored on a one-yard sneak and seven-yard run. Teresa plunged one yard for another. Parilli tallied on a one-yard sneak, then threw touchdown passes of 34 yards to Nyle McFarland and 21 to Charlie Hardy.

Larry Barnes booted field goals of 18 and 28 yards, plus six conversions.

Denver's Gene Mingo, the league's leading scorer, collected only four points—a conversion and a 37-yard field goal—to put his season total at 123. Houston's George Blanda needs 22 to beat him for the scoring crown.

Denver's only touchdown came on a six-yard pass from Frank Tripucka to Lionel Taylor in the second period. Early in the third frame, Tripucka completed a pass that put his yardage total across the 3,000 mark.

The victory left Oakland in third place with a 6-8 season record and Denver at 4-9.

Lenoir Rhyne

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Touchdown Club of Washington Saturday named Lenoir Rhyne of Hickory, N. C., as the 1960 recipient of its "Outstanding Small College Team of the Year" Trophy.

Clarence Stasavich, head coach of the undefeated, once-tied football team, will accept the award at a banquet here Jan. 14.

Potential Beats Out Road House In Black Helen

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mrs. Joe W. Brown's unbeaten Mary's Potential popped out on top and withstood several stretch challenges Saturday to win the $10,000 Black Gold Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

The 3-year-old colt, who has raced only four times in two years, hit the finish a neck in front of Road House with the Argonne Stable's Grand Wizard third.

Jockey Clarence Meaux rode the son of The Battler who was the 7-5 favorite of the 9,709 fans. The winner returned $5.40, $4, and $3.20.

Road House, owned by R. W. Wilson and Earl Allen, paid $8.80 and $6. Grand Wizard, who finished with a rush on the outside, returned $4.20.

Mary's Potential ran as an entry with Tenacious and came out of the gate with the front runners in the 6-furlong event. Meaux urged Mary's Potential to a length lead over longshots Chinese Bandit and Cable King around the first turn.

Mary's Potential turned into the home stretch extremely wide as Road House slipped through on the rail and Grand Wizard came through with his stretch charge on the outside.

Grand Wizard took a slight advantage one - sixteenth of a mile from home, but Meaux shook up the Brown color-bearer and had the edge at the finish wire. The winner ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5, about two seconds off the track record.

Giese Hands Gamecocks' Job To Bass

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Warren Giese stepped down as head football coach at South Carolina Saturday, and named Marvin Bass, Georgia Tech assistant, to succeed him.

In a surprise move, Giese announced he will remain as athletic director and head of the school's physical education department. The university gave him what amounted to department head status in a contract last year.

In his five seasons as head coach here Giese compiled a 28-21-1 record.

Bass, 41, is a one-time head coach at William & Mary and assistant at North Carolina under the late Jim Tatum. He served as an assistant to Giese here until last year, when he went to Georgia Tech. Bass was a standout tackle at William & Mary.

Giese, who served under Tatum at Maryland several years ago, said he recommended the change to the university athletic committee Wednesday. Until his announcement Saturday, there had been no hint of a change.

The 36-year-old Giese said the university's expanding program made the decision necessary "shortly after I surveyed the scope, problems and opportunities of the combined position of athletic director, head football coach and department head of physical education."

He said he told university officials last July that he planned to leave the coaching ranks. Implementing the decision, he added, "became a matter of finding the right man to assume the coaching responsibilities."

Bass, a genial, bulky man with the build of a football lineman, called his appointment "the best Christmas present I could ever expect."

The new coach said he had already met with Giese's staff and hoped the assistants would remain with him.

3 Contenders Enter Tourney For Mitt Crown

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Paul Sullivan, chairman of the National Boxing Association's world championships committee, said Saturday three contenders have entered an elimination tournament for the NBA light heavyweight title.

The trio are Harold Johnson of Philadelphia, No. 1 contender in the NBA rankings; Eric Schoeppner of Germany, No. 3; and Willie Pastrano of Miami Beach, Fla., No. 4.

Sullivan said the No. 2 contender Chic Calderwood of Scotland, did not meet a Dec. 15 deadline to enter the eliminations and is "deemed to be unavailable."

Plans call for Johnson to fight Schoeppner or Pastrano in late January or early February at a site to be selected, Sullivan said. The winner will be declared NBA light heavyweight champion, succeeding Archie Moore.

Within 90 days after that, Sullivan said, the champion must put his title on the line against the remaining contender.

Sullivan said details of the initial elimination bout are expected to be announced about the first of the year.

Bill Daddio, Notre Dame end coach, is an alumnus of Pittsburgh.

Blanda Needs 22 Points To Head Scoring

By The Associated Press

Houston quarterback George Blanda gets a final opportunity Sunday to win the American Football League's scoring championship. He needs 22 points to overtake Gene Mingo of the Denver Broncs.

Mingo collected only four points Saturday as the Broncos lost to the Oakland Raiders 48-10 and cemented their cellar position in the Western Division. Mingo's 37-yard field goal and conversion gave him a final total of 123 points.

Blanda, with 102 points, will be seeking to add to his aggregate at the expense of the Boston Patriots. Buffalo is at Dallas and New York at Los Angeles in other final games on the regular season slate.

Houston and Los Angeles already have clinched the division titles and will meet for the league crown Jan. 1 in Houston.

Sharing honors in Oakland's biggest scoring outburst of the campaign Saturday were Tom Flores, Babe Parilli, Tony Teresa and Billy Lott.

Flores went over on a one-yard sneak and seven-yard run. Teresa scored on a one-yard plunge. Parilli threw two touchdown passes and scored himself on a one-yard sneak.

Teams Paired For Lafayette Bayou Classic

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Kentucky Wesleyan versus Southeastern Louisiana College . . . McMurry College versus University of Southwestern Louisiana — this is how the lineup reads for the forthcoming Bayou Holiday Classic in Lafayette.

These pairings for the second annual invitational basketball tourney were announced by USL athletic officials. Sponsored by Southwestern, the two-day meet swings into action Thursday, Dec. 29, in Blackham Coliseum.

The first semifinal clash, headlining Kentucky Wesleyan against Southeastern, opens firing at 7:30 p.m. Then hometown favorite USL squares off against McMurry College of Abilene, Texas, in the 9:30 finale to decide the other finalist.

Showdown bouts feature the hardwood card for Friday, Dec. 30. First round losers start the consolation bouncing at 7 o'clock, and next the opening night winners shoot for championship laurels about 9 p.m.

USL athletic director A. G. Urban said that teams and individual awards will be presented immediately following the title scrap. Trophies will be given to the top three clubs, most valuable player, and five all-tournament performers.

Coach T. L. Plain's speedy Kentuckians have been tagged as the pre-tourney favorite to command the throne which Mississippi Southern claimed last year. After edging North Texas State, 89-93, Southern whipped the hosting Bulldogs in the 1959 classic, 93-80.

Urban stated that an advance sale of tickets is showing daily gains and the Classic officials hope to hit the 5,000 attendance mark on the opening night. The tickets for each two-game session are priced at $2 for a reserved seat, $1.50 general admission, and $1 for students.

Points Doubled In Twenty Years

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Purdue's Boilermakers defeated Washington State's Cougars 74-46 Saturday night in a game that demonstrated how basketball has changed in two decades.

Washington State lost its only previous game at Purdue in 1940, 38-26. Purdue led 39-26 at the half this time.

Terry Dischinger, Purdue's Olympic star and defending Big Ten scoring champion, was high man with 24 points. Three other Purdue starters scored in double figures.

Terry Bal', with 14 points, was the Cougars' only player who tallied more than eight.

STOVALL BUSIEST PUNTER

Kicking Records Shattered In 1960

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

College football kicking specialists were more successful with their punting, extra points and field goal tries this past season than ever before.

Teams and individuals set all kinds of kicking records, including net yards advanced by punting and points gained by field goals.

No fewer than 38 major college games were won by three-pointers, compared to 23 in 1959 and 15 in 1958. Ten of the 17 games won or tied during the final minute of play were pulled out of the fire by field goals. Two of the winning kicks came on the last play.

Ed Dyas of Auburn led the record-smashing assault on modern place-kicking records, booting 13 field goals, nearly double the former mark of seven set by Karl Holzwarth of Wisconsin in 1959. Two others—Durward Pennington of Georgia and Tommy Wells of Georgia Tech, with eight each—also topped the old record.

NCAA modern records cover the period since 1937 in which official service bureau statistics have been kept.

Dyas, whose three-pointers defeated Kentucky, Georgia Tech, Florida and Georgia, also set records for most points scored in one season by kicking (51) and most games won by field goals (4). He booted four field goals in 1949 to give him a record total of 17 in two seasons.

Dick Fitzsimmons, Denver U. end, won individual punting honors, averaging 44.2 yards for 25 punts. His longest was one of 67 yards.

Fitzsimmons is the third sophomore to win the punting title in the last three years. Bobby Walden of Georgia, the 1958 winner, finished second to Fitzsimmons with a 43.5 average on 38 punts. His best was one of 70 yards. Longest punt of the season was a 77-yarder by Paul Gustafson of Montana, while the busiest punter was Jerry Stovall of LSU, with 64 boots.

Dyas' 51 points by kicking broke a 10-year mark of 48, set by Bob Fuller of Arizona State in 1950 and tied by Pepper Rodgers of Georgia Tech in 1952.

Runner-up to Dyas was Nolan Jones of Arizona State (43), who botoed six field goals and 25 consecutive points after touchdown, the most without a miss in one season. Yale's Bill Booe held the old mark of 22.

Baldpate First In Final Event At Old Pimlico

BALTIMORE (AP)—The High Tide Stable's Baldpate, a promising juvenile son of Windy City II and Flattop, won the $3,500 feature on Pimlico's closing program Saturday.

Baldpate, ridden by Bobby Corle, took the lead after the mile and ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47. He won by 2 lengths over Hunter's Rock, the 2-to-1 choice. Hot Cargo was third.

Ballpate paid $8.40.

The final program of the 28 day meeting was marred by a spill when Erian, a stablemate of Baldpate, went down under apprentice Edward Scott nearing the quarter pole in the 6-furlong fifth race.

Jockey Frank Lovato also fell when he served Wing Again sharply to avoid Erian.

CHRISTMAS EVE, U.S.A.

It's merry Christmas-time again!
There's magic in the air . . .
Blent of love and happiness,
It sparkles everywhere!

Now families gather home again
To share the happy hours,
And friendships bloom anew as cards
Arrive in welcome showers.

Stars dance in every youngster's eyes,
Small ears are tuned to hear
Across the stillness of the night
An elfin sleigh draw near!

Far off the church bells bless the air,
And hearts are opened wide
To welcome in, with joyful hymns,
The King of Christmastide.

It's happy Christmas-time again!
May all men, everywhere,
Soon know the peace and joy and love
That fill our own free air!

DUKE HAS OFFENSE

Arkansas Defense May Provide Edge

DALLAS (AP)—How does the 25th Cotton Bowl football game between Arkansas and Duke shape up?

Cold statistics say it will be offense vs. defense and defense won more games for Arkansas than offense did for Duke.

There is a paradox. While Duke gained more yards and moved the ball better, it didn't score as well as Arkansas.

First, the game pits a team with an 8-2 record (Arkansas) against a team with a 7-3 record (Duke). Duke lost two of its games by fairly wide margins—31-6 to Michigan, 27-6 to UCLA. Arkansas lost one game by three points (to Mississippi 10-7) and the other by 14 (28-14 to Baylor). It won four games by 7 points or less.

In other words, every game was a ball game with Arkansas.

Duke beat Navy 19-10, one of the big victories of the season in college football. Arkansas didn't knock over any team rated as highly as Navy.

Duke rolled up 1,872 yards rushing and 939 passing. Duke got more yards on the ground than Arkansas, which moved for 1,670 yards, but Arkansas got more yards in the air, going to the air for 958. Duke passed more but got less yardage out of it.

Defensively, Duke wasn't too hot. The Blue Devils gave up 265.5 per game. Arkansas allowed 197.5, which is 68 yards less.

Individually, Duke also boasts an edge offensively. Mark Leggett ran for 436 yards and Dean Wright for 323 in the Blue Devil rushing attack. Lance Alworth got 375 and Billy Moore 215 in the Arkansas ground offensive.

Don Altman completed 68 passes for 552 yards for Duke. George McKinney connected on 39 for 728 yards for Arkansas. Altman completed more but didn't get as much yardage out of them as McKinney did with 29 fewer completions. That should prove something.

Arkansas has been more accustomed to winning lately. It has grabbed 21 of its last 25 games. Duke has won only 11 of its last 20.

All this appears to be building up a case for Arkansas, which will be favored to win. But Coach Frank Broyles wonders if it actually isn't a handicap.

He said, after Duke lost its last game of the season to UCLA, "It's going to be hard to get by boys in the proper frame of mind to play this one."

Arkansas won its last four games of the season, the final one by 28 points. The Razorbacks might get the idea Duke was in a slump since it lost its last two.

With those psychological factors working against Arkansas and Duke obviously a strong team when "on its game," the Jan. 2 Cotton Bowl might be one of the best from the standpoint of competition in the quarter-century history of the post-season classic.

Penn Staters Planned Way With Oregon

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "We tried to make them play two games and we did. But it took that last big drive to give us the game."

Smiling, relaxed and "surely surprised" by the ease of Penn State's 41-1 victory over Oregon in the Liberty Bowl Saturday, Coach Rip Engle thus summed up his strategy.

Engle explained that his "two games" plan was the constant shuffling in and out of his two Penn State units of almost equal calibre. It kept the pressure on undermanned Oregon and finally disorganized the West Coast team.

Grim and shaken by the outcome, Coach Len Casanova said his Oregon team made too many mistakes. "You can't fumble a kickoff in your own territory, and do the other things we did, and beat a team like Penn State. They are too good for that kind of play."

Engle, making the rounds of a fairly quiet winners' dressing room, said that if he had to make a choice for outstanding player it would be Dick Hoak, his senior quarterback who didn't even start the game.

It was Hoak who brought State from behind after Oregon had struck swiftly for a 6-0 lead. Hoak started his magnificent day—one that "I guess was about as good as I've ever had"—by throwing a fourth down, 16-yard pass to Capt. Henry Oppermann on the Oregon 10. It set up State's first touchdown.

He sprinted 12 and 11 yards in the second TD drive, carried six for the third TD and intercepted passes that set up the last two State touchdowns. He passed 33 yards for one and ran for the other himself.

Hoak, voted the game's most versatile player, gained 61 yards running and completed three of five passes for 67 yards in addition to his two touchdowns and two interceptions that led to scores. The withering Penn State attack rolled up 420 yards, 301 of them on the ground.

State's offensive performance was particularly noteworthy since Oregon held its last seven foes to a total of 45 points.

Grayson, who gained 95 yards on 16 carries, and Grosz, with nine completions in 15 passes for 178 yards, kept Oregon in the game through the first three periods. The Webfoots gained 360 yards—187 rushing. They were, however, unable to sustain the attack when it counted.

State's power and depth asserted itself in the second quarter as Coach Rip Engle alternated what he calls his "-man first team." Jonas, a rugged halfback, burst over for the tying TD from the 1, climaxing a 19-play, 62-yard drive on short gains by Gursky, Pae, Dave Hayes, Hoak and Jonas.

Midway through the period, Jonas returned a punt 3 yards to the Oregon 37. State scored in seven plays with Gursky ripping across from the 2 after setting up the score with a 13-yard run. On the ensuing kickoff, Oregon end Len Burnett fumbled and Jim Kerr recovered for State on the Ducks' 27. This time it took five plays for the Nittany Lions to move into the end zone, Hoak scoring on a keeper play through the left side from the 6.

Raiders Sink Broncs With Late Splurge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Oakland Raiders buried the Denver Broncos in the American Football League's Western Division cellar by a 48-10 count Saturday, exploding for 31 points in the final period before an estimated 7,000 in Candlestick Park.

Sharing honors in the Raiders' biggest scoring outburst of the campaign were quarterbacks Tom Flores and Babe Parilli, halfback Tony Teresa and fullback Billy Lott.

Flores scored on a one-yard sneak and seven-yard run. Teresa plunged one yard for another. Parilli tallied on a one-yard sneak, then threw touchdown passes of 44 yards to Nyle McFarland and 21 to Charlie Hardy.

Larry Barnes booted field goals of 18 and 28 yards, plus six conversions.

Denver's Gene Mingo, the league's leading scorer, collected only four points—a conversion and a 37-yard field goal—to put his season total at 123. Houston's George Blanda needs 22 to beat him for the scoring crown.

Denver's only touchdown came on a six-yard pass from Frank Tripucka to Lionel Taylor in the second period. Early in the third frame, Tripucka completed a pass that put his yardage total across the 3,000 mark.

The victory left Oakland in third place with a 6-8 season record and Denver at 4-9.

Lenoir Rhyne

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Touchdown Club of Washington Saturday named Lenoir Rhyne of Hickory, N. C., as the 1960 recipient of its "Outstanding Small College Team of the Year" Trophy.

Clarence Stasavich, head coach of the undefeated, once-tied football team, will accept the award at a banquet here Jan. 14.

Potential Beats Out Road House In Black Helen

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mrs. Joe W. Brown's unbeaten Mary's Potential popped out on top and withstood several stretch challenges Saturday to win the $10,000 Black Gold Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

The 3-year-old colt, who has raced only four times in two years, hit the finish a neck in front of Road House with the Argonne Stable's Grand Wizard third.

Jockey Clarence Meaux rode the son of The Battler who was the 7-5 favorite of the 9,709 fans. The winner returned $5.40, $4, and $3.20.

Road House, owned by R. W. Wilson and Earl Allen, paid $8.80 and $6. Grand Wizard, who finished with a rush on the outside, returned $4.20.

Mary's Potential ran as an entry with Tenacious and came out of the gate with the front runners in the 6-furlong event. Meaux urged Mary's Potential to a length lead over longshots Chinese Bandit and Cable King around the first turn.

Mary's Potential turned into the home stretch extremely wide as Road House slipped through on the rail and Grand Wizard came through with his stretch charge on the outside.

Grand Wizard took a slight advantage one - sixteenth of a mile from home, but Meaux shook up the Brown color-bearer and had the edge at the finish wire. The winner ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5, about two seconds off the track record.

Giese Hands Gamecocks' Job To Bass

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Warren Giese stepped down as head football coach at South Carolina Saturday, and named Marvin Bass, Georgia Tech assistant, to succeed him.

In a surprise move, Giese announced he will remain as athletic director and head of the school's physical education department. The university gave him what amounted to department head status in a contract last year.

In his five seasons as head coach here Giese compiled a 28-21-1 record.

Bass, 41, is a one-time head coach at William & Mary and assistant at North Carolina under the late Jim Tatum. He served as an assistant to Giese here until last year, when he went to Georgia Tech. Bass was a standout tackle at William & Mary.

Giese, who served under Tatum at Maryland several years ago, said he recommended the change to the university athletic committee Wednesday. Until his announcement Saturday, there had been no hint of a change.

The 36-year-old Giese said the university's expanding program made the decision necessary "shortly after I surveyed the scope, problems and opportunities of the combined position of athletic director, head football coach and department head of physical education."

He said he told university officials last July that he planned to leave the coaching ranks. Implementing the decision, he added, "became a matter of finding the right man to assume the coaching responsibilities."

Bass, a genial, bulky man with the build of a football lineman, called his appointment "the best Christmas present I could ever expect."

The new coach said he had already met with Giese's staff and hoped the assistants would remain with him.

3 Contenders Enter Tourney For Mitt Crown

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Paul Sullivan, chairman of the National Boxing Association's world championships committee, said Saturday three contenders have entered an elimination tournament for the NBA light heavyweight title.

The trio are Harold Johnson of Philadelphia, No. 1 contender in the NBA rankings; Eric Schoeppner of Germany, No. 3; and Willie Pastrano of Miami Beach, Fla., No. 4.

Sullivan said the No. 2 contender Chic Calderwood of Scotland, did not meet a Dec. 15 deadline to enter the eliminations and is "deemed to be unavailable."

Plans call for Johnson to fight Schoeppner or Pastrano in late January or early February at a site to be selected, Sullivan said. The winner will be declared NBA light heavyweight champion, succeeding Archie Moore.

Within 90 days after that, Sullivan said, the champion must put his title on the line against the remaining contender.

Sullivan said details of the initial elimination bout are expected to be announced about the first of the year.

Bill Daddio, Notre Dame and coach, is an alumnus of Pittsburgh.

Blanda Needs 22 Points To Head Scoring

By The Associated Press

Houston quarterback George Blanda gets a final opportunity Sunday to win the American Football League's scoring championship. He needs 22 points to overtake Gene Mingo of the Denver Broncs.

Mingo collected only four points Saturday as the Broncos lost to the Oakland Raiders 48-10 and cemented their cellar position in the Western Division. Mingo's 37-yard field goal and conversion gave him a final total of 123 points.

Blanda, with 102 points, will be seeking to add to his aggregate at the expense of the Boston Patriots. Buffalo is at Dallas and New York at Los Angeles in other final games on the regular season slate.

Houston and Los Angeles already have clinched the division titles and will meet for the league crown Jan. 1 in Houston.

Sharing honors in Oakland's biggest scoring outburst of the campaign Saturday were Tom Flores, Babe Parilli, Tony Teresa and Billy Lott.

Flores went over on a one-yard sneak and seven-yard run. Teresa scored on a one-yard plunge. Parilli threw two touchdown passes and scored himself on a one-yard sneak.

Teams Paired For Lafayette Bayou Classic

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Kentucky Wesleyan versus Southeastern Louisiana College .... McMurry College versus University of Southwestern Louisiana — this is how the lineup reads for the forthcoming Bayou Holiday Classic in Lafayette.

These pairings for the second annual invitational basketball tourney were announced by USL athletic officials. Sponsored by Southwestern, the two-day meet swings into action Thursday, Dec. 29, in Blackham Coliseum.

The first semifinal clash, headlining Kentucky Wesleyan against Southeastern, opens firing at 7:30 p.m. Then hometown favorite USL squares off against McMurry College of Abilene, Texas, in the 9:30 finale to decide the other finalist.

Showdown bouts feature the hardwood card for Friday, Dec. 30. First round losers start the consolation bouncing at 7 o'clock, and next the opening night winners shoot for championship laurels about 9 p.m.

USL athletic director A. G. Urban said that teams and individual awards will be presented immediately following the title scrap. Trophies will be given to the top three clubs, most valuable player, and five all-tournament performers.

Coach T. L. Plain's speedy Kentuckians have been tagged as the pre-tourney favorite to command the throne which Mississippi Southern claimed last year. After edging North Texas State, 89-93, Southern whipped the hosting Bulldogs in the 1959 classic, 93-80.

Urban stated that an advance sale of tickets is showing daily gains and the Classic officials hope to hit the 5,000 attendance mark on the opening night. The tickets for each two-game session are priced at $2 for a reserved seat, $1.50 general admission, and $1 for students.

Points Doubled In Twenty Years

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Purdue's Boilermakers defeated Washington State's Cougars 74-46 Saturday night in a game that demonstrated how basketball has changed in two decades.

Washington State lost its only previous game at Purdue in 1940, 38-26. Purdue led 39-26 at the half this time.

Terry Dischinger, Purdue's Olympic star and defending Big Ten scoring champion, was high man with 24 points. Three other Purdue starters scored in double figures.

Terry Ball, with 14 points, was the Cougars' only player who tallied more than eight.

STOVALL BUSIEST PUNTER

Kicking Records Shattered In 1960

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

College football kicking specialists were more successful with their punting, extra points and field goal tries this past season than ever before.

Teams and individuals set all kinds of kicking records, including net yards advanced by punting and points gained by field goals.

No fewer than 38 major college games were won by three-pointers, compared to 23 in 1959 and 15 in 1958. Ten of the 17 games won or tied during the final minute of play were pulled out of the fire by field goals. Two of the winning kicks came on the last play.

Ed Dyas of Auburn led the record-smashing assault on modern place-kicking records, booting 13 field goals, nearly double the former mark of seven set by Karl Holzwarth of Wisconsin in 1959. Two others—Durward Pennington of Georgia and Tommy Wells of Georgia Tech, with eight each—also topped the old record.

NCAA modern records cover the period since 1937 in which official service bureau statistics have been kept.

Dyas, whose three-pointers defeated Kentucky, Georgia Tech, Florida and Georgia, also set records for most points scored in one season by kicking (51) and most games won by field goals (4). He booted four field goals in 1949 to give him a record total of 17 in two seasons.

Dick Fitzsimmons, Denver U. end, won individual punting honors, averaging 44.2 yards for 25 punts. His longest was one of 67 yards.

Fitzsimmons is the third sophomore to win the punting title in the last three years. Bobby Walden of Georgia, the 1958 winner, finished second to Fitzsimmons with a 43.5 average on 38 punts. His best was one of 70 yards. Longest punt of the season was a 77-yarder by Paul Gustafson of Montana, while the busiest punter was Jerry Stovall of LSU, with 64 boots.

Dyas' 51 points by kicking broke a 10-year mark of 48, set by Bob Fuller of Arizona State in 1950 and tied by Pepper Rodgers of Georgia Tech in 1952.

Runner-up to Dyas was Nolan Jones of Arizona State (43), who botoed six field goals and 25 consecutive points after touchdown, the most without a miss in one season. Yale's Bill Booe held the old mark of 22.

Baldpate First In Final Event At Old Pimlico

BALTIMORE (AP)—The High Tide Stable's Baldpate, a promising juvenile son of Windy City II and Flattop, won the $3,500 feature on Pimlico's closing program Saturday.

Baldpate, ridden by Bobby Corle, took the lead after the mile and ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47. He won by 2 lengths over Hunter's Rock, the 2-to-1 choice. Hot Cargo was third.

Ballpate paid $8.40.

The final program of the 28 day meeting was marred by a spill when Erian, a stablemate of Baldpate, went down under apprentice Edward Scott nearing the quarter pole in the 6-furlong fifth race.

Jockey Frank Lovato also fell when he served Wing Again sharply to avoid Erian.

CHRISTMAS EVE, U.S.A.

It's merry Christmas-time again!
There's magic in the air . . .
Blent of love and happiness,
It sparkles everywhere!

Now families gather home again
To share the happy hours,
And friendships bloom anew as cards
Arrive in welcome showers.

Stars dance in every youngster's eyes,
Small ears are tuned to hear
Across the stillness of the night
An elfin sleigh draw near!

Far off the church bells bless the air,
And hearts are opened wide
To welcome in, with joyful hymns,
The King of Christmastide.

* * * *

It's happy Christmas-time again!
May all men, everywhere,
Soon know the peace and joy and love
That fill our own free air!

ELEVEN STATE STARS HONORED

Gunn Makes All-Southern Honorable Mention List

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Thirty-three backs and 27 linemen were named Saturday to the 41st annual All-Southern football squad, Dixie's top interscholastic prep gridiron honor.

The 60-man all-southern squad, plus 74 honorable mention players, was drawn from a 12 state area, five players from each state. A panel of 132 coaches and sports writers participated in the 1960 polls with college scouts assisting state chairmen in the selections.

The squad was announced by Bob Bassine, sports editor of the sponsoring Orlando Sentinel and general chairman of the All-Southern Selection Board.

The linemen included nine ends, 10 tackles, three guards and five centers.

Central High School of Little Rock, Ark., placed three men on the squad. Jesuit High School of New Orleans, La., and Senior High School of Greensboro, S.C., each placed two.

Typical comments on some of the prep stars ran like this:

"Jesse Grant, 210-pound guard from Corbin, Ky., has everything it takes to be a great one in college," a southeastern conference coach said. "Grant is a man among boys. He could make our team right now."

"Memphis South Side's Billy Fletcher gets nod over Wayne Bush as Tennessee's outstanding player. He gained 1.077 yards rushing in 90 attempts for 11.8 per carry, completed 21 of 42 passes for 364 more yards and scored 128 points in 10 games as south side went unbeaten and untied."

"Pat Screen of Jesuit High School in New Orleans, La., made all-Southern as a junior last year. LSU, Tulane, Notre Dame, Ole Miss., Indiana, Colorado, Army and Navy all are interested in him. One game, although injured, he ran 94 yards for a touchdown the first time he carried the ball. Scored 106 points, missing state AAA scoring title by only two points due to injuries."

Sirola Most Feared Star From Italy

SYDNEY (AP)—Orlando Sirola, Italy's giant of the courts, and not Nicola Pietrangeli, is the man the Australians fear most in the Davis Cup challenge round starting here the day after Christmas.

"We know what Pietrangeli can do, but Sirola is always a mystery," said Roy Emerson, veteran member of the Australian tennis squad. "When Sirola is on his game he is berserk Army tank."

It was Sirola—serving rocket blasts and hitting thos no man could retrive—who crushed America's Barry MacKay in the fifth and final match which sent Italy into the challenge round for the first time ever.

"From the beginning I said Sirola was a player to watch," said MacKay. "Because he is so big and seemingly awkward everybody regards him as a tennis freak. He can murder you when he's hitting them."

The Australians, holders of the trophy, will be slight favorites in the climactic series at the White City Club Dec. 26-28. But no one not even Australian captain Harry Hopman, is taking the Europeans lightly.

"This is a dedicated, inspired team," said Jaroslav Drobny, former Wimbledon champion who is its coach. "They have come this far and now they want to go all the way. I never have seen a couple of fellows who are so determined. I do not believe there will be an emotional or psychological letdown."

This appears the greatest danger to the veteran team which has been seeking Davis Cup honors for eight years. Their come-from-behind triumph over the United States was one of the great tennis upsets of all-time, and the big job of Italy's board of strategy may be to get Pietrangeli and Sirola back down out of the clouds.

Incentive is on the side of the Italians. "You must remember we never have been in the challenge round before and we are not expected to win," said Vanny Canapele, the Florence attorney who captains the challengers. "All the pressure will be on the Australians. As against the Americans, our boys should be completely loose. Because of that I think we have a very good chance."

Another driving force behind the Italians is Drobny's intense dislike for Australian Captain Hopman, with whom he has been fighting for years.

"I would give an eye-tooth to beat him in the challenge round," says the one-time Czech who gained Hopman's enmity when he beat Ken Rosewall for the Wimbledon title in 1954. Drobny is working with the Italians like a man with a mission.

Determination and dedication characterizes Pietrangeli and Sirola, who are a far cry from the spaghetti - gorging, wine-gulping, couldn't-care-less athletes of the past.

IN LIBERTY BOWL

Penn State Tops Oregon By 41-12

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Penn State, powered by two units of almost equal ability, wore down Oregon's thinner forces Saturday for a 41-12 victory in the second annual Liberty Bowl football game at Philadelphia Stadium.

Oregon scored first on an 83-yard first period drive, but the rest of the sub-freezing afternoon the Easterners controlled the intersectional game, played before a crowd of 16.624 hardy fans.

Although State hurled half a dozen hard-running back at one of the nation's top defensive teams, Dick Hoak, a 185-pound senior, was the star of the day. He scored two touchdowns and passed for another. State led 21-12 as the game entered the fourth period with the stubborn Webfoots trying desperately to get back into the game.

Hoak, who alternated at quarterback with Galen Hall, intercepted two Oregon passes in the final quarter. He followed the interceptions by racing for an 11-yard touchdown and passing 33 yards to Dick Pae for another, turning the game into a rout.

Oregon, which has a 7-2-1 regular season record, led only once, 6-0, on quarter back Dave Grosz's score from the 1 on a quarterback sneak in the first period.

Cleveland Jones, 148-pound star Oregon halfback, missed the conversions, then left for the balance of the game with an injured hip.

The loss of Jones, the Webfoots' leading scorer, pass receiver and kickoff and punt return star, obviously hurt the West Coast team, but it is doubtful he could have done much to offset the power running of State backs.

State, winner of six and loser of three during the regular season, put the game away in the second quarter with a three-touchdown onslaught. Don Jonas ripped a yard for the first and Capt. Henry Opperman, a tremendous performer all afternoon, kicked the first of his four conversions to give the Nittany Lions a 7-6 lead.

Temporarily thwarted when a 79 yard drive ended on a fumble by fullback Sam Sobczak as he drove into the end zone, State came back after an Oregon punt and scored on Al Gursky's 2-yard plunge. Hoak spun 6 yards on a keeper as State took a 21-6 halftime lead.

Oregon scored the only TD of the third period on a 10-yard run by Dave Grayson, a 172-pound dynamo who played a fine game for the losing Ducks. This was a dying gasp for the Oregon club as State headed into a rousing three-touchdown fourth period finish.

April Skies Takes Coral Gables 'Cap

MIAMI (AP)—Bill Hartack rode favored April Skies to victory Saturday in the $10,000-added Coral Gables Handicap at Tropical Park. Pied d'Or was second, with Room and Board third.

Hartack had refused to ride in the fourth race, claiming the horse was unsound, but he had no complant about April Skies.

April Skies broke fourth in the 14-horse field as Accomplish got the early lead. He moved into second place on the far turn, collared Accomplish at the three-eighths pole and drew clear for a 3-length margin. Accomplish finished fourth.

April Skies ran the 6 furlongs in 1:09 4-5 and paid $5.80, $3.10 and $2.50. Pied d'Or, running as an entry with Yorky, paid $4 and $3.30. Room and Board paid $4.30.

It was the ninth victory of the year for April Skies and was worth $7,577, bringing his earnings for the year to $72,918.

Cleveland Star Backs Injured

NEW YORK (AP) — Ailing Cleveland quarterback Milt Plum and halfback Ray Renfro will play if at all possible Sunday when the Browns try for their first National Football League victory over the New York Giants since 1957.

Both missed virtually all practice sessions this week because of a virus condition.

Coach Paul Brown of the Browns, who arrived Saturday for the second place showdown in the Eastern Conference, said Leon Clarke, who spells Renfro at right half, definitely will not play. He is hobbled by a knee injury.

Geronimo In Battle Royal With DeGlane

Chief Geronimo, after two wins over previously unbeaten Jim La-Rock, may have his hands full Monday night at Roll-Arena. The big Indian, who plays to win regardless of rules, faces a tough customer in Pirre DeGlane, back on the scene after giving Rocky Marino a going over last week at the Arena.

Pierre and the Chief will trade holds in Monday night's main event, while Ray Andrews meets Bad Boy Hines in a one hour, two falls to win match, and Farmer Jones goes against Al Massey in the 15-minute opener.

DeGlane, son of the 1931 world heavyweight wrestling champion, Henri DeGlane, is former junior heavyweight wrestling champion of Montreal and Newfoundland. The young Frenchmen is a clean, scientific wrestler but may have to switch his style to ward off the onslaught of big Chief Geronimo. Last week, while the Chief was putting pressure on Jim La-Rock's sore arm, Delane was awaiting a match with Rocky Marino which would end with the Frenchman refusing to take a decision when Marino knocked himself out, two completely different outlooks on the wrestling game.

Al Massey, like other Farmer Jones opponents will probably have to ward off the country boy's pig before the match in the 15-minute opener and Bad Boy Hines will be out to teach Scottish wrestler Ray Andrews how not to wrestle in their semi final battle.

When Al Dengel, University of Miami place kicker, booted three conversions against North Carolina, he made his college career mark 21 out of 23.

ROBINSON 'BACK-OF-YEAR'

Grambling Has 6 All-League Stars

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — Grambling College placed six football players on the 24-man All-Conference football team announced by the Southwestern Athletic Conference following its annual meeting at Houston, Tex.

Jerry Robinson, Grambling, was acclaimed the conference's "back-of-the-year." He led his league in rushing with 702 yards in 68 carries, better than 10 yards per trip, and he was tops in scoring with 16 touchdowns and two extra points for a total of 100 points.

Willie Richardson, Jackson State of Mississippi, was honored as lineman-of-the-year. He caught 58 passes for 1,227 yards, averaging 122.7 yards per game. The total yardage and per game average figured are new NAIA records.

The coaches' choice as "coach-of-the-year" was A. W. Mumford, Southern U. of Baton Rouge whose Jaguar Cats were awarded the W S.. Scott trophy, emblematic of the national Negro championship. He beat out Grambling's Eddie Robinson, choice of conference newsmen for the honor, and Billy Nicks of Prairie View. The three teams tied for the conference crown.

The all - star squad includes three quarterbacks and five halfbacks as the coaches decided to go two over the 22-man squad to settle close voting. Two athletes, Richardson of Jackson State and fullback Preston Powell of Gramblin were unanimous choices. Robinson of Grambling missed a unanimous election by one ballot.

Arkansas AM&N, with five, was one short of having as many players on the squad as Grambling. Southern U. and Jackson State each places four players. Prairie View landed three, while Wiley and Texas College placed one each.

The all-conference squad:

Ends Charlie Fisher, senior, Prairie View; Charles Fobbs, junior, Ark. AM&N; Richardson, sophomore, Jackson State; Hiram Wilson, junior, Wiley.

Tackles — Junious Buchanan, sophomore, Grambling; David Evans, junior, Southern; Ernest Ladd, junior, Grambling; Lester Porter, senior, Prairie View.

Guards — Garland Boyette, junior, Gramblin; Ernest Dunlap, senior, Ark. AM&N; Johnny Gant, senior, Southern; Leon Simmons, junior, Grambling.

Centers — Archie Cooley, senior, Jackson; Charlie Malone, senior, Prairie View.

Quarterbacks — Cornelius Addison, senior, Jackson; Lindsey Henry, junior, Ark. AM&N; Cyrus Lancaster, senior, Southern.

Halfbacks — Paul McPherson, freshman, Ark. AM&N; Robinson, junior, Grambling; Glenwood Solden, senior, Ark. AM&N; John Watson, sophomore, Texas College; Robert Williams, senior, Southern.

No 5th Rodeo Championship To Shoulders

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—The shadow of wiry, cat-like Jim Shoulders hangs over the State Fair Livestock Coliseum these days as preparations begin for the National Finals Rodeo Dec. 26-Jan. 1.

Shoulders, acclaimed the continent's No. 1 rodeo cowboy four straight years, can't win the all-around title. Two serious facial accidents in arenas put him out of competition just long enough to keep him a hair's breadth from title contention.

But Shoulders still can win the bareback bronc riding championship. And he is within striking distance of second place in the all-around competition.

The Henryetta, Okla., cowboy won $21,282 in rodeos this year, and could win $9,200 in the "World Series" here. He is entered in bareback bronc and bull riding.

Leading for the coveted all-around title is Harry Tompkins of Dublin, Tex., with $31,218 this season.

Titles in each of the five major events are determined on one point for each dollar won during the year.

The all-around title is determined by totaling the money winnings of a contestant in two or more events during the year. To contend for this crown, the cowboy must win in more than one of the five contest divisions.

Thus Dean Oliver, a calf roping specialist, won $27,144 but cannot compete for the all-around title.

Except for some hoopala in the grand opening and grand finale parade, the National Finals are pure rodeo.

Only concession is the presence of clowns during the bull riding. And these are present mainly to protect unseated riders by diverting attention of the bulls from the cowboys.

Competition will be held in five events—saddle bronc riding, bareback bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping and steer wrestling.

24 Major Clubs By '64 Is Goal

By JOE RIECHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that they have dipped their toes in the muddy waters of expansion, the major leagues are expected to keep wading deeper and deeper until they accomplish their aim of three eight-team majors by 1964.

Already assured of 10 teams next season, one year before the National League follows suit, the American League may again take the initiative by widening its operations to 12 teams in 1963.

The biggest obstacle is not to find suitable cities, as is generally believed, but to find enough players of big league caliber to stock the new franchises.

Based on the example set by the American players last week when it sold 56 players to Washington and Los Angeles, its two newest members, a total of 168 more expendables would have to be unearthed to round out three leagues of eight teams each. Obviously, this cannot be done in a short space of time.

Despite this glaring drawback, a good many cities from all parts of the country are ready, and willing to stake their claim for a major league franchise. Oakland, Dallas and Buffalo are among those which have been especially aggressive in their efforts to follow Houston and Minneapolis-St. Paul into the big leagues.

From a well-informed source comes the information that the National League already has done the spadework to incorporate Buffalo and Dallas-Ft. Worth into its structure at no later date than 1964. It is conceivable, the NL might move up its plans a year if the American should expand to 12 teams in 1962 or 1963.

The National, of course, will operate with 10 teams in 1962, with the addition of Houston and the return of New York.

The American, realizing the need of another California club to go with Los Angeles in order to trim travel expenses, currently are eyeing the Oakland-San Francisco area for its 11th club.

Oakland, which has been without professional ball since the invasion of the Pacific Coast League territory, in 1958, is understood to be preparing for big time baseball. A plan to construct a suitable stadium is said to be on its agenda.

Other cities in the United States and Canada which appear as prospective major league candidates, from the standpoint of population, industry, spirit, and desire, include Toronto, Seattle and Denver.

At the recent major league meetings in St. Louis, the majors adopted an amendment to Rule 1 (c), governing the addition of new clubs accomodate shifts and growth of population. This was designed to make it less difficult for qualified cities to acquire major league status.

At the play allotment meeting in Boston this week, at which the two new AL clubs spent $4½ million dollars for ball players, league President Joe Cronin indicated his circuit was planning on a 12-club league in the near future.

"Our expansion to 10 teams next year is only the beginning," he said. "This is only a plateau, I think there is further expansion ahead and these two new teams are just a beginning in the American League plans."

Bossier Visits Ouachita Gym For Cage Tilt

Bossier City's undefeated Bearcats come to town Tuesday to test coach Herb Holliman's Ouachita Lions at the local school's gym, with a junior-varsity game starting at 6:30 p.m. and the varsity tilt beginning at 8 o'clock.

The Bearcats, standing 5-0 for the season, are defending state AAA basketball champions and are starting out where they left off last year.

Ouachita, with a 6-3 record, lost two of their games to Ruston and the other to powerful Dubberly, a team that whipped Forest's outstanding crew, 64-38 in the Neville tournament Saturday.

Ouachita will start Carl Guinn, Bob Massingill, Tommy Beaube, Don Long and Milton Platt.

ELEVEN STATE STARS HONORED

Gunn Makes All-Southern Honorable Mention List

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Thirty-three backs and 27 linemen were named Saturday to the 41st annual All-Southern football squad, Dixie's top interscholastic prep gridiron honor.

The 60-man all-southern squad, plus 74 honorable mention players, was drawn from a 12 state area, five players from each state. A panel of 132 coaches and sports writers participated in the 1960 polls with college scouts assisting state chairmen in the selections.

The squad was announced by Bob Bassine, sports editor of the sponsoring Orlando Sentinel and general chairman of the All-Southern Selection Board.

The linemen included nine ends, 10 tackles, three guards and five centers.

Central High School of Little Rock, Ark., placed three men on the squad. Jesuit High School of New Orleans, La., and Senior High School of Greensboro, S.C., each placed two.

Typical comments on some of the prep stars ran like this:

"Jesse Grant, 210-pound guard from Corbin, Ky., has everything it takes to be a great one in college," a southeastern conference coach said. "Grant is a man among boys. He could make our team right now."

"Memphis South Side's Billy Fletcher gets nod over Wayne Bush as Tennessee's outstanding player. He gained 1,077 yards rushing in 90 attempts for 11.8 per carry, completed 21 of 42 passes for 364 more yards and scored 128 points in 10 games as south side went unbeaten and untied."

"Pat Screen of Jesuit High School in New Orleans, La., made all-Southern as a junior last year. LSU, Tulane, Notre Dame, Ole Miss., Indiana, Colorado, Army and Navy all are interested in him. One game, although injured, he ran 94 yards for a touchdown the first time he carried the ball. Scored 106 points, missing state AAA scoring title by only two points due to injuries."

Penn State Tops Oregon By 41-12

Oregon scored the only TD of the third period on a 10-yard run by Dave Grayson, a 172-pound dynamo who played a fine game for the losing Ducks. This was a dying gasp for the Oregon club as State headed into a rousing three-touchdown fourth period finish.

April Skies Takes Coral Gables 'Cap

MIAMI (AP)—Bill Hartack rode favored April Skies to victory Saturday in the $10,000-added Coral Gables Handicap at Tropical Park. Pied d'Or was second, with Room and Board third.

Hartack had refused to ride in the fourth race, claiming the horse was unsound, but he had no complant about April Skies.

April Skies broke fourth in the 14-horse field as Accomplish got the early lead. He moved into second place on the far turn, collared Accomplish at the three-eighths pole and drew clear for a 3-length margin. Accomplish finished fourth.

April Skies ran the 6 furlongs in 1:09 4-5 and paid $5.80, $3.10 and $2.50. Pied d'Or, running as an entry with Yorky, paid $4 and $3.30. Room and Board paid $4.30.

It was the ninth victory of the year for April Skies and was worth $7,577, bringing his earnings for the year to $72,918.

Cleveland Star Backs Injured

NEW YORK (AP) — Ailing Cleveland quarterback Milt Plum and halfback Ray Renfro will play if at all possible Sunday when the Browns try for their first National Football League victory over the New York Giants since 1957.

Both missed virtually all practice sessions this week because of a virus condition.

Coach Paul Brown of the Browns, who arrived Saturday for the second place showdown in the Eastern Conference, said Leon Clarke, who spells Renfro at right half, definitely will not play. He is hobbled by a knee injury.

Geronimo In Battle Royal With DeGlane

Chief Geronimo, after two wins over previously unbeaten Jim LaRock, may have his hands full Monday night at Roll-Arena. The big Indian, who plays to win regardless of rules, faces a tough customer in Pirre DeGlane, back on the scene after giving Rocky Marino a going over last week at the Arena.

Pierre and the Chief will trade holds in Monday night's main event, while Ray Andrews meets Bad Boy Hines in a one hour, two falls to win match, and Farmer Jones goes against Al Massey in the 15-minute opener.

DeGlane, son of the 1931 world heavyweight wrestling champion, Henri DeGlane, is former junior heavyweight wrestling champion of Montreal and Newfoundland. The young Frenchmen is a clean, scientific wrestler but may have to switch his style to ward off the onslaught of big Chief Geronimo. Last week, while the Chief was putting pressure on Jim LaRock's sore arm, Delane was awaiting a match with Rocky Marino which would end with the Frenchman refusing to take a decision when Marino knocked himself out, two completely different outlooks on the wrestling game.

Al Massey, like other Farmer Jones opponents will probably have to ward off the country boy's pig before the match in the 15-minute opener and Bad Boy Hines will be out to teach Scottish wrestler Ray Andrews how not to wrestle in their semi final battle.

When Al Dengel, University of Miami place kicker, booted three conversions against North Carolina, he made his college career mark 21 out of 23.

ROBINSON 'BACK-OF-YEAR'

Grambling Has 6 All-League Stars

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — Grambling College placed six football players on the 24-man All-Conference football team announced by the Southwestern Athletic Conference following its annual meeting at Houston, Tex.

Jerry Robinson, Grambling, was acclaimed the conference's "back-of-the-year." He led his league in rushing with 702 yards in 68 carries, better than 10 yards per trip, and he was tops in scoring with 16 touchdowns and two extra points for a total of 100 points.

Willie Richardson, Jackson State of Mississippi, was honored as lineman-of-the-year. He caught 58 passes for 1,227 yards, averaging 122.7 yards per game. The total yardage and per game average figured are new NAIA records.

The coaches' choice as "coach-of-the-year" was A. W. Mumford, Southern U. of Baton Rouge whose Jaguar Cats were awarded the W S.. Scott trophy, emblematic of the national Negro championship. He beat out Grambling's Eddie Robinson, choice of conference newsmen for the honor, and Billy Nicks of Prairie View. The three teams tied for the conference crown.

The all - star squad includes three quarterbacks and five halfbacks as the coaches decided to go two over the 22-man squad to settle close voting. Two athletes, Richardson of Jackson State and fullback Preston Powell of Gramblin were unanimous choices. Robinson of Grambling missed a unanimous election by one ballot.

Arkansas AM&N, with five, was one short of having as many players on the squad as Grambling. Southern U. and Jackson State each places four players. Prairie View landed three, while Wiley and Texas College placed one each.

The all-conference squad:

Ends Charlie Fisher, senior, Prairie View; Charles Fobbs, junior, Ark. AM&N; Richardson, sophomore, Jackson State; Hiram Wilson, junior, Wiley.

Tackles — Junious Buchanan, sophomore, Grambling; David Evans, junior, Southern; Ernest Ladd, junior, Grambling; Lester Porter, senior, Prairie View.

Guards — Garland Boyette, junior, Gramblin; Ernest Dunlap, senior, Ark. AM&N; Johnny Gant, senior, Southern; Leon Simmons, junior, Grambling.

Centers — Archie Cooley, senior, Jackson; Charlie Malone, senior, Prairie View.

Quarterbacks — Cornelius Addison, senior, Jackson; Lindsey Henry, junior, Ark. AM&N; Cyrus Lancaster, senior, Southern.

Halfbacks — Paul McPherson, freshman, Ark. AM&N; Robinson, junior, Grambling; Glenwood Solden, senior, Ark. AM&N; John Watson, sophomore, Texas College; Robert Williams, senior, Southern.

No 5th Rodeo Championship To Shoulders

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—The shadow of wiry, cat-like Jim Shoulders hangs over the State Fair Livestock Coliseum these days as preparations begin for the National Finals Rodeo Dec. 26-Jan. 1.

Shoulders, acclaimed the continent's No. 1 rodeo cowboy four straight years, can't win the all-around title. Two serious facial accidents in arenas put him out of competition just long enough to keep him a hair's breadth from title contention.

But Shoulders still can win the bareback bronc riding championship. And he is within striking distance of second place in the all-around competition.

The Henryetta, Okla., cowboy won $21,282 in rodeos this year, and could win $9,200 in the "World Series" here. He is entered in bareback bronc and bull riding.

Leading for the coveted all-around title is Harry Tompkins of Dublin, Tex., with $31,218 this season.

Titles in each of the five major events are determined on one point for each dollar won during the year.

The all-around title is determined by totaling the money winnings of a contestant in two or more events during the year. To contend for this crown, the cowboy must win in more than one of the five contest divisions.

Thus Dean Oliver, a calf roping specialist, won $27,144 but cannot compete for the all-around title.

Except for some hoopala in the grand opening and grand finale parade, the National Finals are pure rodeo.

Only concession is the presence of clowns during the bull riding. And these are present mainly to protect unseated riders by diverting attention of the bulls from the cowboys.

Competition will be held in five events—saddle bronc riding, bareback bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping and steer wrestling.

THEN 3 LEAGUES

24 Major Clubs By '64 Is Goal

By JOE RIECHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that they have dipped their toes in the muddy waters of expansion, the major leagues are expected to keep wading deeper and deeper until they accomplish their aim of three eight-team majors by 1964.

Already assured of 10 teams next season, one year before the National League follows suit, the American League may again take the initiative by widening its operations to 12 teams in 1963.

The biggest obstacle is not to find suitable cities, as is generally believed, but to find enough players of big league caliber to stock the new franchises.

Based on the example set by the American players last week when it sold 56 players to Washington and Los Angeles, its two newest members, a total of 168 more expendables would have to be unearthed to round out three leagues of eight teams each. Obviously, this cannot be done in a short space of time.

Despite this glaring drawback, a good many cities from all parts of the country are ready, and willing to stake their claim for a major league franchise. Oakland, Dallas and Buffalo are among those which have been especially aggressive in their efforts to follow Houston and Minneapolis-St. Paul into the big leagues.

From a well-informed source comes the information that the National League already has done the spadework to incorporate Buffalo and Dallas-Ft. Worth into its structure at no later date than 1964. It is conceivable, the NL might move up its plans a year if the American should expand to 12 teams in 1962 or 1963.

The National, of course, will operate with 10 teams in 1962, with the addition of Houston and the return of New York.

The American, realizing the need of another California club to go with Los Angeles in order to trim travel expenses, currently are eyeing the Oakland-San Francisco area for its 11th club.

Oakland, which has been without professional ball since the invasion of the Pacific Coast League territory, in 1958, is understood to be preparing for big time baseball. A plan to construct a suitable stadium is said to be on its agenda.

Other cities in the United States and Canada which appear as prospective major league candidates, from the standpoint of population, industry, spirit, and desire, include Toronto, Seattle and Denver.

At the recent major league meetings in St. Louis, the majors adopted an amendment to Rule 1 (c), governing the addition of new clubs accomodate shifts and growth of population. This was designed to make it less difficult for qualified cities to acquire major league status.

At the play allotment meeting in Boston this week, at which the two new AL clubs spent $4½ million dollars for ball players, league President Joe Cronin indicated his circuit was planning on a 12-club league in the near future.

"Our expansion to 10 teams next year is only the beginning," he said. "This is only a plateau. I think there is further expansion ahead and these two new teams are just a beginning in the American League plans."

Bossier Visits Ouachita Gym For Cage Tilt

Bossier City's undefeated Bearcats come to town Tuesday to test coach Herb Holliman's Ouachita Lions at the local school's gym, with a junior-varsity game starting at 6:30 p.m. and the varsity tilt beginning at 8 o'clock.

The Bearcats, standing 5-0 for the season, are defending state AAA basketball champions and are starting out where they left off last year.

Ouachita, with a 6-3 record, lost two of their games to Ruston and the other to powerful Dubberly, a team that whipped Forest's outstanding crew, 64-38 in the Neville tournament Saturday.

Ouachita will start Carl Guinn, Bob Massingill, Tommy Beaube, Don Long and Milton Platt.

Prune Shrubs This Season

By MILDRED SWIFT

This is a good time to get heavy on the pruning shears on evergreens and summer blooming shrubs. Trim these to a natural look. No cape jasmine or ligustrum ever grew in the shape of a ball. Cut limbs at different level, being sure to take some branches off low, down where they come out of the ground or join the main trunk. That insures some new growth that will prevent "bald" spots. Cut limbs on a downward slant. Seal cuts if they're large limbs, using tree seal.

MORE ON PRUNING

Remember you've pruning to shape the plant, to induce blooming, to keep the shrub within the bounds of space allotted to it; to maintain healthfulness and vigor of the plant and to stimulate new growth.

MORE GARDENING

Several calls have just come in about fertilizing camellias, now. The danger of this is, if we feed them now and we have a week or 10 days of warm weather in January (as we usually do) those fertilized plants will put on new growth. Then when the freezes come, this new growth will be killed. You will be working your plants overtime with no results. Wait until January or February.

Watch camellias as they bloom to see the varieties you would like to buy. Also, many people want to prune roses, now. Wait until February to do that job. Open cuts can cause serious damage when the freeze come.

AZALEAS

If you have some shade in your garden, you may want to plant some azaleas. They require care. The Indicas are much hardier and they grow large. Some of the common ones are Formosa, pride of Mobile, elegance, salmon, pride of Darking, Fisher pink and Fielder's white.

In the Kurumes you have plants that have smaller foliage, grow compact and tend to be dwarf. Among some good varieties are: coral bell, pink pearl, Hinodegiri, snow. The snow turns yellow very soon after blooming and for that reason, many gardeners do not like them.

Remember, azaleas like acid soil, shade and good drainage. They are planted shallow since the roots come to the top of the ground for food. Call our office for an azalea bulletin and read carefully the planting instructions.

No need to fertilize tulips. They only last one year. The flowers are already formed in the bulb for this year, and that's the life of the bulb.

Fertilize spider lilies, now. They are in active growth and will continue to be through the winter months. That fertilizer you give them now may mean the difference between fine blooms next fall and scant or no blooms. That's especially true of the rarer types. The old red ones seems to thrive even when neglected. Even they will respond to feeding, though.

REMINDER

A reminder — when pruning those evergreens, don't cut out more than one-third of the plant during any year.

This is a good time to put your garden tools in shape. Sharpen the cutting edges and clean all of them. A coating of oil prevents rust. If your power mower has gasoline in the tank, start the motor to running and let it run until all the fuel is burned. That prevent's the gasoline from gumming up the motor and interfering with operations next spring.

SUGGESTIONS

It's a good idea to keep saving egg cartons. They make a safe storage place for Christmas tree ornaments.

Do your artificial wreaths and sprays and poinsettias look too tired to use again this year? Try sponging them with "dry" soap or detergent suds skimmed from the top of the bowl. This washes away the year's accumulated dust and makes them glisten again.

There'll be no coaxing and cajo'ing the children to wash their faces and hands before meals, if you provide them with gay white terrycloth mitts emblazoned with Santa's face. These color-fast mitts double as hand puppets when their soap and water duty is done.

A very simple and inexpensive door swag can be made from a wire coat hanger, a piece of poultry wire, twigs of a coniferous evergreen, three small Christmas tree ornaments and a bow of waterproof ribbon. Shape the coat hanger into a triangle, with the hook at the bottom and the point of the triangle at the top. Fasten poultry wire to the triangle and cut to shape. Weave small twigs of the conifer in the poultry wire, keeping the shape of the triangle at the edges. Start at the top so you can cover the ends of the twigs with each succeeding row of the evergreen. Fasten the bow of red ribbon to cover the hook of the hanger. Attach the small ornaments to the ends of some of the twigs. Hang on the door with bow at the bottom.

IDEA

A simple and clever idea is a tree decorated with light bulbs as ornaments. Sequins, beads and rhinestones can be glued on the bulbs, a string attached and then tied to the tree. You may not have enough old bulbs this year, but you can start saving for Christmas, 1961.

A pretty decoration is to use styrofoam balls. Roll these in glue then in glitter. On a white or green tree they show up beautifully.

Condition your Christmas greens and they'll stay fresh longer. Stand them in a solution of one cup of sugar or sirup to each quart of water. Set these outside, in the solution for three days before bringing the greens in the house.

So many of the monthly magazines have suggestions for making Christmas table cloths. They really dress up the house and can be carried over year after year. Gladys Dickerson has about the prettiest I've ever seen, made of net, ribbon, beads, etc.

PROTECTION

An insecticide spray solution developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Piano Technicians Guide has proved effective for control and prevention of carpet beetles and clothes moths in pianos which cause widespread damage by feeding on the wool felt parts.

The new solution is inexpensive to produce commercially and easy for technicians to apply. This is colorless, evaporates rapidly and leaves no odor.

Manufacturers estimate that at least 10 million pianos are in use in the United States. The Piano Technicians Guide shows that between 60 and 70 per cent of pianos, 10 years old or older, had insect damaged felt.

There are still some "wrinkles" to be ironed out before the solution will be on the market.

A velveteen that has a two-way nap is on the market. You save material because you can place your pattern as you do on any material. Other velveteens, the pattern must all be placed in one direction.

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday and Tuesday, TBA; Wednesday, Christmas arrangements with Gladys Kulke; Thursday and Friday, Christmas cooking (including the turkey), with Mildred.

See you next week.

ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Make Advance Plans For Special Pictures

CHRISTMAS SPONTANEITY is a sight to behold and a joy forever . . . if it is captured on film. Camera, film, lights must be prepared in advance for the instant it takes place.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

There's a good week now between camera fans and the climatic "C" Day ... Christmas Day. It's a week the wise ones will spend in planning, preparations and practicing: planning which cameras to use and what supplies are needed, preparing the equipment and lighting, and practicing camera angles for quick focus and exposure adjustments. It's the best way to assure good family pictures of the wonderful, hectic holiday with a minimum of complications.

Pictures, we all know, are the result of a negative-positive process. Good advice of the sensible things to do presents the positive position. Suppose we look at the negative side.

IMAGINE

Imagine a typical Christmas scene: a tinselled tree, brightly wrapped packages and the radiant family, gathered together for the moment of sharing. It's a heart - warming event, climaxed by the youngsters' gleeful assault on their gift wrappings. At this moment, daddy recognizes the obvious and decides it must be recorded.

"Stop" he hollers. "Hold everything! Don't move 'till I get the camera . . . and see if I have any film" He can't find any.

Or even if he has the camera loaded and a supply of flashbulbs handy he might come up with a dud when he presses the button.

"Darn it!" he wails. "That's the third bulb I've tried and it still doesn't go off. Why didn't I get new batteries for this flashgun?"

SUPPOSE

Or suppose the flash firing proceeds smoothly until the whole roll of color film is finished, rewound and ready for processing when he remembers something.

"Good grief!" he exclaims. "That's daylight type film which I started on some outdoor shots. Now all those beautiful flash shots will be off color!"

Well, you get the picture even it our unlucky dad didn't. It's a sad picture which needn't come your way if you use this week to plan, prepare and practice.

In home movies particularly, practice by shooting the preliminary preparations for Christmas Day. Holiday street scenes, gift shopping, package wrapping and tree trimming are all part of the Yuletide story and should be shot as the events take place.

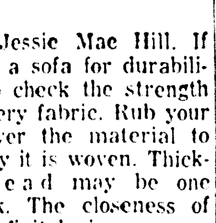
One of the most effective, yet simple home movie tricks can be used to enliven "Our 1960 Christmas" film. It's the magical effect of the Christmas tree decorating itself while daddy nonchantly snaps his fingers in command and mother and the children look on in wonder.

To do it, the camera must be in a single fixed position throughout the entire sequence either on an immovable tripod or wedged firmly on a table. It is focused on the entire tree with proper lighting to show it clearly. The sequence might start with dad setting it in place then retiring to a comfortable easy chair. He props his feet up blissfully then snaps his fingers.

The camera shoots the bare tree for about four or five seconds then stops. An ornament is added to the tree, the lights are put on and the camera button is pressed and quickly released so that only a few frames are recorded. A second ornament is adjusted on the tree and a few more frames are exposed. A third, fourth and fifth ornament are added and each one is recorded on a few frames of film.

EXTENSION NOTES

Many Plan Living Gift



By AUDREY DAWSON

I don't believe many of you homemakers will be in your garden working these next two weeks, but I've heard a number of people (including our county agent), say they were giving a living gift for Christmas — a plant. So to be sure it will grow, here are a few suggestions.

Dig a hole at least twice the size of the plant ball or the spread of the roots. Use a good soil mixture around the new plant. Set the plant no lower than it was before being dug. Settin one-half inch higher than the original plant depth is best. This will allow for settling.

ROASTING TURKEY

Its about time to cook that festive bird — the turkey. Here are a few points that will help you, Mrs. Young Homemaker. Prepare that bird which will make a hit with all the family. By all means roast it. Don't boil it and there's no place for a pressure cooker or broiler for the turkeys on the market today. They are young birds and tender.

Now for the suggestions: Use an open shallow pan with rack—do not cover and do not cook at high heat to sear the bird. The shallow pan permits heat to circulate around the bird to roast it evenly. The rack should be at least a half-inch off the bottom of the pan. This chart from our nutrition specialist, Mrs. Irene Turner, may also be of help to you.

Eight to 12 pound turkey 2½—to 4 hours; 12 to 16 pound turkey, 4 to 4½ hours; 16 to 20 pound turkey, 4 to 6 hours. These times were given for 325 degrees oven temperature.

FREEZING ROLLS

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want to serve your family your good home-made rolls for Christmas dinner, make them now. Shape your yeast dough into rolls, wrap well and freeze. Be sure to use the dough within two or three weeks. Frozen rolls will take about 4 hours to thaw and rise. Bake the frozen rolls in the same manner as fresh rolls.

BUYING FURNITURE

If a new chair or couch is to be one of the Christmas gifts for your family this year, here are a few tips on selecting from our specialist, Mrs. Jessie Mae Hill. If you must buy a sofa for durability, be sure to check the strength of the upholstery fabric. Rub your finger tips over the material to see how tightly it is woven. Thickness of thread may be one straight index. The closeness of the threads definitely is.

Cat lovers and folks who like to curl their feet up on the couch should avoid coverings with long floating threads or nubby threads. Washable vinyl upholstery is a good buy for those seeking durability. It will take a considerable amount of abuse from children without showing "battle fatigue." Being washable, it can easily be kept clean.

CANDLE WAX

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, escape the job of removing candle wax during the holidays you will be a lucky one. But for those of us who are less fortunate, its not a big job. Candle wax can be removed with very little trouble if you have the know how. The tools you will need are a spatula, two white blotters, your iron and a mild solvent. Two useful solvents are denatured alcohol or carbon tetrachloride. You can buy these two solvents at most any drug store, but remember they should be kept out of reach of the children. Place the stain between two white blotters, cleaning tissues, or paper toweling and press with a warm iron. Change the blotters as they become soiled. Then sponge with the solvent. If your table linen is washable, wash in gentle suds.

If wax has been dropped on your rug — scrape off all the wax with a dull knife or spatula. Then with a clean soft white cloth sponge off the remaining wax with carbon tetrachloride.

A THOUGHT

If you can't be thankful for what you receive, be thankful for what you escape.

Mum Grower Finds Hobby Work Filled

BY HAROLD CASE
Correspondent

VIDALIA, (Special) — Chrysanthemum growing is an interesting hobby, but a person shouldn't take it up unless he has plenty of time — every day.

That's the advice master mum grower Russell Rousseau probably would give, if asked. Russel, a Vidalia resident, formerly of Natchez, Miss., is employed as wood sealing clerk by a paper-mill, has been hobbying around with mums for four years and has produced blooms up to eight and one-half inches in diameter.

CHECKING

Each morning before the sun gets too warm Russell has to check every protective bag to make sure it isn't touching the bloom anywhere. If the bag should touch a bloom the sun would scorch the petals.

Bag-checking, however, is but one of the jobs a mum grower takes on. Other duties are cultivating and fertilizing the plants and pinching off unwanted buds and sucker growth regularly.

Russell guesses that he devotes at least three hours a day to his hobby. The three hours a day comes regularly from April, when the plants are set out, until the final blooms are cut in November.

In April, Russell sets out new plants. Not quite six inches high, the plants are cultivated and fertilized regularly, the stems being tied to supporting wires at one-foot intervals. By bloom time some of the plants will have grown to a height of six feet, he says.

Journalist Greeley On New Stamp

Horace Greeley, noted newspaperman of the 19th Century, will be honored on a new 4-cent U.S. stamp in the "Famous American" series on Feb. 3, 1961. It will be placed on first day sale at Chappaqua, N. Y. where Greeley was a resident for many years.

The stamp will feature a likeness of Greeley based on a photograph by Mathew B. Brady and engraved by A. H. Ritchie in 1864.

Greeley (1811-1872) established the New York Tribune in 1841 and was its editor for 30 years. He is especially known for his call "Go West, young man, Go West" at a time when the nation was expanding westward. Though he supported Abraham Lincoln for the presidency, he ran against Ulysses S. Grant on the Liberal Republican ticket in 1872 and was defeated.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations of the Greeley stamp may send addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Chappaqua, N. Y. Requests must be received by the Postmaster before midnight Jan. 30, 1961.

The outside envelope to the Postmaster should be clearly marked "First Day Covers 4-Cent Greeley Stamp."

The Portuguese Colonies of Cape Verde have issued two new stamps commemorating the 5th centenary of Portuguese colonization in Cape Verde. Depicted on the stamps are a likeness of Antonio da Nola and Diogo Gomes.

Many countries throughout the world have been issuing, or are about to issue, stamps commemorating the 15th anniversary of the United Nations.

Haiti has issued three new stamps for this occasion. The basic design features a view of the United Nations building against the New York City skyline, the United Nations symbol and a lowest value is for regular postage and the two higher values are airmails.

Togo, until recently a U. N. Trusteeship, and admitted to the world body during the present session, also has issued a set honoring this U. N. anniversary.

The Togo set consists of six stamps based on a design by M. Shamir of Israel. The stamps show Togo's new flag and the United Nations emblem.

West Germany honors the 125th anniversary of the German Railroads by issuing a new 10 pfennig green and black stamp. The purpose of the new stamp is to emphasize the importance of rail transportation to the people and the industry of West Germany.

The main design features a steam locomotive in vignette form. The designer of the stamp is Hermann Bentele, a graphic artist from Kiel.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Winter Tree Identification

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

How many trees can you tell apart by their bark in winter? On a stroll through the woods, some trees are outstanding for their beauty of trunk and bark. In wet places and near streams, you may run into the white-green-and-grey sycamores. They are about the whitest of our Southern trees and the nearest approach to the white birches so popular in the North. Perhaps the most outstanding flaky barked tree is the Southern shell-bark hickory, a magnificent straight tree of moist places and hills nearby. It is no wonder that the names, shell-bark and shag-bark have been given to these trees, for the bark looks as if it had been pulled off in long strips and glued insecurely back on.

RIVER BIRCH

Still another tree of moist places and streamsides is black or river birch. If we cannot grow the white birch of the north, this tree is equally as beautiful with its deep cream and brown tones. In the past few years, southerners have come to appreciate this birch as a fast growing tree of great beauty. Look for the birch groves in sandy flats and low places along the road when you are travelling.

Around old home sites, you may often find groves of quaking aspens so dense that you cannot get through them. These aspen thickets grew up from one tree that was planted back in the days when "weeping" and mourning trees were popular and sad poetry was read by everyone. Today, no gardener would dare to plant one of these invasive European trees which are really poplars.

Perhaps the best of the poplars — and the most beautiful of the tall trees with whitish bark for the south — is Bolle's poplar which we have recommended in this column several times. The shape of this tree is like that of the much planted Lombardy poplar which breaks up so easily in storms. Bolle's poplar is a tall slim form of the white poplar of Europe. It was found between 1875 and 1878 on the north side of the Karataw Mountains between Samarcand and Bokhara and introduced into Europe from there.

HACKBERRY

In the woods, your eye will immediately pick out the warty bark of the hackberry or sugarberry tree. Nothing else has such warts all over it. Just the opposite is the sleek smooth bark of ironwood or hornbeam, a lovely little tree that likes creek banks where it hangs out over the water with the fine textured, rougher barked hop horbeams. True Spirit Of Yuletide

By MARY M. JARDINE

Every year at Christmas time our thoughts naturally turn to the illuminated evergreen tree, decorated in honor of the Christ Child. The tree which represents the true spirit of the Yuletide festival. But how much thought have we given to the origin and significance of the Christmas tree, its charming legends, or the history and symbolism of its ornaments?

The origin of the Christmas tree is obscure. It represents a mingling of ancient tree worship and medieval legends. From time immemorial, the tree, like the sun, was held sacred by primitive man, symbolizing to him the great mystery of universal life.

The sun was worshipped as the source of light and life and great festivals were held in its honor. As Christianity gradually replaced paganism, the early missionaries taught their followers to believe in Christ as the "Light of Life" and of the evergreen tree as a symbol of life eternal

LEGEND

One legend related that the Christ Child, in appreciation for the hospitality of a forester and his family - "broke off a branch from a fir tree and set it in the earth. See, said He, I have gladly received your gifts and this is my gift to you. Hence forward this tree shall bear its fruit Christmas and you shall always have abundance." "The First Christmas Tree" a beautifully told story, was written by Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

Saint Winifred was a missionary to the German people, who in the eighth century worhsipped the thunder god; Thor. At one of their ceremonials the good saint persuaded the pagans to let him cut down their sacred oak tree. As the mighty oak crashed to the ground, there came into view a beautiful young fir' tree - the symbol of the spirit of their new faith. St. Winifred then said, "Here is this little tree, a young child of the forest. This shall be your holy tree tonight. It is the wood of peace, for your houses are built of fir; it is the sign of everlasting life, for its leaves are evergreen See how it points toward heaven Let this be called the tree of th Christ Child. Gather about it—not in the wild-wood, but in your homes. There it will shelter no deeds of blood, but loving gifts and rites of kindness."

Legend also tells us that "on the first Christmas Eve, all the trees in the forest blossomed and bore fruit." In accordance with this legend even today our Christmas trees are adorned with flowers, nuts and fruit. The first historical mention was made of the Christmas tree when in 1605 a German writer stated "At Christmas time they set up fir trees in the parlours at Strassburg and hung thereon paper roses, apples, wafers, gold foil and sweets."

SYMBOLIZE

The Christmas lights symbolize - "Christ the Light of the World" guiding men to peace and happiness. The dove is the symbol of peace, the bluebird of happiness. The star, symbol of hope, illuminated the way of the Wise Men to Bethlehem. The Angel figurine symbolize God's messengers, the Heavenly Choir singing "Glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace, good - will toward men."

Bells are emblems of joy, for on Christmas morn they peal forth from church towers the glad tidings of the birthday of the Babe of Bethlehem. The gold, silver and vari - colored spheres represent the sun, moon and stars; luminous heavenly spheres, symbols of universal concord and harmony. Santa Claus, embodiment of love and generosity, is the Spirit of Christmas.

DR. WRIGHT

Festive Holiday arrangements were designed by Dr. John A. Wright of Louisiana Tech for his one - man show at the Garden Center. First of the arrangements featured a tall plum - colored compote of modern design. A most appealing line - mass arrangement was made of lavender chrysanthemums. A line of flowers was brought over the rim of the container creating good balance.

Twin white compotes were selected for the next design. One compote was placed on a small white base elevating one arrangement slightly above the other. Three dimensional designs were created with red and white carnations. Boston fern was used in the background. The color most compelling. These were staged against a chartreuse background and would be suitable for a large living room table or credenza.

Gold, white and green was the color scheme of another modern design. The container was a large round bowl of white and gold set on its own walnut base. In this Dr. Wright placed a golden palm spathe in a vertical position. Embellishing the vertical line were curled leaves of banana sprayed gold, and snowy juniper. The juniper was brought low in the bowl thus creating a pyramid triangle. Accenting the design were large golden flowers in the rosette form of double camellias. A very elegant design and suitable for a large entrance hall or living room table.

The Garden Center will be closed from December 20 to January 3rd, 1961. Happy Holidays to all.

Prune Shrubs This Season

By MILDRED SWIFT

This is a good time to go heavy on the pruning shears on evergreens and summer blooming shrubs. Trim these to a natural look. No cape jasmine or ligustrum ever grew in the shape of a ball. Cut limbs at different level, being sure to take some branches off low, down where they come out of the ground or join the main trunk. That insures some new growth that will prevent "bald" spots. Cut limbs on a downward slant. Seal cuts if they're large limbs, using tree seal.

MORE ON PRUNING

Remember you've pruning to shape the plant, to induce blooming, to keep the shrub within the bounds of space allotted to it; to maintain healthfulness and vigor of the plant and to stimulate new growth.

MORE GARDENING

Several calls have just come in about fertilizing camellias, now. The danger of this is, if we feed them now and we have a week or 10 days of warm weather in January (as we usually do) those fertilized plants will put on new growth. Then when the freezes come, this new growth will be killed. You will be working your plants overtime with no results. Wait until January or February.

Watch camellias as they bloom to see the varieties you would like to buy. Also, many people want to prune roses, now. Wait until February to do that job. Open cuts can cause serious damage when the freezes come.

AZALEAS

If you have some shade in your garden, you may want to plant some azaleas. They require care. The Indicas are much hardier and they grow large. Some of the common ones are Formosa, pride of Mobile, elegance, salmon, pride of Darking, Fisher pink and Fielder's white.

In the Kurumes you have plants that have smaller foliage, grow compact and tend to be dwarf. Among some good varieties are: coral bell, pink pearl, Hinondegiri, snow. The snow turns yellow very soon after blooming and for that reason, many gardeners do not like them.

Remember, azaleas like acid soil, shade and good drainage. They are planted shallow since the roots come to the top of the ground for food. Call our office for an azalea bulletin and read carefully the planting instructions.

No need to fertilize tulips. They only last one year. The flowers are already formed in the bulb for this year, and that's the life of the bulb.

Fertilize spider lilies, now. They are in active growth and will continue to be through the winter months. That fertilizer you give them now may mean the difference between fine blooms next fall and scant or no blooms. That's especially true of the rarer types. The old red ones seems to thrive even when neglected. Even they will respond to feeding, though.

REMINDER

A reminder — when pruning those evergreens, don't cut out more than one-third of the plant during any year.

This is a good time to put your garden tools in shape. Sharpen the cutting edges and clean all of them. A coating of oil prevents rust. If your power mower has gasoline in the tank, start the motor to running and let it run until all the fuel is burned. That prevents the gasoline from gumming up the motor and interfering with operations next spring.

SUGGESTIONS

It's a good idea to begin saving egg cartons. They make a safe storage place for Christmas tree ornaments.

Do your artificial wreaths and sprays and poinsettias look too tired to use again this year? Try sponging them with "dry" soap or detergent suds skimmed from the top of the bowl. This washes away the year's accumulated dust and makes them glisten again.

There'll be no coaxing and cajoling the children to wash their faces and hands before meals, if you provide them with gay white terrycloth mitts emblazoned with Santa's face. These color-fast mitts double as hand puppets when their soap and water duty is done.

A very simple and inexpensive door swag can be made from a wire coat hanger, a piece of poultry wire, twigs of a caniferous evergreen, three small Christmas tree ornaments and a bow of waterproof ribbon. Shape the coat hanger into a triangle, with the hook at the bottom and the point of the triangle at the top. Fasten poultry wire to the triangle and cut to shape. Weave small twigs of the conifer in the poultry wire, keeping the shape of the triangle at the edges. Start at the top so you can cover the ends of the twigs with each succeeding row of the evergreen. Fasten the bow of red ribbon to cover the hook of the hanger. Attach the small ornaments to the ends of some of the twigs. Hang on the door with bow at the bottom.

IDEA

A simple and clever idea is a tree decorated with light bulbs as ornaments. Sequins, beads and rhinestones can be glued on the bulbs, a string attached and then tied to the tree. You may not have enough old bulbs this year, but you can start saving for Christmas, 1961.

A pretty decoration is to use styrofoam balls. Roll these in glue then in glitter. On a white or green tree they show up beautifully.

Condition your Christmas greens and they'll stay fresh longer. Stand them in a solution of one cup of sugar or sirup to each quart of water. Set these outside, in the solution for three days before bringing the greens in the house.

So many of the monthly magazines have suggestions for making Christmas table cloths. They really dress up the house and can be carried over year after year. Gladys Dickerson has about the prettiest I've ever seen, made of net, ribbon, beads, etc.

PROTECTION

An insecticide spray solution developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Piano Technicians Guide has proved effective for control and prevention of carpet beetles and clothes moths in pianos which cause widespread damage by feeding on the wool felt parts.

The new solution is inexpensive to produce commercially and easy for technicians to apply. This is colorless, evaporates rapidly and leaves no odor.

Manufacturers estimate that at least 10 million pianos are in use in the United States. The Piano Technicians Guide shows that between 60 and 70 per cent of pianos, 10 years old or older, had insect damaged felt.

There are still some "wrinkles" to be ironed out before the solution will be on the market.

A velveteen that nas a two-way nap is on the market. You save material because you can place your pattern as you do on any material. Other velveteens, the pattern must all be placed in one direction.

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday and Tuesday, TBA; Wednesday, Christmas arrangements with Gladys Kulke; Thursday and Friday, Christmas cooking (including the turkey), with Mildred.

See you next week.

Mum Grower Finds Hobby Work Filled

BY HAROLD CASE
Correspondent

VIDALIA, (Special) — Chrysanthemum growing is an interesting hobby, but a person shouldn't take it up unless he has plenty of time — every day.

That's the advice master mum grower Russell Rousseau probably would give, if asked. Russel, a Vidalia resident, formerly of Natchez, Miss., is employed as wood scaling clerk by a paper-mill, has been hobbying around with mums for four years and has produced blooms up to eight and one-half inches in diameter.

CHECKING

Each morning before the sun gets too warm Russell has to check every protective bag to make sure it isn't touching the bloom anywhere. If the bag should touch a bloom the sun would scorch the petals.

Bag-checking, however, is but one of the jobs a mum grower takes on. Other duties are cultivating and fertilizing the plants and pinching off unwanted buds and sucker growth regularly.

Russell guesses that he devotes at least three hours a day to his hobby. The three hours a day comes regularly from April, when the plants are set out, until the final blooms are cut in November.

In April, Russell sets out new plants. Not quite six inches high, the plants are cultivated and fertilized regularly, the stems being tied to supporting wires at one-foot intervals. By the time some of the plants will have grown to a height of six feet, he says.

ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Make Advance Plans For Special Pictures

CHRISTMAS SPONTANEITY is a sight to behold and a joy forever . . . if it is captured on film. Camera, film, lights must be prepared in advance for the instant it takes place.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

There's a good week now between camera fans and the climatic "C" Day . . . Christmas Day. It's a week the wise ones will spend in planning, preparations and practicing: planning which cameras to use and what supplies are needed, preparing the equipment and lighting, and practicing camera angles for quick focus and exposure adjustments. It's the best way to assure good family pictures of the wonderful, hectic holiday with a minimum of complications.

Pictures, we all know, are the result of a negative-positive process. Good advice of the sensible things to do presents the positive position. Suppose we look at the negative side.

IMAGINE

Imagine a typical Christmas scene: a tinselled tree, brightly wrapped packages and the radiant family, gathered together for the moment of sharing. It's a heart - warming event, climaxed by the youngsters' gleeful assault on their gift wrappings. At this moment, daddy recognizes the obvious and decides it must be recorded.

"Stop" he hollers. "Hold everything! Don't move 'till I get the camera . . . and see if I have any film" He can't find any.

Or even if he has the camera loaded and a supply of flashbulbs handy he might come up with a dud when he presses the button.

"Darn it!" he wails. "That's the third bulb I've tried and it still doesn't go off. Why didn't I get new batteries for this flashgun?"

SUPPOSE

Or suppose the flash firing proceeds smoothly until the whole roll of color film is finished, rewound and ready for processing when he remembers something.

"Good grief!" he exclaims. "That's daylight type film which I started on some outdoor shots. Now all those beautiful flash shots will be off color!"

Well, you get the picture even if our unlucky dad didn't. It's a sad picture which needn't come your way if you use this week to plan, prepare and practice.

In home movies particularly, practice by shooting the preliminary preparations for Christmas Day. Holiday street scenes, gift shopping, package wrapping and tree trimming are all part of the Yuletide story and should be shot as the events take place.

One of the most effective, yet simple home movie tricks can be used to enliven "Our 1960 Christmas" film. It's the magical effect of the Christmas tree decorating itself while daddy nonchantly snaps his fingers in command and mother and the children look on in wonder.

To do it, the camera must be in a single fixed position throughout the entire sequence either on an immovable tripod or wedged firmly on a table. It is focused on the entire tree with proper lighting to show it clearly. The sequence might start with dad setting it in place then retiring to a comfortable easy chair. He props his feet up blissfully then snaps his fingers.

The camera shoots the bare tree for about four or five seconds then stops. An ornament is added to the tree, the lights are put on and the camera button is pressed and quickly released so that only a few frames are recorded. A second ornament is adjusted on the tree and a few more frames are exposed. A third, fourth and fifth ornament are added and each one is recorded on a few frames of film.

Many Plan Living Gift

By AUDREY DAWSON

I don't believe many of you homemakers will be in your garden working these next two weeks, but I've heard a number of people (including our county agent), say they were giving a living gift for Christmas — a plant. So to be sure it will grow, here are a few suggestions.

Dig a hole at least twice the size of the plant ball or the spread of the roots. Use a good soil mixture around the new plant. Set the plant no lower than it was before being dug. Settin one-half inch higher than the original plant depth is best. This will allow for settling.

ROASTING TURKEY

Its about time to cook that festive bird — the turkey. Here are a few points that will help you, Mrs. Young Homemaker. Prepare that bird which will make a hit with all the family. By all means roast it. Don't boil it and there's no place for a pressure cooker or broiler for the turkeys on the market today. They are young birds and tender.

Now for the suggestions: Use an open shallow pan with rack—do not cover and do not cook at high heat to sear the bird. The shallow pan permits heat to circulate around the bird to roast it evenly. The rack should be at least a half-inch off the bottom of the pan. This chart from our nutrition specialist, Mrs. Irene Turner, may also be of help to you.

Eight to 12 pound turkey 2½—to 4 hours; 12 to 16 pound turkey, 4 to 4½ hours; 16 to 20 pound turkey, 4 to 6 hours. These times were given for 325 degrees oven temperature.

FREEZING ROLLS

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, want to serve your family your good home-made rolls for Christmas dinner, make them now. Shape your yeast dough into rolls, wrap well and freeze. Be sure to use the dough within two or three weeks. Frozen rolls will take about 4 hours to thaw and rise. Bake the frozen rolls in the same manner as fresh rolls.

BUYING FURNITURE

If a new chair or couch is to be one of the Christmas gifts for your family this year, here are a few tips on selecting from our specialist, Mrs. Jessie Mae Hill. If you must buy a sofa for durability, be sure to check the strength of the upholstery fabric. Rub your finger tips over the material to see how tightly it is woven. Thickness of thread may be one straight index. The closeness of the threads definitely is.

Cat lovers and folks who like to curl their feet up on the couch should avoid coverings with long floating threads or nubby threads. Washable vinyl upholstery is a good buy for those seeking durability. It will take a considerable amount of abuse from children without showing "battle fatigue." Being washable, it can easily be kept clean.

CANDLE WAX

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, escape the job of removing candle wax during the holidays you will be a lucky one. But for those of us who are less fortunate, its not a big job. Candle wax can be removed with very little trouble if you have the know how. The tools you will need are a spatula, two white blotters, your iron and a mild solvent. Two useful solvents are denatured alcohol or carbon tetrachloride. You can buy these two solvents at most any drug store, but remember they should be kept out of reach of the children. Place the stain between two white blotters, cleaning tissues, or paper toweling and press with a warm iron. Change the blotters as they become soiled. Then sponge with the solvent. If your table linen is washable, wash in gentle suds.

If wax has been dropped on your rug — scrape off all the wax with a dull knife or spatula. Then with a clean soft white cloth sponge off the remaining wax with carbon tetrachloride.

A THOUGHT

If you can't be thankful for what you receive, be thankful for what you escape.

Journalist Greeley On New Stamp

Horace Greeley, noted newspaperman of the 19th Century, will be honored on a new 4-cent U.S. stamp in the "Famous American" series on Feb. 3, 1961. It will be placed on first day sale at Chappaqua, N. Y. where Greeley was a resident for many years.

The stamp will feature a likeness of Greeley based on a photograph by Mathew B. Brady and engraved by A. H. Ritchie in 1864.

Greeley (1811-1872) established the New York Tribune in 1841 and was its editor for 30 years. He is especially known for his call "Go West, young man, Go West" at a time when the nation was expanding westward. Though he supported Abraham Lincoln for the presidency, he ran against Ulysses S. Grant on the Liberal Republican ticket in 1872 and was defeated.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations of the Greeley stamp may send addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Chappaqua, N. Y. Requests must be received by the Postmaster before midnight Jan. 30, 1961.

The outside envelope to the Postmaster should be clearly marked "First Day Covers 4-Cent Greeley Stamp."

The Portuguese Colonies of Cape Verde have issued two new stamps commemorating the 5th centenary of Portuguese colonization in Cape Verde. Depicted on the stamps are a likeness of Antonio da Nola and Diogo Gomes.

Many countries throughout the world have been issuing, or are about to issue, stamps commemorating the 15th anniversary of the United Nations.

Haiti has issued three new stamps for this occasion. The basic design features a view of the United Nations building against the New York City skyline, the United Nations symbol and a lowest value is for regular postage and the two higher values are airmails.

Togo, until recently a U. N. Trusteeship, and admitted to the world body during the present session, also has issued a set honoring this U. N. anniversary.

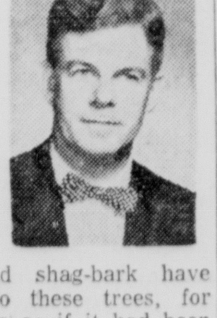
The Togo set consists of six stamps based on a design by M. Shamir of Israel. The stamps show Togo's new flag and the United Nations emblem.

West Germany honors the 125th anniversary of the German Railroads by issuing a new 10 pfennig green and black stamp. The purpose of the new stamp is to emphasize the importance of rail transportation to the people and the industry of West Germany.

The main design features a steam locomotive in vignette form. The designer of the stamp is Hermann Bentele, a graphic artist from Kiel.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Winter Tree Identification



By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

How many trees can you tell apart by their bark in winter? On a stroll through the woods, some trees are outstanding for their beauty of trunk and bark. In wet places and near streams, you may run into the white-green-and-grey sycamores. They are about the whitest of our Southern trees and the nearest approach to the white birches so popular in the North. Perhaps the most outstanding flaky barked tree is the Southern shell-bark hickory, a magnificent straight tree of moist places and hills nearby. It is no wonder that the names, shell-bark and shag-bark have been given to these trees, for the bark looks as if it had been pulled off in long strips and glued insecurely back on.

RIVER BIRCH

Still another tree of moist places and streamsides is black or river birch. If we cannot grow the white birch of the north, this tree is equally as beautiful with its deep cream and brown tones. In the past few years, southerners have come to appreciate this birch as a fast growing tree of great beauty. Look for the birch groves in sandy flats and low places along the road when you are travelling.

Around old home sites, you may often find groves of quaking aspens so dense that you cannot get through them. These aspen thickets grew up from one tree that was planted back in the days when "weeping" and mourning trees were popular and sad poetry was read by everyone. Today, no gardener would dare to plant one of these invasive European trees which are really poplars.

Perhaps the best of the poplars — and the most beautiful of the tall trees with whitish bark for the south — is Bolle's poplar which we have recommended in this column several times. The shape of this tree is like that of the much planted Lombardy poplar which breaks up so easily in storms. Bolle's poplar is a tall slim form of the white poplar of Europe. It was found between 1875 and 1878 on the north side of the Karataw Mountains between Samarcand and Bokhara and introduced into Europe from there.

HACKBERRY

In the woods, your eye will immediately pick out the warty bark of the hackberry or sugarberry tree. Nothing else has such warts all over it. Just the opposite is the sleek smooth bark of ironwood or hornbeam, a lovely little tree that likes creek banks where it hangs out over the water with the fine textured, rougher barked hop horbeams. Somehow, these bank hangers never seem to fall in, no matter how far out over the water they may go. Both of them transplant well if you can dig young ones out of sandy places.

Bernbet Farm Is Festive Setting Of Biedenharns Traditional Open House

Outstanding among weekend parties was the traditional Christmas Open House given Sunday from 4 until 7 p.m. by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn.

Myriads of twinkling electric lights dotted the spacious grounds surrounding the winding drive to Bernbet Farm, home of the Biedenharns, and scene of the festive occasion. Guests were also greeted on their arrival by a jolly electrically - lighted Santa Claus, from his post near the entrance.

Southern smilax and multi-colored lights outlined the entrance where a large gold Christmas wreath, tied with huge red and gold bows adorned the glass-paned door. Red, green and gold Christmas angels were used to decorate the glass panes on either side of the door.

Mr. and Mrs. Biedenharn greeted their guests in the entrance hall opposite a pier mirror, flanked by gold wooden sconces holding white candles, trimmed with red and gold ornaments. Suspended from each chandelier in the entrance was a red silk ball holding Christmas birds and sprig of mistletoe.

The huge serving table in the dining room held a 17 - branch white candelabra, centered with a pyramid tree of red cinnamon apples and green holly. Gracing the buffet was a white bead arrangement flanked by a pair of white Italian candelabra, each holding five red holly - trimmed twisted tapers.

In the living room where guests conversed were two huge arrangements of white chrysanthemums, each centered with red Christmas ball, and combined with gold pine and balsam foliage. The mantel held three graduated white openwork candles, draped in pine and red and white poinsettias. The massive round coffee table held four angels playing musical instruments, with a Christmas tree candle atop the miniature piano.

A large basket overflowing with fruits banked one corner of the room and white chrysanthemums were used in the bedroom.

An arrangement in the sitting room featured a gold lotus bowl, filled with holly and centered by a gold and white candle, while in the dressing room could be seen a pastel blue candle surrounded with angel hair and silver and pink tinsel stars.

Approximately 400 guests called during the appointed hours. Out-of - town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dixon of Hattiesburg, Mississippi.

Formal Fashions Will Light Sky With Glitter

Glitter, glitter and more glitter will light up the evening sky this season as fashion takes off on one of the most sparkling, extravagant orbits for evening clothes in many a moon.

This new glitter — achieved through sequins, embroidery, paillettes and brocades — is guaranteed to lift any woman out of the fashion doldrums and pose a whole new accessory problem, the Fashion Coordination Institute reports.

But the answer is as simple as it is glamorous . . . . glitter plus glitter. Only this strong-minded approach to accessorizing these glittering new evening fashions will succeed, warns the Institute. It maintains that any woman who attempts a conservative jewelry approach to these sparkling clothes will end up looking as though she had changed her mind half way through the act.

A sequined dress calls for the strong glitter of as many diamonds or rhinestones as a gal can afford. The pairing of big, bold, beautiful, glittering earrings with globs of sparkling bracelets is a marvelously effective approach, the Institute suggests.

The low-necked sparkling dress calls for a glittering, glamorous necklace to carry the sparkle story to the face. And with this combination, the Institute suggests a hair ornament to carry the glitter to the top of the head.

No discreet approach will work with these glittering clothes, according to the Institute.

MR. AND MRS. ERVIN GWEN COX

Cox-Bennett Vows Are In Yule Setting

An arch of Christmas holly and poinsettias formed a background in Faith Baptist church for the wedding of Miss Betty Jean Bennett and Ervin Gwen Cox, which was solemnized December 6 at 8 p.m.

Pedestal baskets of red and white gladioli, interspersed with red and white candles completed the setting for the double ring ceremony which was performed by the pastor, Rev. Willie Woodard.

The bride is the daughter of Clyde Bennett, Newellton and the late Mrs. Bennett. Mr. and Mrs. Lelon Cox of Monroe, are parents of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Gracie McKnight, organist, played appropriate nuptial selections and accompanied Mrs. Irene Williams, who sang "O Promise Me."

The bride, given in marriage by R. L. Hendrix, wore a waltz length gown of white Chantilly lace over taffeta. The gown was fashioned with three - quarter sleeves and tulle ruffles forming a bustle effect in back. Her veil of tulle was attached to a bandeaux of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Diane Hendrix, served as maid of honor and wore a red brocade sheath dress with a silk organza overskirt. She wore matching hat and shoes and carried a bouquet of red and white carnations.

Serving as best man was Thomas Felix Bunch and ushers were Jack Oglesbee and Ronnie Woodard.

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs Cox, wore a mauve pink dress with matching accessories and a white corsage.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlor. The bride's table, covered with white net over linen was centered with an arrangement of red and white pompons in a milk glass bowl, flanked with matching candle sticks. Red gladioli and holly were used throughout the reception room.

When the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride was wearing a blue wool jersey sheath with black accessories and a corsage from her bridal bouquet. The couple will be at home in Monroe.

Out - of - town guests included Mrs. V. L. Ingram, Tallulah; Mrs. Howard Busby and children, Mound; Mrs. R. A. Takewell and daughter, Jean, Bastrop; Gertrude and Frances Bennett, Newellton; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hareington, Wisner; Mrs. Ida Cox, Bastrop and Miss Sherry Landers, Bastrop.

Junior Coteries Present Joint Yule Program

Annual Christmas program by the three junior coteries, Moment, Chansonettes and A Sharp was held Saturday at the Little Theater building of Northeast Louisiana State College.

Hostesses for the joint meeting were Betty Heard, Jennifer Jackson, Jennifer Frazer and Carol Haddad, members of Moment Musical Coterie: Alice Haynes and Barbara Groves, Chansonettes and Mary Lou Holley, Judy Cobb and Peggy Lanier, A Sharp.

A small Christmas tree and green candles centered the tea table in the reception room where the hostesses served refreshments to mothers, music teachers and other guests. There were approximately 75 in attendance.

Following refreshments the group adjourned to the auditorium for the Christmas program. MR. AND MRS. ERVIN GWEN COX

Cox-Bennett Vows Are In Yule Setting

An arch of Christmas holly and poinsettias formed a background in Faith Baptist church for the wedding of Miss Betty Jean Bennett and Ervin Gwen Cox, which was solemnized December 6 at 8 p.m.

Pedestal baskets of red and white gladioli, interspersed with red and white candles completed the setting for the double ring ceremony which was performed by the pastor, Rev. Willie Woodard.

The bride is the daughter of Clyde Bennett, Newellton and the late Mrs. Bennett. Mr. and Mrs. Lelon Cox of Monroe, are parents of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Gracie McKnight, organist, played appropriate nuptial selections and accompanied Mrs. Irene Williams, who sang "O Promise Me."

The bride, given in marriage by R. L. Hendrix, wore a waltz length gown of white Chantilly lace over taffeta. The gown was fashioned with three - quarter sleeves and tulle ruffles forming a bustle effect in back. Her veil of tulle was attached to a bandeaux of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Diane Hendrix, served as maid of honor and wore a red brocade sheath dress with a silk organza overskirt. She wore matching hat and shoes and carried a bouquet of red and white carnations.

Serving as best man was Thomas Felix Bunch and ushers were Jack Oglesbee and Ronnie Woodard.

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs Cox, wore a mauve pink dress with matching accessories and a white corsage.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlor. The bride's table, covered with white net over linen was centered with an arrangement of red and white pompons in a milk glass bowl, flanked with matching candle sticks. Red gladioli and holly were used throughout the reception room.

When the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride was wearing a blue wool jersey sheath with black accessories and a corsage from her bridal bouquet. The couple will be at home in Monroe.

Out - of - town guests included Mrs. V. L. Ingram, Tallulah; Mrs. Howard Busby and children, Mound; Mrs. R. A. Takewell and daughter, Jean, Bastrop; Gertrude and Frances Bennett, Newellton; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hareington, Wisner; Mrs. Ida Cox, Bastrop and Miss Sherry Landers, Bastrop.

Young people's parties are right, proper, and completely charming for the holiday season. We have had several unusually interesting affairs this week. For instance, Mother Goose herself was in attendance at Highland Park country club Wednesday when MARTY MULLENS and BETTY COLE were honored at a nursery rhyme party, celebrating their sixth birthdays.

Invitations, mailed a week or more ago, were in the shape of Jack Horner's Christmas pie. The recipient pulled out a plum telling time and place of the party.

Mother Goose, costumed authentically, presided at the Wishing Well, where young guests received prizes—tops, tiny helicopters, gold cups.

Games were the decorations which carried out the party theme. Included on the schedule were "Hickory, Dickory, Dock, Come Walk Around the Clock"; "Knock Humpty Dumpty Off the Wall"; "Jack Be Nimble; Jack, Be Quick; Toss a Ring Over the Candlestick"; and "Pin the Spider on Miss Muffet's Web". Prizes, sacks of candy and bubble gum, were awarded to all contestants.

The Old Woman In the Shoe and all her children decorated the birthday cake. Tiny baby dolls and miniature cars were favors given to about fifty children who attended.

Another delightful party was the mother-daughter tea given by DOT KIPER and DOTTIE on Saturday afternoon. The hostesses wore identical outfits: full black taffeta skirts, white blouses with lace sleeves.

Pink and white were used for the living room decorations. On the mantel were white candles and pink net Christmas trees. A white basket held pink magnolia leaves on the piano.

In the dining room, a red cloth overlaid with white net covered the table. A red net tree flanked by a white candle was the centerpiece. Strawberry punch was served by MARTHA KIPER, assisted by her daughter JANET. ANN MURPHY served cookies, pecan kisses, candy squares and cheese straws. Thirty mothers and thirty-one daughters attended the party.

Friday night Lads N Lassies Fun club held its Christmas dinner dance on the Frances roof. Music for dancing was furnished by a real live DJ, who also interviewed the children on the air over KMLB.

Santa Claus visited Bayou DeSiard country club for the fifth birthday party of BOBBY GREENBAUM Wednesday. He checked on the children's wishes and behavior and then distributed party favors: Model airplanes for boys and manicure sets for girls. The young people's lounge, where the guests viewed a movie before Santa's arrival, was decorated with greenery and colorful baubles for the party. Santa Claus figurines, green tinsel and red balls were used on the refreshment table. Candles on the red, green, and white birthday cake were trees and Santas. Sixty children attended the party.

Visitors expected by CLAUSE RUSSELL and her daughter LEIGH for the holidays are the E. D. SKINNER family (she is the former Marshall Russell) of Northbrook, Illinois. Daughter TISH SKINNER arrives today, direct from Sweetbriar college, Virginia. Marshall, Ted, and daughter LEIGH, are expected on Thursday. They will remain through Christmas.

Bernbet Farm was scene of Christmas open house Sunday afternoon when BETTY and BERNARD BIEDENHARN were hosts to over a hundred friends. The dining room was heart of the party, with the delicious and unusual food bringing "oh's" and "ah's". A circle of tall, slender red tapers held enameled red balls in the center of the table while red candles decorated with holly burned on the buffet. A platter of turkey and ham, with hot mustard, assorted breads, and other trimmings for sandwiches was placed at one end. Tiny hot peppers stuffed with shrimp salad were served, as well as tuna salad in noodle nests.

In the breakfast room was a huge roast of beef, with miniature hot biscuits. Here also was set out a whole ham, various dips, stuffed celery, salted pecans, and other delectable "nibblers".

When EILEEN RUBIN and JOAN KING invited a few friends in for sherry Friday afternoon, the King home was decorated and ready for winter festivities. Joan used all gold and white, most suitable in her modern house. Her "tree" was a stylized cone of gold ribbons, attached to a point on the ceiling and around the rim of the large pouf used as its base. Gold balls hung inside, and gold packages were placed at the bottom.

In the dining room, twin arrangements of white chrysanthemums flanked a gold tree holding white candles. Gilded magnolia leaves and white camellias filled the gold sleigh on the buffet. Joan and Eileen served cucumber sandwiches, cheese straws, and salted and glazed pecans with sherry and coffee.

MARY FRANCES PICKETT, who plans to move from Monroe to Canada in January, was guest of honor at a bridge party Tuesday afternoon. Hostesses were members of her bridge club, who invited two extra tables of players. Guests gathered for dessert on the porch at Bayou DeSiard country club, where individual tables were centered with fat red candles encircled with holly. Winners were FRANCES ADCOCK, high; NELL FAUCETT, second; and MARIE COOKSTON, travelling prize. Mary Frances received an Early American fruit stand as a going-away gift.

Half the fun of the annual Charity Ball is watching the ladies in their finery. This year your reporter rejoiced at the number of floor-length ball gowns, high style again after an interval when their popularity declined. And with them, above-the-elbow white kid gloves. FRANCES ADCOCK looked as regal as a Spanish Infanta in a bell-shaped white gown, completely covered with embroidery done in gold thread caught with amber tear-drops . . . . .A cuff of white satin encrusted with pearls and rhinestones topped LORETTA RIVERS' long black velvet sheath . . . . . .LOUISE KLAM wore a full length gold lame . . . .and VIRGINIA CROW's choice was strapless blue taffeta, the bodice draped to one side with a spray of roses cascading down the net skirt.

Short dresses can be elegant, too, as JACKIE WOODS' pale blue appliqued with darker blue lace . . . . . and MILDRED VANDERPOOL's Christmas red satin with the beautiful wide neckline framed in a standing collar . . . . . . YVONNE ANDERSON chose black chiffon with a tiered skirt. . . . .Very Christmas-y was ZINNIA CHAPMAN's green and white striped organza . . . Rhinestones and silver bugle beads edged the neckline of CISSY RYAN's peacock green chiffon, with which she wore matching satin shoes, rhinestone buckled . . . . . The flared tunic of BARBARA SUGAR's silver beige satin was short in front, dipped to the hem of the sheath skirt in back.

Preceding the dance, friends were invited to an open house given by NANCY and JACK FLUCK and NANCY and SYLVESTER BREARD. For the party, Nancy Fluck wore a peau de soie after five dress printed in a leaf pattern in shades of green, with rhinestone - studded "glass shoes". Nancy Breard chose bronze brocade with panels of chiffon. Her shoes were bronze satin.

In the window was a winter scene with Santa in his sleigh approaching a tree-dotted landscape. A white tree decorated the piano.

Punch bowls were placed at each end of the T-shaped refreshment table. Red and silver balls filled the cut glass bowl which was used as a centerpiece. Holly and pyracantha, alternating with red candles in silver candlesticks, was used the length of the table.

Couples who assisted the Flucks and Breards were the ROBERT ELLINGTONS, MOE and BOB CARTER, the JASE JOHNSONS, and JANE and LOVELL HAYDEN. About two hundred friends called between the appointed hours of seven and nine.

Another festive pre-dance party was planned Saturday night in the home of the ED SEYMOURS, JR., on Point Drive. Anna Claire greeted her guests wearing a dancing dress of starched white chiffon appliqued with blue lace flowers outlined with blue beadwork.

Focal point in the living room was a Christmas tree form covered with gay cards and outlined with pine branches. In the den, a picture window framed the silver tree on the covered patio. Spotlighted icicles glistened and glittered as they swung in the wind.

A musical Santa Claus, who turned around as he played "Jingle Bells", centered the dining table. Burning candles were used on each side of the centerpiece and on the buffet . . . . . Forty-five couples attended the party.

Here is a sonnet by Edna St. Vincent Millay, "To Jesus on His Birthday":

For this your mother sweated in the cold,
For this you bled upon the bitter tree:
A yard of tinsel ribbon bought and sold;
A paper wreath; a day at home for me.
The merry bells ring out, the people kneel;
Up goes the man of God before the crowd;
With voice of honey and with eyes of steel
He drones your humble gospel to the proud.
Nobody listens. Less than the wind that blows'
Are all your words to us you died to save.
O Prince of Peace! O Sharon's dewy Rose!
How mute you lie within your vaulted grave.
The stone the angel rolled away with tears
Is back upon your mouth these thousand years.

PORTRAYING the title role for a "Mother Goose" party honoring her daughter, Marty Mullens, right, and Betty Cole, on their sixth birthdays is Mrs. John Mullens, whose costume keynoted the party theme. The gay event was held Wednesday at Highland Park Country Club. Betty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Q. Cole Jr.

Highland PTA Gives Cash For Class Projects

Mrs. Walter Franks Jr. presented the program for Highland Parent - Teacher Association when it met Wednesday afternoon, December 14 in the school cafeteria.

Mrs. Franks used the Christmas story for her program on "Faith," which was interspersed by group singing of Christmas carols.

The president, Mrs. Claude Smith conducted a business session during which she announced the PTA will contribute cash to each class in the school to be used as a project of their choice.

The devotional was given by Mrs. Earl Wiggins and room count was won by Mrs. Herbert Moffitt's first grade. The school principal, Mrs. H. B. McClendon, announced the school holiday period will be from December 21 to January 3.

Huckabee Home Scene Of Colony Club Yule Party

A Christmas party highlighted the December meeting of Colony Home Demonstration club held last Wednesday in the home of Mrs. N. L. Huckabee on Payton Drive.

Colorful Christmas decorations were used throughout the rooms, where during the afternoon a gift exchange was held by the group. Refreshments also carried out the yuletide theme.

Those present included Mrs. O. L. Job from Iowa; Mrs. L. J. Bower, Mrs. Drew Anderson, Mrs. Percy Neely, Mrs. Foster Perry, Mrs. Henry Bower, Mrs. H. W. Gill, Mrs. E. W. Earl, Mrs. Pattie Carr, Mrs. A. J. Hudson, Mrs. Yvonne Hegwood, Mrs. Ray Grayson, Mrs. Gerry Huckabee, Mrs. Temple Hegwood, Mrs. Mattie Edney, Mrs. Victor Boyd, Mrs. T. J. Pollard, Mrs. E. O. In the window was a winter scene with Santa in his sleigh approaching a tree-dotted landscape. A white tree decorated the piano.

Punch bowls were placed at each end of the T-shaped refreshment table. Red and silver balls filled the cut glass bowl which was used as a centerpiece. Holly and pyracantha, alternating with red candles in silver candlesticks, was used the length of the table.

Couples who assisted the Flucks and Breards were the ROBERT ELLINGTONS, MOE and BOB CARTER, the JASE JOHNSONS, and JANE and LOVELL HAYDEN. About two hundred friends called between the appointed hours of seven and nine.

Another festive pre-dance party was planned Saturday night in the home of the ED SEYMOURS, JR., on Point Drive. Anna Claire greeted her guests wearing a dancing dress of starched white chiffon appliqued with blue lace flowers outlined with blue beadwork.

Focal point in the living room was a Christmas tree form covered with gay cards and outlined with pine branches. In the den, a picture window framed the silver tree on the covered patio. Spotlighted icicles glistened and glittered as they swung in the wind.

A musical Santa Claus, who turned around as he played "Jingle Bells", centered the dining table. Burning candles were used on each side of the centerpiece and on the buffet ..... Forty-five couples attended the party.

Here is a sonnet by Edna St. Vincent Millay, "To Jesus on His Birthday":

For this your mother sweated in the cold,
For this you bled upon the bitter tree:
A yard of tinsel ribbon bought and sold;
A paper wreath; a day at home for me.
The merry bells ring out, the people kneel;
Up goes the man of God before the crowd;
With voice of honey and with eyes of steel
He drones your humble gospel to the proud.
Nobody listens. Less than the wind that blows'
Are all your words to us you died to save.
O Prince of Peace! O Sharon's dewy Rose!
How mute you lie within your vaulted grave.
The stone the angel rolled away with tears
Is back upon your mouth these thousand years.

PORTRAYING the title role for a "Mother Goose" party honoring her daughter, Marty Mullens, right, and Betty Cole, on their sixth birthdays is Mrs. John Mullens, whose costume keynoted the party theme. The gay event was held Wednesday at Highland Park Country Club. Betty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Q. Cole Jr.

February Vows Set By Couple In Tennessee

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Carolyn Darlene Herndon, Okeechobee, Florida, to Shelby Glynn Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Thompson of Monroe, is being made by her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Dewy Herndon, Okeechobee, Fla.

A February wedding is planned in Cleveland, Tennessee, with Rev. L. E. Pate, officiating.

Miss Herndon was graduated from Okeechobee high school and Lee College. Mr. Thompson, a graduate of Neville High school, also attended Lee college.

The couple plans to establish a home in Monroe.

MISS CAROLYN DARLENE HERNDON

Female Shopper Given Clues For Men's Gift List

There's a whole new formula for men's casual wear clothes that provides some important fashion clues and gift clues to the distraught gal with an important man on her Christmas list.

The trick, according to stylists, is to mix light and dark, patterned and plain, slacks and sportcoats for a new look of stronger contrast and new elegance to leisure clothes.

Thus light or patterned slacks, themselves a new note on the fashion scene, mix best with plain, dark, elegant blazer - type jackets. A textured jacket, in one of the new, soft, burnished shades of gold or green, contrasts best with plain dark slacks.

Gone is the formula for "matching" sportswear - in its place the new strong tonic of contrast. The new formula also means a man can get greater mileage from his casual - weight outfits, for the mixing possibilities, once the necessity of matching is removed, are limitless.

The ingredients for this new recipe make long - lasting, welcome Christmas gifts. New jackets are cut slightly shorter with rounded fronts for a trimmer, smarter look. Slacks are marked by new trimness and slimness.

Winter Bridal Wear Given An Opulent Look

"The bride wore a chapel - length gown of white velvet cut on princess lines with flowed into a cathedral train. The scooped neckline, bodice and skirt were embroidered with elaborate floral motifs of gleaming iridescents, bugle beads and seed pearls."

This describes the typical bridal gown in the fall and winter collections, which often recall the formality and splendor of Victorian weddings.

Such generous use of elegant bead embroideries has not been seen for many years . . . and will mean more sparkling brides in the months to come.

To complement the gowns, hairdos will be more elaborate too, and there is a wider selection of veils to set them off most beautifully.

For the bride who loves the romantic look, but prefers more simplicity . . . there are many exquisite gowns which minimize trim and capitalize on puffs and tufts. Though these too capture the look of the Victorian and Elizabethian eras.

Bridesmaids, on the other hand, will be wearing gowns designed along Parisian lines . . . tunics, lowered waistlines, and many floor length styles.

Here silhouette, color and fabric will replace trim to achieve an elegant look that will match the bride's.

Wedding gowns will cost no more this year, even though they are more elaborate. Since few modern women plan to follow the tradition of passing her gown on to the next generation . . . the cost of stitching "long - lasting quality" into a gown has been minimized in favor of eye - catching effects.

Three Yule Dances Spark Pre-Holiday Festivities

The Christmas season was launched in full swing last weekend when three holiday balls were held in the city. The gala events included formal Christmas dances of Bayou DeSiard Country Club, Highland Park Country club and the Junior Charity League.

More than 100 persons danced to the music of Vince Savannah and The Dukes at Bayou DeSiard Country club dance Friday night in the main ballroom.

Two large candles and greenery flanked the doorway entrance to the club, with a lighted Santa Claus above. A white Christmas tree adorned with red baubles graced a table in the entrance hall and greenery was used throughout the club rooms.

Holly was used to outline the door into the ball room, where a silver Christmas tree holding red ornaments was the focal point. Suspended from the ceiling was a large wreath of greenery and holly.

The Paragon club was scene of the Junior Charity League's annual Christmas ball, for which music was provided by the nationally prominent Ted Weems orchestra.

Carrying out the yuletide motif, the decorations included two silver Christmas trees holding numerous multi-colored balls and lights.

Approximately 150 couples attended the festive affair which was preceded by several hors d'oeuvres parties.

Highland Park Country club was the scene of two events during the weekend, including a formal dance Saturday night and traditional Christmas open house Sunday afternoon.

Music for the dance from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. was provided by The Dukes. Decorations in the club ball room include a trellis along one wall, covered with pine straw and seasonal flowers. A large white Christmas tree decorated with blue and red balls and other yuletide suggestions were used throughout the club.

A large number of members and their guests attended the open house event Sunday afternoon. Centerpiece for the egg nog table was fashioned of cedar, holly and colorful Christmas baubles.

Jones-Brewer Vows Read In Ferriday Church

Vows uniting Miss Sue Brewer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brewer, Ferriday, and Donald Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Jones of Loganport, were solemnized at 7 p.m. Saturday by Rev. M. M. Morris in the Ridgecrest Baptist Church at Ferriday.

An arch entwined with English ivy, flanked by branched candelabra formed a background for the ceremony. Large baskets of chrysanthemums were placed before the arch.

The bride wore a waltz length gown of white satin with irridescent sequins and pearls and a fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a white orchid atop a white Bible.

Miss Patricia Webber, as maid of honor, wore a gown of pink jersey trimmed in satin with a corsage of pink carnations. Joe LeGrans served as best man.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Jeanette Williams sang "Because," "Always," and "The Lord's Prayer."

A reception followed the ceremony and after a short wedding trip the couple has established a home in Ferriday.

New Approach Makes Game Of Learning Bridge

AP NEWSFEATURES

A new book on the market makes a game of learning the game of bridge. It was written by Charles Goren for people who swear they can never learn to play.

This pessimistic sort of pupil reads page 1, then takes a quiz. If he replies that bridge is played with jokers in the deck, he is advised to read page 6. However, if he answers "52 cards, no jokers," he progresses to page 11. Those turning to page 2 are scolded and sent back to "go."

Purpose of this unusual teaching formula is to prevent skimming from page to page without understanding or making progress.

The book, "Elements of Bridge," was published by Tutor-Text.

Driveway Should Blend With Home

The driveway is as important as the lawn when you are planning the setting for your home.

Fortunately, concrete is not only a favorite driveway material, but also extremely versatile. Different colors can be added and the surface texture varied. The drive can be laid out in a graceful curve or straight, with interesting geometric patterns and contrasting borders.

Many effects are possible to create a drive in keeping with the architectural style of your home and its natural surroundings.

Youth Orchestra Program Given At Musical Coterie

Varied selections by the Monroe Youth Orchestra highlighted the program for the December 9 meeting of the Musical Coterie in the Little Theatre of the Joseph Biedenharn Fine Arts Building, Northeast Louisiana State College. Miss Gertrude Sandrock and Mrs. Eloise Stanhope were hostesses for the afternoon.

Mrs. James G. Caldwell conducted a brief business session after which Miss Johnnie Bankhead gave a paper entitled, "Instrumentation," which traced the history of the use of instruments from early music to the present day.

Eloy Fominaya, assistant professor of music at Northeast, introduced the four music students at the college, who are this year's receipients of the Twin City Orchestra scholarships. They are Katie McKenzie, violinist; Phillip Oszuscik, cellist; Mickey Davis, violinist and Sonny Newcomer, violinist. Mickey Davis recently performed the Beethoven violin concerto with the Tri - City Symphony in El Dorado, his home.

The Musical Coterie contributes to the fund which provides scholarships to the college for talented musicians. They have recently appeared with the orchestra in "Amahl and the Night Visitors," in the community orchestra for the "Messiah," and in churches throughout Monroe.

The Monroe Youth Orchestra gave a preview of a portion of the youth concert which was performed December 10 in Neville auditorium. The program, conducted by Eloy Fominaya included Vidaldi's "Concerto in A Minor," by Phyllis Middleton, violinist and concertmistress of the orchestra; Gluck's "Andante," "Londonderry Air," and Berlin's "White Christmas," which was sung by the combined audience, Lee Junior High School mixed chorus, directed by Peggy Caskey and the orchestra during the youth concert.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the afternoon to Musical Coterie members, Mrs. B. L. Allbritton, Mrs. F. V. Allison, Mrs. LeRoy Anspach, Mrs. James C. Caldwell, Miss Johnnie Bankhead, Mrs. Joe W. Caskey, Mrs. Grayson Guthrie Jr., Mrs. W. M. Good Planning Can Help Ease Holiday Toil

With care in planning, and carelessness about culinary traditions, a shrewd homemaker can take a holiday from the kitchen during the holidays.

Actually many of the backbreaking chores of food preparation for the Yuletide are obsolete and can be easily streamlined.

Here are some ways to see more of the family and less of the range and dishpan during the next few weeks:

1. When you shop for a turkey try ordering the size bird you want from a rotisserie. This eliminates anything more strenuous than opening the door when the cooked fowl is delivered ready for warming and serving.

2. Exploit the next rainy day by baking several cakes. (Prevail on the neighbors to open their oven doors to you if your own range has limited capacity.) Store the prefabricated dessert courses in freezers and use when needed. Incidentally, prepared cake mixes also lighten this burden.

3. Instead of attempting one grand and glorious deluge of guests, try informal, flexible entertaining. For example, invite friends to stop by on a casual basis for eggnog or other refreshments that can be made in a batch and used on more than one occasion. If yours is a large family, set aside the recreation room as an exclusive entertainment area for your children and their friends.

4. Serve everything on a self-service basis. Set everything except hot dishes out on the table early in the day. Then just before giving the come and get it call, whisk the hot items out of the kitchen — and step aside before getting caught in the stampede.

Town And Country Club Has Gala Yule Luncheon

The home of Mrs. W. B. Liles on Deborah Drive reflected a gay holiday mood December 9 when members of the Town and Country Garden club met for a covered dish luncheon. Distinctive decorations in keeping with the traditional furnishings were in evidence throughout the rooms.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. R. W. Dickenhorst and Mrs. N. Klam.

Outside the home a wrought iron lamp post was bedecked with green pine boughs and a huge red ribbon, while horizontal bands of greens and bright red berries accented the outline of a white wicker tree which hung on the door. Tiny gilded berries and foliage called attention to the hall chandelier and formed an arrangement for the entrance table.

Draped above the glowing hearth and mantel was a swag of olive green velvet, caught up with red crabapples. Centering the mantel was an antiqued pine wood candle tree holding lighted red tapers, banked with multi-colored fruits and berries.

Before luncheon guests were served a steaming beverage from a silver punch bowl by Mrs. Klam. The round punch table, placed before the picture window overlooking the bayou, was covered with a green floor - length cloth. Encircling the punch bow was a Delarobia wreath of pine cones and nuts.

The buffet table, covered with a cloth of green velvet, held a large white wicker cone - shaped tree which was ablaze with candles and decorated with spirals of greenery and bright fruits. Guests were seated at small green-covered tables, each of which was centered with a gold candle in a gold star holder, accented with greenery. A large gold wire tree was set over small burning candles. Draping the tree were strands of red beads, caught at intervals with tiny red Christmas balls.

Those present were Mrs. Nelson Abell, Mrs. Robert Clay, Mrs. David Garrett, Mrs. Haynes Harkey, Mrs. Tom Hayes Jr., Mrs. Lon Heuer, Mrs. Roy Johns, Mrs. Branton Kellogg, Mrs. Richard Kellogg, Mrs. Roy Kelly, Mrs. F. E. McCarty, Mrs. John Mullins, Mrs. A. B. Myatt.

Mrs. John Neel, Mrs. C. G. Pierce, Mrs. John Salisbury, Mrs. Charles Searcy, Mrs. Amos Shelton, Mrs. W. E. Smith Jr., Mrs. Harry Stone, Mrs. Leo Terzia Jr., Mrs. H. D. Touchstone, Mrs. R. L. Vanderpool Jr., and the three hostesses.

Oven Steamed

You can steam a wholefish in the oven. Place the fish on a rack in a roasting pan; add hot water but don't have it touch the fish. Cover the pan and steam until the fish flakes easily, using moderate oven heat.

Pizza Case

Now they've come up with a "pizza porter" to keep a pizza hot. It is an insulated carrying case of circular design large enough to accommodate pizza pies up to 18 inches in diameter. A zipper slightly more than half - way around the warmer makes the insertion or removal of pies easy. The case is of washable quilted plastic. It also can be used for carrying other hot foods — corn, baked potatoes, or hot rolls.

Scotts Host Gala Yule Coffee Hour

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Scott entertained in their new home, 316 Medorah, last Sunday afternoon, with a Christmas coffee and open house. Guests for the festive event were members of the Drum and Bugle Corps of Northeast Louisiana Shrine club and their wives.

A gold and white theme predominated in appointments throughout the house. A large mechanical Santa Claus on the front porch greeted guests on their arrival and a huge wreath, clustered with gilded fruits formed the central decor for the door.

Centerpiece for the serving table combined red roses with gold flocking and a large decorative candle, encircled with tiny angels. Potted azales were used in the den and the childrens' room featured a large styrofoam tree, adorned with candy canes and miniature toys. Christmas stockings were hung from their door. Fresh flowers in gold and white were used throughout.

Mrs. Carl Thompson, wife of the president of the Shrine club, presided at the table and the Scotts were also assisted in the afternoon's hospitalities by their sons, Benson and King Scott and Miss Carol Thompson.

Approximately 50 members of the corps and their wives were in attendance.

Holiday, Resort Fashions Add Sparkle To Wardrobe

California designers shun winter with a sparkling collection of holiday and resort fashions that will add "sunshine" to your wardrobe no matter how dark the winter day.

Enchanting California desert colors keynote a collection of sportswear and sweaters for resort or at-home wear from now through spring. Delicious tones featured are desert mint, desert honey, desert coral and desert lilac in both solid color flannel and a beautiful wool - silk blend. Sweaters are in matching tones and completing the fabric story is a harmonizing wool plaid in handsome basket weave in combinations such as honey with coral and lilac with mint. Shirts in Dacron and cotton round out the group.

Graceful, free - moving silhouettes and custom - detail such as pic-stitching and embroidered arrowheads are emphasized in the group. Skirt styles vary from all - round and yoke pleated styles to slim, classic styles. Jackets range from waist to hip-length and the influence of the tunic is seen in the hip - length, gently - fitted weskiteer.

Also featured is a smart group of fine wool jersey coordinates in both smooth and interesting cobblestone weave. The textured cobblestone appears in an easy cardigan jacket with funnel sleeves, a slim skirt, reed pants and a crop top. In smooth - textured jersey, there is an all - round pleated skirt, slim pants and pants to be teamed with varied knit - mate tops in both solid colors and Romana stripes. Colors in this group are clear, singing tones of coral kiss, whipped butter and moonstone blue.

Rich vintage colors of grape, golden sherry and grapeleaf green were selected for a group of luxurious holiday velveteen coordinates. Complementing the sleek velveteen fashions are coordinates in polished cottons in lovely solid colors, which are pale "echo" tones of the vintage hues and in rich glass chips print.

Another festive group of coordinates is in lovely brocade in Jade, Candlelight and Amethyst. To add further sparkle to the holiday fashion scene is the introduction of stunning new Lame' Jacquard knits coordinated with silver and gold Lame' styles. The knit fabric, a blend of mylar, cotton and rayon is in combinations of white with gold design and black or deep green with silver design.

In each of the groups, softly-pleated contessa skirts, smart jackets, reed pants, slim skirts and a gamut of blouses ranging from scooped and deeply V'd styles to handsome shirts, offer fashions for every holiday season.

DAR Makes Yule Donations To Marker Fund

Chief Tusquahoma Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution held its December meeting in the West Monroe Branch of the Ouachita Parish Public library Monday at 7:30 p.m.

For the annual Christmas giving, each member of the chapter donated $1 toward a marker honoring Don Juan Filhiol, to be erected as a project of the chapter in the near future.

Mrs. Herman M. McGuire, first vice - regent, presided in the absence of the regent. The Christmas prayer was given by Mrs. H. C. Ervin, followed by the Pledge of Allegiance, reading of the American's creed in unison and the National Anthem.

Financed by Mr. Rockefeller the project was carried on from documental research and study by architects until 25 years later, Colonial Williamsburg was restored.

Mrs. Brooks distributed the song sheets, "Song of Louisiana," the official state song, and led in group singing.

Adding interest to the regent's table, was a colorful Christmas arrangement of red candles and red balls, cascading from a white horn of plenty, with white sprigs of cedar and pine.

McGuire, Mrs. Gordie L. Ray, Miss Mary Louise Ellis, Mrs. J. Otto Miller and Mrs. J. Francis Ortis.

MISS JEANETTE ELIZABETH MCDONALD

SEW SIMPLE

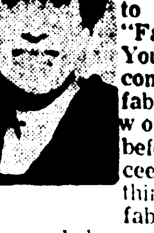
By Eunice Farmer

"Dear Eunice Farmer,

"The coat pattern I am making tells me to completely interline the entire coat with hair canvas. I have done this but am not satisfied with the way it now looks. The whole coat is stiff looking and the sleeves look like they had cardboard in them. Why do you think the pattern said to do this?"

Mrs. S.S.E.

Dear Mrs. S.S.E.:



Many of the new cape - type coats are stiffened with an interfacing throughout to obtain a "Fashion" effect. You must always consider the type fabric you are working with before you proceed with such things. If your fabric is already heavy and has a lot of body, hair canvas would definitely make it too stiff.

I don't especially like hair canvas for this however, because it has a tendency to make the seams too stiff looking and thick. In most instances, I would suggest you use a firm, woven type of interfacing as an interlining. For the sleeves, use silk organza.

In either case, baste the interlining to your coat fabric and treat as ONE piece of fabric.

LAYING PATTERN

"Dear Eunice,

"When you lay the pieces of a pattern on the material, does it matter if the pattern is upside down? Several girls in my neighborhood sew and there is a mixture of opinions. We decided to write you for the answer."

Mrs. W.T.T.

Dear Mrs. W.T.T.:

If you are cutting the garment with the fabric folded, it doesn't matter whether the pattern itself is facing up or down.

If you are cutting the pieces singly, you must cut one piece face up and the second piece face down.

If your pattern has any pieces marked CUT ONE, RIGHT, OR LEFT, These pieces must be cut with the pattern right side up and laid on the RIGHT side of your fabric, otherwise these pieces will be in reverse.

BULGING NECKLINE

"Dear Eunice,

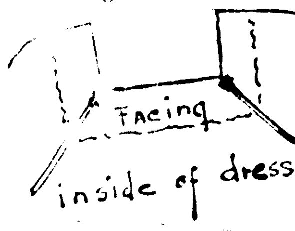
"I have found that a square neckline is the most flattering to my face and figure. The only trouble with them is that they have a tendency to bulge at the neckline. Is there any way that this neckline will lay down smooth?"

Mrs. R.P.

Dear Mrs. R.P.:

There is a rather simple way of making the square neckline lay perfectly flat in front.

After the facing has been applied to the neckline and it has been under-stitched and pressed, attach a piece of ¼" wide elastic at an angle, as close as possible to each corner. Hand whip about ½" on each side of the elastic to the facing.



After you have attached a separate piece of elastic to each corner, you must determine the length of the elastic. Slip your dress over your head and shoulders then bring both ends of the elastic under your arms to the middle of your back and mark the exact spot where they cross. Don't pull this elastic too tight or it will pull the front of the dress out of shape.

Now apply a hook on one end of the elastic and the eye on the other. This is hooked to itself and will hold a square neckline firmly close to your body. The lower the neckline, the better this works.

Please send all questions and suggestions to me in care of the Morning World. Your questions will be answered in the column as soon as possible.

Many Christmas Customs Stem From Pagan Rituals

There is no mystery about the modern Christmas tree topped with its bright star . . . . ablaze with lights . . . . and heaped underneath with colored packages — but in olden times it was shrouded in myth.

For this holiday decoration we are indebted to the old Northern European belief that the trees of the forest were inhabited by godlike spirits. The Germans brought the trees into their homes to appease these "spirits" and show them they were welcome at the Winter Solstice ceremonies.

There is also no doubt about the meaning of the modern mistletoe, and what will happen to you if you're standing under it. But the custom of kissing under the mistletoe comes down to us from the mystic rites of the primitive British priests .In their faraway age, the mistletoe, which means "all heal," was believed to have magic qualities — the power to heal disease, neutralize poisons, protect its possessor from witchcraft, and bestow fertility on humans and animals. If a young couple sealed their betrothal with a kiss under the mistletoe, they would receive wonderful blessings and much good luck for the rest of their lives.

"Wassail" was how they greeted one another in Merry Old England when toasting with a cup of wine. It means to "be whole" or "have health," the answer being "drink hail." The word came to mean any liquor in which health is toasted, especially the spiced drinks served as a feature of medieval Christmas celebrations.

That Yule Log blazing on the hearth looks simple and provides a wealth of warmth, but the ancients were more concerned with its mystical associations than its practicality. The custom was first practiced by pagans in Scandinavia, where a huge log was set on fire in honor of Thor, to mark his festival at the time of the winter solstice. In many parts of Europe the dragging home of the Yule Log is still one of the big events of the year and a source of great excitement, especially to the children.

We moderns envision Santa Claus as a paunchy gent, but in olden times he was a complex symbol and many things to many people. Santa descends from the original Saint Nicholas, a kindly man who lived in Patara, Turkey, and died a martyr in 342 A.D., becoming the patron saint of children.

The cult of St. Nicholas spread across Europe. He became the patron saint of Greece, Holland and Belgium. Merchant sailors used his three golden purses as a device on their guild flags. The Russians passed the good saint to the Scandinavians, at which time he was still mounted on a white horse according to an old tradition of Turkey. But the Scandinavians knew nothing of horses, so they gave him a reindeer-drawn sleigh. They also grafted to him the legend of the Norse God, Thor, who used to ride through the sky in a chariot, and would appear in a red coat for the pagan feast of Yule.

In the New World, the Dutch called Saint Nicholas "Santa Claus" for short. Our modern conception of him comes from the famous poem, "The Night Before Christmas." Dr. Clement C. Moore, a Presbyterian divinity professor in New York State, wrote it to please his children, and modelled the hero after a little old wizened Dutch gentleman he bumped into one night in 1822 —a man with red cheeks and white hair, smoking an old clay pipe. Dr. Moore read the poem to his delighted children, then threw it in the wastebasket. A lady visitor fished it out and printed it a year later in the Troy, New York Sentinel. It was an immediate success and flourishes to this day.

We moderns tack up holly with ease at Christmas time, without much thought to its history. The sprightly carol "Deck the hall with boughs of holly . . . ." today a must in any choral group repertoire, was also sung by the people of Medieval England as they gathered to salute the Yule Log. And the opening lines of the carol are literally true. The use of holly as a Christmas decoration in those days was quite popular and has remained a symbol of joy and merriment throughout the ages. In days gone by, unmarried women fastened a sprig of holly to their beds at Christmas time to protect them from the "evil one" during the coming year.

Ease, convenience, and necessity have simplified our modern observances of the Christmas holiday, but the myths and traditions handed down to us by many generations are not forgotten in the process — for they are the priceless heritage that enriches our understanding of the season.

Tiny Flashlight Makes Big Hit

AP Newsfeatures

Light promises to be shed on the mysterious contents of a woman's purse, missing keyholes, and possibly lost shoes under theater seats.

The promise is in the form of a flashlight not much bigger than a lipstick.

Other uses for the petite purse-light include reading programs or deciphering scribbled addresses in the darkness.

The diminuitive light was designed to be carried in a lady's handbag with her other toiletry items.

The only catch is once she has dropped it in there, she will need another flashlight to find it again.

MISS CAROLYN YVONNE HARRIS

Eye Color Can Be Changed Via Contact Lenses

The girl who plays the cleverest joke of all on Nature is the one who slips tiny plastic "cheaters under her lids and not only corrects her vision, but changes the color of her eyes.

Is that you? Well, if you don't tap 1960's exciting eye make-up to dramatize the eyes that you change to green as emerald as a traffic go - light or to blue as deep as the Mediterranean, you're missing the brightest beauty bet of the 20th century.

When you change to a new eye-color with contact lenses, play up to it with eye shadow and eye-liner. Use a shadow to match or contrast in color with your costume - color. Deepen the effect by drawing a fluid eye - liner of the same shade along the edges of your lashes.

If you must apply make - up while your lenses are in, use instead of fingertips a soft sable brush for stroking on eye shadow. Lids may be sensitive to the pressure of fingers.

Having lenses over your eyes will in no other way affect your eye make - up application. Nor will they prevent your wearing artificial eye lashes. You can attach these luxuriant - looking strips to the edge of your own lashes by the adhesive method.

Ancient Legends Recalled In Flowers Of Christmas

According to ancient legend, on the night that Christ was born trees burst into bloom and bore fruit despite the wintry weather. These days, the transformation in honor of the holy holiday is almost as miraculous as homes throughout the world are trimmed with greens and garlands and set aglow with tiny twinkling lights for the celebration of Christmas.

As with the blooming trees, holly, mistletoe, Poinsettias and scores of other flowers and plants are all part of the glorious history of the Holy Season. The reason why we celebrate with flowers have been passed down through the ages. any of the customs and traditions have their origins in ancient pagan rites, yet over the years they have taken on Christian implications of deep significance.

HOLLY SIGN OF SPRING

Holly was worshipped before the birth of Christ by peoples who considered its greenness in the middle of the winter as a promise of the sun's return to earth for another year. Later, the early French and English hung sprigs of the bright-berried plant on their doors to indicate homes in which Christ dwelled.

It is also believed that holly sprung up where the Infant Jesus took His first baby steps. Ironically, this same plant was supposed to have made up His crown of thorns the berries turning from red to white at the Crucifixion.

Holly has grown in this country for hundreds of years. Indeed, the Pilgrim Fathers noted the plant when they landed in America. These days, holly is frequently used for wreaths. The red-berried, plant, worked into the circular shape, symbolizes the hope of eternal life, and makes a gift with a warm personal message when sent by wire to friends too far away to share Christmas with you.

FIRST CHRISTMAS TREES

In the 13th century, folk tales describe a gigantic tree set in a forest and lit with candles. Some of the candles were straight, others upside down. At the peak of the tree rested an Infant with a halo around His head. The tree was humanity; the candles, people good and bad; the Child, the Saviour Jesus.

Other stories link the Christmas tree to Germany and Martin Luther who may have trimmed the first tree with candles to show his family the splendor of the night on which Christ was born. Later, apples, candy and colored papers were added to the decorations.

CHRISTMAS FLORAL SYMBOLS

The flower that has virtually become the symbol of the Christmas season is the star-shaped poinsettia. There are many legends surrounding nature's Christmas - colored wonder. One tale relates how a poor Mexican girl was heartbroken because she had nothing of value or beauty to offer the Virgin. In desperation she plucked some scrawny roadside weeds and placed them at the feet of the holy statue. They were immediately transformed into scarlet brilliance. The poinsettia plant, brought to this country from Mexico over 125 years ago by Dr. Joel Poinsett, is still called by many "Flor de Noche Buena" flower of the holy night.

Other lovely blossoms have also played an important role in the Yuletide holiday. The Christmas tree is supposed to have sprung from the bare ground at an angel's bidding. As the years passed, it became the custom to place these blooms at the entrances of cottages so that no harm would befall the occupants.

Red and white blossoms are traditionally used to highlight holiday greetings, the red for joy and laughter, the white symbolizing spiritual calmness and purity. Using red carnations and giant white chrysanthemums to interpret these messages has become a popular custom.

What is the meaning of floral gift - giving at Christmas? Such gift - giving probably stems from the story of the Three Wise Men. In some countries this custom is still observed on January 5, the Twelfth Night, when it is believed that the Wise Men appeared in the Holy Land.

Lassies who get kissed under the mistletoe have an old Scandinavian myth to thank for this charming custom. It was the goddess Friggia who hung mistletoe high and was the first to stand under the glistening plant offering kisses to all who passed beneath it.

Balsam and fir branches, trimmed with bells, are other popular holiday decorations. The greens represent everlasting life. Bells, it is said, tolled ominously for one hour before midnight on the first Christmas to warn Satan of the imminent birth of the Saviour. At the stroke of twelve, the happy pealing began to announce the death of the Devil and the birth of Christ.

Through these many years, become very much a part of the Christmas celebration. They help make the insides of homes more vibrant; on doors and gate posts they call out the season's joys to passing strangers. They literally change the face of the world in honor of its Creator, in celebration of its Saviour.

Hosiery Flatters With New Hues

Blackened ash shades are sweeping the hosiery scene like wild fire! Gone this season are most of the hot colors (vivid red, green, blue) of the past.

However, more fiery than ever will be the key to sports hose, textured stockings and tights. These items will be more important than ever too . . . with short culottes and knickers joining the kilts and bermudas.

Hosiery colors must be subtle enough to wear with many costumes and peaceful enough to mix with a range of tones.

In dress hose, very dark brown is the number one color. These dark browns are liberally splashed with black, designed to be worn with both black and brown shoes. Two other color families vie for position in hosiery lines. Though bold, they are shaded down to "nothing" tones Greens in chameleon and goldish tints; vintage hues in wines, plums and berry are the standouts.

Girl Scout News

With Christmas on everybody's mind, troops are having their last meetings before the holidays in the form of parties or carol singing or working on gifts or home decoration. Many of the gifts are deep secrets, so we can't reveal details until after Christmas. Scout parties are more fun and more in keeping with Scout program when they are not given "for" the girls, but with the girls sharing in planning and carrying out details.

Among parties was the tea given by one patrol of Troop 3, first-year Intermediates of Sherrouse School. Pat Zufall, patrol leader, planned with the girls for a tea "with gloves." In groups of two, the girls had responsibility for preparing the refreshments in advance — punch, cookies, candies, and took turns presiding at the punch bowl.

Exchanging small gifts of Girl Scout equipment was fun. Mrs. O. K. Davis and Mrs. M. R. Howell, leaders, presented each girl with a pocket song book. The other patrol, we hear, planned a luncheon at Thanksgiving time, both activities filling homemaking requirements in second class rank. Lucky girls of Troop 3, now in their fourth year of scouting! They've had the same interested leaders and a good meeting place at Memorial Methodist Church, which has always shown an interest in youth work.

An investiture for new members, presentation of membership cards for their third year of scouting and membership stars for the year just concluded, made Troop 81's last meeting a memorable one. Mrs. Milton Blue, present leader, was assisted in the ceremony by Mrs. Clint Hanna, the first leader of the troop, who now serves on the troop committee. Making the Girl Scout Promise were Karen Leavitt, Donna Morris, Cheryl Trichell, who are new in scouting. Re-registering are: Lorrie Blue, Janis Gates, Elizabeth Anne Hanna, Sheryl Hopkins, Karen Leavitt, Donna Morris, Peggy Ray, Brenda Rogers, Jean Scott, Cheryl Streeter, Cheryl Trichell, Candy Tripp, Terry Wilson, Melissa Thomas and Sharon Fisher.

A new troop starting with all the enthusiasm of new Brownies is Troop 61, second graders at Mitchell school. Leaders are Mrs. George W. Wade, Mrs. George Fortenberry and Mrs. J. H. Curry. Mrs. Wade has served as assistant leader and as troop committee member for other troops in which older daughters have been enrolled.

Ancient Legends Recalled In Flowers Of Christmas

According to ancient legend, on the night that Christ was born trees burst into bloom and bore fruit despite the wintry weather. These days, the transformation in honor of the holy holiday is almost as miraculous as homes throughout the world are trimmed with greens and garlands and set aglow with tiny twinkling lights for the celebraation of Christmas.

As with the blooming trees holly, mistletoe, Poinsettias and scores of other flowers and plants are all part of the glorious history of the Holy Season. The reason why we celebrate with flowers have been passed down through the ages. any of the customs and traditions have their origins in ancient pagan rites, yet over the years they have taken on Christian implications of deep significance.

HOLLY SIGN OF SPRING

Holly was worshipped before the birth of Christ by peoples who considered its greenness in the middle of the winter as a promise of the sun's return to earth for another year. Later, the early French and English hung sprigs of the bright-berried plant on their doors to indicate homes in which Christ dwelled.

It is also believed that holly sprung up where the Infant Jesus took His first baby steps. Ironically, this same plant was supposed to have made up His crown of thorns the berries turning from red to white at the Crucifixion.

Holly has grown in this country for hundreds of years. Indeed, the Pilgrim Fathers noted the plant when they landed in America. These days, holly is frequently used for wreaths. The red-berried plant, worked into the circular shape, symbolizes the hope of eternal life, and makes a gift with a warm personal message when sent by wire to friends too far away to share Christmas with you.

FIRST CHRISTMAS TREES

In the 13th century, folk tales describe a gigantic tree set in a forest and lit with candles. Some of the candles were straight, others upside down. At the peak of the tree rested an Infant with a halo around His head. The tree was humanity; the candles, people good and bad; the Child, the Saviour Jesus.

Other stories link the Christmas tree to Germany and Martin Luther who may have trimmed the first tree with candles to show his family the splendor of the night on which Christ was born. Later, apples, candy and colored papers were added to the decorations.

CHRISTMAS FLORAL SYMBOLS

The flower that has virtually become the symbol of the Christmas season is the star-shaped poinsettia. There are many legends surrounding nature's Christmas - colored wonder. One tale relates how a poor Mexican girl was heartbroken because she had nothing of value or beauty to offer the Virgin. In desperation she plucked some scrawny roadside weeds and placed them at the feet of the holy statue. They were immediately transformed into scarlet brilliance. The poinsettia plant, brought to this country from Mexico over 125 years ago by Dr. Joel Poinsett, is still called by many "Flor de Noche Buena" flower of the holy night.

Other lovely blossoms have also played an important role in the Yuletide holiday. The Christmas tree is supposed to have sprung from the bare ground at an angel's bidding. As the years passed, it became the custom to place these blooms at the entrances of cottages so that no harm would befall the occupants.

Red and white blossoms are traditionally used to highlight holiday greetings, the red for joy and laughter, the white symbolizing spiritual calmness and purity. Using red carnations and giant white chrysanthemums to interpret these messages has become a popular custom.

What is the meaning of floral gift - giving at Christmas? Such gift - giving probably stems from the story of the Three Wise Men. In some countries this custom is still observed on January 5, the Twelfth Night, when it is believed that the Wise Men appeared in the Holy Land.

Lassies who get kissed under the mistletoe have an old Scandinavian myth to thank for this charming custom. It was the goddess Friggia who hung mistletoe high and was the first to stand under the glistening plant offering kisses to all who passed beneath it.

Balsam and fir branches, trimmed with bells, are other popular holiday decorations. The greens represent everlasting life. Bells, it is said, tolled ominously for one hour before midnight on the first Christmas to warn Satan of the imminent birth of the Saviour. At the stroke of twelve, the happy pealing began to announce the death of the Devil and the birth of Christ.

Through these many years, become very much a part of the Christmas celebration. They help make the insides of homes more vibrant; on doors and gate posts they call out the season's joys to passing strangers. They literally change the face of the world in honor of its Creator, in celebration of its Saviour.

Mrs. Matthews Fetes Lakeshore Club At Buffet

Annual Christmas party was held by members of the Lakeshore Home Demonstration Club Wednesday, December 14 when they met in the home of the president, Mrs. Richard Matthews, 200 Oaklawn Drive.

The holiday theme was keynoted in appointments throughout the rooms, where a buffet luncheon and gift exchange followed a short business discussion.

Members were urged to attend the Parish Council meeting on January 28. The next regular meeting will be January 24 in the home of vice - president, Mrs. W. L. Keesee, 211 Tennessee Street.

Those present for the festivities were Mrs. Keesee, Mrs. Darwin Dulaney, Mrs. Charlie Oglesby, Mrs. James F. Roberts, Mrs. Clarence L. Egloff, Mrs. John Jalovec and the hostess. Guests were Mrs. Carl Brantley Sr., and children, Carol and Cindy Egloff and Michael Roberts.

Hosiery Flatters With New Hues

Blackened ash shades are sweeping the hosiery scene like wild fire! Gone this season are most of the hot colors (vivid red, green, blue) of the past.

However, more fiery than ever will be the key to sports hose, textured stockings and tights. These items will be more important than ever too . . . with short culottes and knickers joining the kilts and bermudas.

Hosiery colors must be subtle enough to wear with many costumes and peaceful enough to mix with a range of tones.

In dress hose, very dark brown is the number one color. These dark browns are liberally splashed with black, designed to be worn with both black and brown shoes. Two other color families vie for position in hosiery lines. Though bold, they are shaded down to "nothing" tones Greens in chameleon and goldish tints; vintage hues in wines, plums and berry are the standouts.

Surprise Costs Often Spoil Conversion Plans

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The do-it-yourself magazines are filled with helpful conversion hints these days.

Why not convert your tired old closet into an office?

Why not convert your tired old office into a closet?

A lot of these ideas will be put into operation — and then shelved when the materials are priced.

A recent brush with such a project shows why.

This closet was an addition in one corner of a room. Not counting plaster, paint, outside trim, the innards of this little closet cost $70, including a pair of louvred doors bought at a secondhand shop for $7. The aromatic cedar used to line the coat closet cost 25 cents a square foot, a shock since it was ordered without being priced.

The cost of building a little garden gate and picket fence, long the fancy of song writers and poets, can run to a figure calculated to dispel the romance of the setting.

The 1960 do-it-yourselfer must find new ways to cut costs as the price of material rises. Used lumber may be employed in some areas. Old barn boards may offer weatherbeaten beauty as well as lower cost. Old fire escape stairs can be used in an area where extension stairs are needed. Used windows and doors cost a fraction of new ones.

Homemakers see beautiful pictures and ideas they'd like to try — that little "L" shaped room converted from two tiny adjoining rooms; that bedroom built out of an expansion attic; that new entrance way. Phrases include, "just remove a wall—," ". . .for coziness, add a fireplace to your kitchen," "try a new entrance way to your home."

All good ideas. But seldom do we see a clue to the costs of these projects.

And then there's the accessorizing of rooms for further enhancement in these idea books. One kitchen fireplace shelf was loaded down with ancient pewter, Rockingham ware, a Seth Thomas clock, old copper, glass and a myriad of other treasurers. Just try to duplicate that setting.

Homemakers must face reality, if they're to enjoy their homes.

Apply the ideas to your own income. Figure the entire cost of a room before you begin.

Slim Pants . . . . Figuratively

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

How do you figure in the skinny pants fad which is now moving into the holiday season?

If you figure badly. .that is, if you are a mass of rolls and bumps. .you had better stick to skirts.

Even if you are trim enough to slither into these tight-fitting pants, you will be wise to firm the flesh first with proper undergarments.

Because chic hostess pants fit so snugly they look painted on, no figure is good enough to do without a little control underneath.

A panty brief or panty girdle will be enough for a slim girl. But if more support is required, girdles with set-in or reinforced front, back and side panels offer excellent shape control.

The girth of the thigh and taper of trousers should determine the length of the girdle. All flesh that needs control should be girdle-covered.

And don't fall into the trap of a loose-fitting top. Instead of concealing a figure fault, it emphasizes it. Even though you wear a tank top with your slim jims, you should have a neat bosom line.

A bra with straps set wide at the shoulders should give you the proper style. If you choose a clinging jersey top, you may also need a long line bra to keep the bulge from developing at the midriff.

No matter what combination of skinny pants and top you wear, the over-all picture should be a lifted, rounded bustline with streamlined hips and thighs.

Both fabrics and hues in holiday fashions enhance a good figure embarrass a bad one. Polished cottons, velveteens, felts and wool knits come in vivid mix-and-match combinations. Besides red and green, traditional Christmas colors, there are orange shades and some wonderful tropical hues. . . shocking pinks, Mediterranean blues, vivid island yellows.

These colors are available also in charming hostess gowns that double as evening dresses. . . . wonderful for the girl who can't, or shouldn't, wear those skinny pants.

AT HOME . . . . A long-legged pantie girdle smoothes hip and thigh for knitted trousers.

Beta Sigma Phi Dinner-Dance Held At Paragon

The Paragon club was scene of the annual Christmas dinner-dance for members of Beta Pi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi and their husbands, held last Friday night.

Lighted candles in brandy snifters centered the two long tables where the group was seated for dinner. Decorations for the wall included large gilded sunbursts and a Christmas wreath, adorned in gold.

Special guests for the evening included Mr. and Mrs. Red Chrietzberg, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bailey and the chapter sponsor, Mrs. Georgia Nastasi.

Members and their husbands present were Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Black, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hinckley, Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Hubka, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lister, Miss Joyce Lanier, Jim Files, Mrs. Johne Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Savanna, Mr. and Mrs. Marty Schempf, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Phillips Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitelaw, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schott, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caulfield.

Kitchen Color Therapy Is Key To Efficiency

NEW YORK (UPI) — Want to beef up your efficiency in the kitchen?

Paul Hartley, a colorist and teacher of art, said in an interview that such color therapy, applied in his own kitchen, improved efficiency — and even created a mood making for songfests at dish-washing time.

Hartley, of Westport, Conn., has written three books on painting, including one for the housewife. It's called "how to beautify your home with color." His latest contribution for the homemaker is an art course — correspondence type — for women wanting to learn how to handle colors via oil painting.

"Until you paint," Hartley said, "you don't know how color works on your mind. Professional artists know color affects and even tatties on personality."

He figures the red works well in kitchens because it is "the most exciting color."

"Because it's so exciting," he said, "some department stores prohibit sales girls from wearing red clothes."

"Orange, meanwhile, is the color of self satisfaction. Blue is the color of greatest calm. Green is a tranquilizing color. Violet is a color of mystery, the unknown — like royalty. Very few people are comfortable in a room that's done in violet."

Hartley said the lack of color—gray — is a sign of wanting to conform so much that you're hardly noticed.

"Men who wear gray to business, for example," he said, "want the boss to know they're not bucking the current. But turn these same men loose over the weekend and they go slightly nuts — breaking out in bright colors."

Delta Conclave Has Yule Party At Paragon Club

In celebration of the holiday season, members of Delta Conclave, Kappa Kappa Iota, held a Christmas party Monday evening at the Paragon club. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Z. J .Byrd and Miss Hermione Driskell.

The T - shaped banquet table sparkled with gala yuletide decorations.

Mrs. J. Austin Miller entertained the group by reading a humorous Christmas story entitled, "The Gillipus Gallipus." Door prizes were awarded to several members and the group brought gifts of fruit and candy for children in a local hospital.

Those present were:. Miss Katherine Averett, Mrs. Z. J. Byrd, Mrs. G. E. Boggs, Mrs. Lee Buatt, Mrs. Carter Cozine, Miss Hermione Driskell, Miss Dorothy French, Mrs. Marvin M. Hill, Mrs. Warren McGee, Mrs. W. D. McGee, Mrs. J. Austin Miller, Miss Marie Minard, Mrs. F. J. Ortis, Mrs. James N. Riddle, Mrs. A. D. Tisdale, Mrs. H. H. Walters, Mrs. Brents Witty, Jr., Mrs. Joe Coleman, and Mrs. W. A. Wright.

Surprise Costs Often Spoil Conversion Plans

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The do-it-yourself magazines are filled with helpful conversion hints these days.

Why not convert your tired old closet into an office?

Why not convert your tired old office into a closet?

A lot of these ideas will be put into operation — and then shelved when the materials are priced.

A recent brush with such a project shows why.

This closet was an addition in one corner of a room. Not counting plaster, paint, outside trim, the innards of this little closet cost $70, including a pair of louvred doors bought at a secondhand shop for $7. The aromatic cedar used to line the coat closet cost 25 cents a square foot, a shock since it was ordered without being priced.

The cost of building a little garden gate and picket fence, long the fancy of song writers and poets, can run to a figure calculated to dispel the romance of the setting.

The 1960 do-it-yourselfer must find new ways to cut costs as the price of material rises. Used lumber may be employed in some areas. Old barn boards may offer weatherbeaten beauty as well as lower cost. Old fire escape stairs can be used in an area where extension stairs are needed. Used windows and doors cost a fraction of new ones.

Homemakers see beautiful pictures and ideas they'd like to try — that little "L" shaped room converted from two tiny adjoining rooms; that bedroom built out of an expansion attic; that new entrance way. Phrases include, "just remove a wall—," ". . .for coziness, add a fireplace to your kitchen," "try a new entrance way to your home."

All good ideas. But seldom do we see a clue to the costs of these projects.

And then there's the accessorizing of rooms for further enhancement in these idea books. One kitchen fireplace shelf was loaded down with ancient pewter, Rockingham ware, a Seth Thomas clock, old copper, glass and a myriad of other treasurers. Just try to duplicate that setting.

Homemakers must face reality, if they're to enjoy their homes.

Apply the ideas to your own income. Figure the entire cost of a room before you begin.

Slim Pants . . . . Figuratively

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

How do you figure in the skinny pants fad which is now moving into the holiday season?

If you figure badly. .that is, if you are a mass of rolls and bumps. .you had better stick to skirts.

Even if you are trim enough to slither into these tight-fitting pants, you will be wise to firm the flesh first with proper undergarments.

Because chic hostess pants fit so snugly they look painted on, no figure is good enough to do without a little control underneath.

A panty brief or panty girdle will be enough for a slim girl. But if more support is required, girdles with set-in or reinforced front, back and side panels offer excellent shape control.

The girth of the thigh and taper of trousers should determine the length of the girdle. All flesh that needs control should be girdle-covered.

And don't fall into the trap of a loose-fitting top. Instead of concealing a figure fault, it emphasizes it. Even though you wear a tank top with your slim jims, you should have a neat bosom line.

A bra with straps set wide at the shoulders should give you the proper style. If you choose a clinging jersey top, you may also need a long line bra to keep the bulge from developing at the midriff.

No matter what combination of skinny pants and top you wear, the over-all picture should be a lifted, rounded bustline with streamlined hips and thighs.

Both fabrics and hues in holiday fashions enhance a good figure embarrass a bad one. Polished cottons, velveteens, felts and wool knits come in vivid mix-and-match combinations. Besides red and green, traditional Christmas colors, there are orange shades and some wonderful tropical hues. . . shocking pinks, Mediterranean blues, vivid island yellows.

These colors are available also in charming hostess gowns that double as evening dresses. . . . wonderful for the girl who can't, or shouldn't, wear those skinny pants.

AT HOME . . . . A long-legged pantie girdle smoothes hip and thigh for knitted trousers.

Beta Sigma Phi Dinner-Dance Held At Paragon

The Paragon club was scene of the annual Christmas dinner-dance for members of Beta Pi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi and their husbands, held last Friday night.

Lighted candles in brandy snifters centered the two long tables where the group was seated for dinner. Decorations for the wall included large gilded sunbursts and a Christmas wreath, adorned in gold.

Special guests for the evening included Mr. and Mrs. Red Chrietzberg, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bailey and the chapter sponsor, Mrs. Georgia Nastasi.

Members and their husbands present were Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Black, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hinckley, Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Hubka, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lister, Miss Joyce Lanier, Jim Files, Mrs. Johne Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Savanna, Mr. and Mrs. Marty Schempf, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Phillips Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitelaw, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schott, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caulfield.

Kitchen Color Therapy Is Key To Efficiency

NEW YORK (UPI) — Want to beef up your efficiency in the kitchen?

Paul Hartley, a colorist and teacher of art, said in an interview that such color therapy, applied in his own kitchen, improved efficiency — and even created a mood making for songfests at dish-washing time.

Hartley, of Westport, Conn., has written three books on painting, including one for the housewife. It's called "how to beautify your home with color." His latest contribution for the homemaker is an art course — correspondence type — for women wanting to learn how to handle colors via oil painting.

"Until you paint," Hartley said, "you don't know how color works on your mind. Professional artists know color affects and even tattles on personality."

He figures the red works well in kitchens because it is "the most exciting color."

"Because it's so exciting," he said, "some department stores prohibit sales girls from wearing red clothes."

"Orange, meanwhile, is the color of self satisfaction. Blue is the color of greatest calm. Green is a tranquilizing color. Violet is a color of mystery, the unknown — like royalty. Very few people are comfortable in a room that's done in violet."

Hartley said the lack of color—gray — is a sign of wanting to conform so much that you're hardly noticed.

"Men who wear gray to business, for example," he said, "want the boss to know they're not bucking the current. But turn these same men loose over the weekend and they go slightly nuts — breaking out in bright colors."

Toy Purchase Needs Thought For Selection

Special care should be used in selecting toys for children, an assistant State Extension Service specialist advised parents recently.

Mrs. Alice Teddlie said parents should be certain the toys they buy will not result in injury to tots.

"For instance," she said, "rattles should be non-brittle, large enough to stay out of baby's mouth, firm and free from small detachable parts. Select wooden toys that are made of hard wood and are finished with non-toxic paint or varnish. Stuffed toys should be made of firm material, sewn and color-fast. Any eyes, hair or tongue on such toys should be firmly snapped or sewn on. Never wired on."

AVOID

Avoid pull toys that have sharp corners and small parts that unscrew easily. The specialist advised parents to look for toys that are sturdily built. All edges on metal toys should be rolled.

Mrs. Teddlie urged avoiding metal toys with small parts, fold over tabs and small nuts, bolts or screws, when shopping for gifts for tiny tots.

Toys should be selected to suit the age and ability of the child, the specialist continued, and free of elaborate, realistic details, so the imagination of the child will be stimulated.

Shoe Toes Dwindle As Handbags Grow Larger

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

As shoes make their point with rapier toes, handbags bulk ever larger. Both have come out of the necessities class into fashion importance.

As clothes take a new silhouette turn for the 60's, with the fluid line, the collarless neck, and the simple sleeve as the dominant traits, the accent role goes to accessories.

Shoes and hats no longer just complete an outfit. It is they which give it excitement and drama.

This way of fashion thinking requires some mental effort for women who have always thought that shoe buying began and ended with "a classic black pump, please." Nor can handbags be disposed of with a request for something simple, in calf, with a handle.

The town shoe is slim and pointed. Toes range from single needle (moderately tapered) to quadruple and even quintuple needle (extremely pointed), says the Leather Industries of America.

The young crowd is even taking to a British import, the winkle picker, whose toes are so long as well as pointed that the wearer has some trouble walking!

The average woman, wondering if pointed toes can be comfortable, will find that her toes don't actually go into the point. Lasts are so constructed that the toes stop in the wide part of the shoe.

Although highly colorful and decorative, shoes this year discard bows and buckles. Interest lies in new shades such as plum, and combinations of leathers or leather with fabric.

Big news is the appearance of the boot-shoe, long a European favorite, as cities there so often have cobblestone streets where high heels are a menace.

Boot-shoes with pointed toes, done in smooth and supple calf, and decorated with cuffs or side closings, accompany the town suit. Suede boots go with campus and suburban wear. And as cold weather comes on, furry boots will keep feet both warm and smart.

Leather combined with fabric also appears in the swagger handbags for this season. Burlap and leather, for instance, make a ruggedly handsome tote bag. At Jana Handbags they do these in small, medium and large sizes to suit the wearer's height. This doesn't leave the small woman lamenting over bags too big for her.

Handbag closings form the chief ornamentation for bags whose leather and fabric are so striking they need no extra decoration. At Ronay I like an oversized envelope bag with wooden bar frame studded with shining nailheads.

Etienne Aigner does a slimmed-down envelope in hand-stained cowhide with a double molded handle and hammered brass lock. Crushed steerhide makes a handsome envelope with broad base at Greta Originals, rising high on each side to meet the handle and closing with large hook-and-eye.

Fabric is an important new handbag look, with carpet and tapestry types leading. The carpet type may be in gros-point upholstery fabric or in actual carpet, softly multicolored and floral in design.

Tapestry types come in large pouches at Jana with big needlepoint floral designs on the beige background. Here they also have colorful Venetian velour pouches, gathered on to the frame, with matching leather trim.

Dressier bags are almost always soft leather pouches. The elogated clutch has already appeared from Paris, with crushed cowhide shirred to the frame. Frames are frequently padded for a softer look. Large pouch types may be tucked to give a puffed shape.

Color in shoes and handbags, reports the Leather Industries fashion people, is well co-ordinated this year. It should be easy to find matching shoes and bag to give the dramatic color accent to a costume.

Jewelled Prunes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gay as Christmas tree ornaments are jewelled prunes. Slash uncooked prunes in a half dozen places, and insert a bit of colorful candied fruit in each slash using citron, melon rind, cherry or pineapple. If preferred, prunes can be pitted and the cavities filled with a nutmeat or marshmallow before the "jewels" are inserted.

Spool Toys

String empty thread spools together after each has been tinted a different color by laying in a water bath in which food coloring has been added. They make interesting toys for small children.

Weather Deals Severe Blow To U. S. Economy

EVERYBODY'S MOVING into the financial scene these days. Most taxidermists stuff animals to look like animals, but not Leroy James of Hattisburg, Miss., who is responsible for this barbering squirrel and his customer. Perhaps Mr. James' profession had something to do with his choice of themes. He is a barber. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP)—The weather gave business a severe beating it could ill-afford this week.

With some segments of the economy lagging, the effects of the snow storm that lashed the northeastern section of the country multiplied their woes.

Christmas buying, which had gotten off to a slow beginning, was seriously disrupted. Merchants estimated lost sales during the height of the blizzard would amount to hundreds of millions of dollars.

Of course, most of this money would show up in delayed buying but storekeepers were apprehensive about how much would not.

Sales volume for the entire country this week fell 3 to 7 per cent under the corresponding week of 1959.

RAILROADS

Railroads reported their losses of revenue and additional expenses because of the storm ran into the tens of millions of dollars.

The storm halted automobile production at Chrysler Corp.'s plant at Newark, Del.; Ford plants at Framingham, Mass., Baltimore, Md., Bloomfield, Mahwah and Metuchen, N. J., Tarrytown, N. Y., Chester, Pa., Lorain, Ohio, and General Motors plants at Wilmington, Del., and Linden, N. J.

As the year neared a close, there were continued signs of economic sag but expressions of optimism and hopes for improvement in 1961.

On the darker side were these developments:

The Federal Reserve Board reported the output of the nation's mines, mills and utilities fell in November, and signs of further decline.

Unemployment increase 452,000 in November to 4,031,000, highest total for the month since 1940.

Personal income failed to increase in November for the first time in eight months, mainly because of declines in factory payrolls.

Corporation earnings fell in the third quarter to an annual rate of $42.2 billion, down $6 billion from the first quarter and off $3 billion from the second quarter.

THE FUTURE

As for the future:

Gov. Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina, the next secretary of commerce, predicted the economy will begin to recover in the spring. He termed conditions of the past few months "a slight easing off."

Prudential Insurance Co. economists said they expect a business pickup by mid-1961.

Housing starts will increase moderately next year, forecast Melvin H. Baker, chairman of National Gypsum Co.

Sales of the appliance industry should improve slightly in the first half of next year and then speed up in the second half, said Ross D. Siragusa, president of Admiral Corp.

Two major developments occurred in the automobile industry.

Ford Motors lost its new president, Robert S. McNamara, 43, to the Kennedy administration when he was appointed secretary of defense. Chairman Henry Ford II resumed the presidency.

American Motors, maker of Ramblers and distributor of English - made Metropolitans, announced it would pay bonuses in government savings bonds to car buyers in the four months beginning last Dec. 1 if sales increase 10 per cent or more over the corresponding period of a year ago.

Auto production slipped a little to an estimated 132,000 cars from last week's 135,453. Retail sales in the first 10 days of December slumped sharply to an average daily rate of 17,823 from 23,153 in the final 10 days of November.

Steel output edged downward again to an estimated 48.7 per cent of capacity, which would be the lowest for a nonholiday week this year.

For the first time in two months wholesale food prices declined.

Mississippi Wildcat Well Ends Testing

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Humble Oil and Refining Co. neared completion this week of a Yazoo County wildcat after testing oil and salt water from three sands.

Operators were expected to complete the Thompson No. 1, sec. 3-9n-1w, in a Hosston sand at 10,445-53 feet that flowed 193 barrels of oil per day.

Sands at 10,160-73 feet and 10,297-315 feet showed oil and salt water and were abandoned.

The well is about six miles southeast of the Tinsley oil field.

Drilling and Exploration Co. abandoned the Bridgeforth No. 1, sec. 21-2n-3e, located in Yazoo County near the Pickens field.

Continental Oil Co. has cleared location for a wildcat, the Freudenbert No. 1, sec. 24-12n-2w, a scheduled 14,100 foot test.

In Smith County, Triad Oil and Gas Co., was below 11,750 in a wildcat, the Dukes-Central Oil No. 1, sec. 36-3n-6e. It has logged oil shows of undetermined commercial worth below 11,000 feet. It is scheduled to 13,000 feet.

Also in Smith County, about five miles south of the Morton Oil field, Monsanto Chemical Co. was below 10,000 feet in a wildcat, the Harrison No. 1, sec. 3-9w-1w. The venture has logged slight asphaltic oil shows with the well scheduled to 12,000 feet.

Two wildcat tests were underway in Amite County. Justiss-Mears Oil Co. was below 10,200 feet in the Crosby-Wall No. 1, sec. 35-3n-5e, and D. A. Biglane was below 10,100 in the Koppers No. 1, sec. 2-3n-5e. Both were scheduled to 11,000 feet.

In Pike County, Camellian Oil Co. was below 9,800 feet in a wildcat, the Fernwood No. 2, sec. 36-3n-7e. Also in Pike, Meyer, Meyer and Pickens have set surface casing in a wildcat, the Martin No. 1, sec. 21-4n-8e.

Gulf Oil Corp. was below 12,600 in the Gatesville unit No. 1, sec. 24-2n-1w, Copiah County, with contract depth at 14,500 feet.

In western Hinds County, Argo Oil Corp. was below 11,960 feet in the wildcat Anderson estate No. 1, sec. 34-7n-4w, a 13,300 foot try.

Field drilling the past week brought three new oilers and one gas condensate well completed.

Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. completed the Board of Supervisors No. 1, sec. 16-4n-6e, in the Smithdale field of Amite County. The well flowed 116 barrels of oil per day from 11,051-58 feet.

At McComb in Pike County, Sun Oil Co. completed the Hunt and Thompson No. 1, sec 11-3n-7e, which pumped 58 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 10,927-32 feet.

Jett Drilling Co. completed the Carter No. 1, sec. 29-6n-1w, which pumped 330 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 7,323-35 feet. The gravity of the crude was eight degrees in the Ovett field well in Jones County.

In the Dexter field on the Walthall County side, Sun Oil Co. completed the McRaney-Johnson unit No. 1, sec. 8-1n-13e, which flowed 1,300,000 cubic feet of gas per day and about 10 barrels of condensate from a sand at 9,618-28 feet.

Stock Market Manages Gain Despite Snow

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market this week churned its way through depressing economic news and a heavy snowstorm to post its second straight weekly advance.

Tax-loss selling and switching led to confused, trendless conditions most of the time but enough selective demand existed for blue chips to give the list as a whole a pretty good gain.

HEAVY STORM

The heavy storm early in the week piled up so much snow that the New York Stock Exchange was delayed one hour in opening, its first such delay in 6 years. Trading on the American Stock Exchange was delayed two hours. The tie-up in transportation and communication did not prevent stocks from rising moderately on Monday. For most of the remaining part of the week they wallowed in confusing irregularity.

Not until the final hour on Friday did the list come to life decisively. Blue chips, led by high quality chemicals and followed by steels, paced a rally which resulted in the best one-day advance in more than a month. This single hour of trading was responsible for most of the week's net gain.

DOW JONES

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.88 to 617.78.

The Associated Press 60-stock average advanced 2.80 to 19.60.

Volume was 17.85 million shares compared with 18.31 million the previous week.

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Technicolor, up ⅝ at 11⅝ on 154,600 shares.

Bond prices held tight or edged upward this week, keeping alive financial district talk of a year-end rally.

The over-all progress was slight but that did not seem to hamper the optimists. U.S. government bonds improved up to ⅝ of a point compared with the previous week's gains of ¾ to 1¾ — the best in over four months.

Based on the AP averages only top grade investment quality issues finished higher among corporates. Other sections were unchanged or posted a minimum decline.

Corporate volume on the New York Exchange topped $7 million par value Wednesday, the fifth best of the year. Despite an abbreviated and extremely slow session Monday because of the blizzard, weekly volume was $9 million, close to the previous week's $30.96 million which was the third busiest of the year. Daily average slipped to $5.8 million from $6.19 million.

Cotton Futures End Week With Upward Surge

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures finished the week with an upward surge on Friday, closing with weekly gains of 5 cents to $1.20 a bale.

Prices had wavered uncertainly until the late rally. Best gains were recorded by the new crop deliveries.

Evening up of commitments in the December contract prior to its expiration at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday helped to sustain the list up to that point. The contract went off the board with a gain of 55 cents a bale over the previous week's close.

Until Friday, routine commission House and trade support absorbed offerings furnished through liquidation attributed to technical considerations and profit-taking attracted by advances.

All months, especially the new crop positions, moved up on Friday on buying influenced by the appointment as Secretary of Agriculture of Minnesota Gov. Orville L. Freeman, who is on record as favoring high farm price supports with strict federal crop controls.

Because of last Monday's heavy snowstorm the New York Cotton Exchange was closed for the day and the Bureau of Census announced that issuance of its November consumption report would be delayed until Monday. The report originally was scheduled for release Friday. Meanwhile, the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau has estimated that consumption last month approximated 660,000 bales compared with 667,000 the previous month and 725,000 in November 1959. Consumption for the first four months of the present season was estimated at 2,813,000 vs. 3,032,000 last season.

Exports for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the service bureau at 272,000 bales against 109,000 a week earlier and 137,000 in the comparable 1959 week. For the season through Dec. 13 they had reached at least 1,356,000 bales vs. 1,644,000 to the same last season.

Grain Futures Show Mixed On Chicago Board

CHICAGO (AP)—The grain futures market showed more losses than gains this week but setbacks generally were small while advances ran to well over a cent in spots.

Selling pressure became heavy at times as traders gleaned profits from last week's broad runup but it was rather sporadic and recovery drives frequently cancelled out losses.

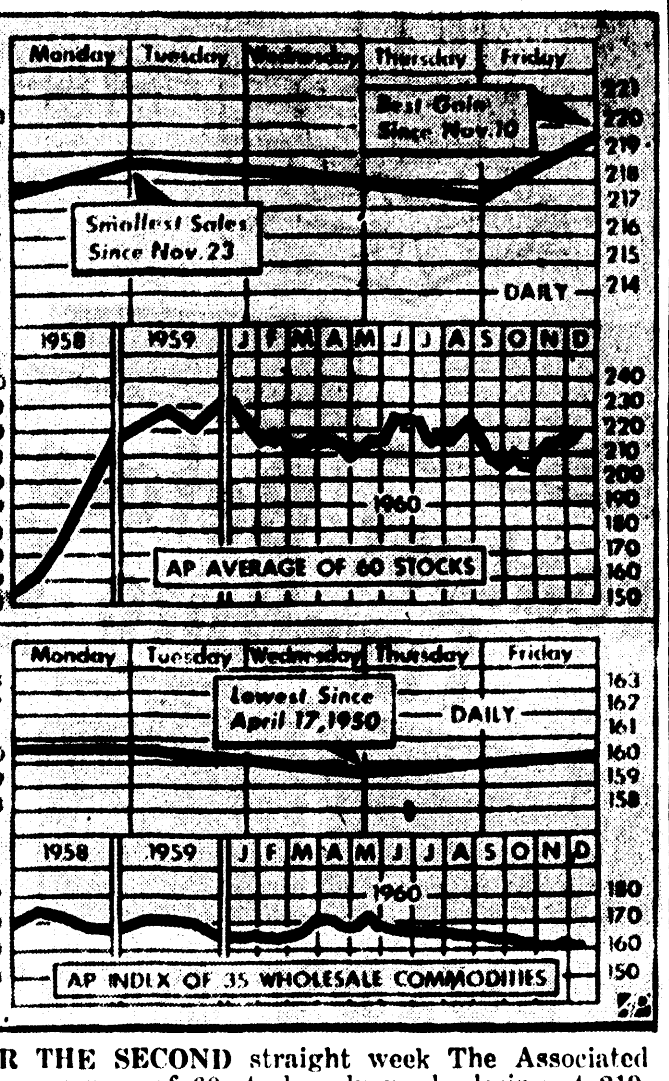
The solid commercial demand of the previous week slackened somewhat although export buyers continued active and forced shorts to take cover from time to time. December wheat again climbed to a season high but held at that level only briefly against a flurry of selling.

At the close of the week, wheat was ½-1⅜ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, December .05⅞; corn ⅝ lower to ½ higher, December 1.03⅞-04; oats ⅞-1½ higher, December 60⅞-61; rye unchanged to 1⅛ lower, December 1.08⅞ asked; soybeans ¼ lower to 1⅞ higher, January 2.18⅜-½.

Pilgrimage Slated

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranike is leaving Tuesday on a pilgrimage to Buddhist shrines in India and will remain until Jan. 6. An official announcement said her three children—two daughters and a son—will accompany her.

FINANCIAL $ OIL-GAS NEWS



FOR THE SECOND straight week The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced, closing at 219.6 from 217.8 a week ago. Led by livestock and nonferrous metals, the commodity index declined for the third straight week, closing at 160.1 from 160.6 the week before. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

SHOWS BIG DROP

Oil Refinery At Low Point

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil refinery expansions in the United States in 1960 dropped to their lowest point in 15 years.

The nation's oil refineries currently are capable of processing a record 9,922,350 barrels of crude a day.

The 1960 gain, however, was only 70,000 barrels. A gain of only 81,000 was recorded in 1959, compared to an annual post-war average of 325,000 barrels.

Another drop in growth rate is indicated for 1961. The American Petroleum Institute (API) estimates new facilities capable of handling only 26,500 barrels daily will be placed into operation by the end of next September.

The decline in expansion projects results from the worldwide surplus of crude and products that began developing at the end of the Suez crisis in 1957.

M. J. Rathbone, API president, cites the refinery capacity slow down as one of the belt-tightening actions necessitated by the problems of surplus production and surplus capacity.

DEMAND

"The times demand that we hold down the level of our capital spending and be more selective and realistic in our investments," said the president of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey).

He said the refining capacity figures are encouraging in that they offer evidence of a decline in the rate of spending by the domestic industry.

Rathbone warned, however, that the end is not in sight.

"Spare capacity the next few years will be of the same order of magnitude as the rate of 20 per cent experienced in 1958," he said.

"Surely in refining, as in other branches of the business, there is no realistic justification for returning to the high level of investment in new capacity which prevailed until the last year or so. If we want a path beaten to our door, we need a better mouse trap—not a bigger one."

SURPLUS

Rathbone said surplus capacity is nothing new. He said an industry that is strategic in both peace and war requires a reasonable degree of surplus capacity.

"We have had surpluses before and we will in the future," he said. "And we should have them. True at present that reasonable degree has been exceeded but it should not be beyond us."

The situation, he said, calls for intelligent, responsible, and efficient management.

"If we don't manage it, then surely it will manage us," he said.

The nation's refineries last week processed 7,887,000 barrels of crude a day. An all-time high of 8,396,000 barrels daily was set last January.

The high level of refinery runs has figured prominently in discussions of the industry's problems of oversupply. Refinery cutbacks were made at a slower rate than crude oil production slashes.

Failure of 1960 demand, particularly for gasoline, aggravated the situation. Refiners had anticipated a 3 to 5 per cent increase in gasoline demand. The gain the first nine months of the year was only 1.1 per cent above the same 1959 period.

Humble Oil & Refining Co., the domestic affiliate of Jersey Standard, this week announced that December crude runs at its eight refineries are 125,000 barrels below last December. Humble officials said the December cutback will cause the company's October-December operations to be 80,000 barrels a day below the 1959 fourth quarter.

First Military Aviator Speaks At Ceremonies

KITTY HAWK, N. C. (AP) — America's first military aviator, speaking at ceremonies here commemorating the 57th anniversary of the Wright brothers flight, said Saturday that America's airpower has been held back by apathy.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, who flew a Wright plane in 1910, said, "It always seems that the people who are in this flying business must keep educating the rest of the nation to the importance of constant progress in the science of aeronautics.

"There is too much apathy on the part of too many people about the need for maintaining our leadership and for remaining in the forefront in the development of advanced types of aircraft and spacecraft today."

North Carolina Gov. Luther H. Hodges and other state and federal officials were among the small crowd which gathered at the Wright Brothers Memorial atop Kill Devil Hill. At 10:30 a.m., marking the exact time of the first heavier-than-air flight in 1903, some of the Air Force's most modern planes flew over the spot where the Wright brothers experimented and then made their powered flight.

A new $275,000 visitors' center and administration building was dedicated during the ceremonies near the spot where the Wright machine soared for 12 seconds over the sands of a windswept finger of land off the North Carolina coast.

U. S. Demands Soviets Release Captive Airmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States made a new demand on the Soviet Union Saturday for the release of two American airmen held since early July when their RB47 plane went down over the Barents Sea.

The demand was made in a meeting held by Deputy Undersecretary of State Raymond A. Hare with Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov.

A State Department spokesman said Hare "emphasized our deep concern over the Soviet government's continuing detention of the two RB47 crew members."

Hare also told the Soviet envoy, the spokesman said, "how important it is to the relations between our two countries that these men be promptly released."

The two are Capts. Freeman B. Olmstead of Elmira, N. Y. and John R. McKone of Tonganoxie, Kan.

The demonstrators clashed with national policemen as they tried to break into the Parliament building.

FROM INSURANCE COMPANY

U. S. Currency System Receives Praise

NEW YORK (UPI)—The United States has a do-it-yourself currency system that is the handiest, most flexible and by far the best money system yet devised by man, according to the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

This currency is the bank check. Americans will write about 13 billion checks this year, which would make a single stack 820 miles high, totaling close to $2 trillion.

More than 90 per cent of the total money transactions in this country are paid with checks, and the remainder paid with regular paper money and coin.

The big disadvantage of our modern checkbook money system, according to the bank's family economics bureau, is that it holds the same historic "easy money" inflation traps as printing - press paper money, and disguises them much better.

But at the same time it provides special weapons, not available in regular currency, for dealing with inflation.

Government paper money and coins, once put in circulation, can stay there indefinitely—usually until they wear out, the bureau said.

But checkbook money is constantly being canceled when deposited, and then replaced in circulation by newly-written checks, which pass the money on.

Therefore, the bureau said, by using its powers which limit the amount of loans the nation's banking system can make, and by raising basic interest rates, the federal reserve can quickly apply strong brakes to the issuance and renewal of checkbok dollars.

This tends to reduce any excessive credit money in circulation and any accompanying threat of inflation. Such restraints usually are unpopular, the bureau noted, for many people enjoy the unhealthy glow of false prosperity based on easy money — money which is actually milked from the value of their savings through inflation.

And, the report said, it is for this very reason that all consumers should understand how modern checkbook money inflation works, so that intelligent public support can be given to national policies which preserve the purchasing power of the dollar.

GROWTH

Credit, soundly used, is an invaluable force in the growth of the American economy. But the bureau said, if the government spends billions of dollars more than it takes in, and borrows from the banks to cover the deficits, it thereby puts billions of dollars of additional checkbook money into circulation.

And if our banking system offers too liberal, easy money lending policies to its customers, with low interest rates, this is an invitation to businesses to expand operations by means of borrowing and issuing more checkbook dollars.

The bureau said it also invites and encourages consumers to put a larger proportion of their anticipated future earnings into circulation now, because of the easier terms which can be granted them by business.

Thus, it added, government deficit spending, and general easy money lending policies can pour a large volume of additional checkbook money into circulation to bid for labor and goods, with the same inflationary effects on costs and prices as if government printing presses were to pour a similar quantity of additional paper money into circulation.

And such inflation is soon accelerated by increased speculation in stocks, commodities and real estate, among others, in anticipation of the rising prices produced by easy money eras of the past. It is further aggravated by excessive build-up of top-heavy inventories of goods, in expectation of higher costs for labor and materials.

Weather Deals Severe Blow To U. S. Economy

EVERYBODY'S MOVING into the financial scene these days. Most taxidermists stuff animals to look like animals, but not Leroy James of Hattisburg, Miss., who is responsible for this barbering squirrel and his customer. Perhaps Mr. James' profession had something to do with his choice of themes. He is a barber. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP)—The weather gave business a severe beating it could ill-afford this week.

With some segments of the economy lagging, the effects of the snow storm that lashed the northeastern section of the country multiplied their woes.

Christmas buying, which had gotten off to a slow beginning, was seriously disrupted. Merchants estimated lost sales during the height of the blizzard would amount to hundreds of millions of dollars.

Of course, most of this money would show up in delayed buying but storekeepers were apprehensive about how much would not.

Sales volume for the entire country this week fell 3 to 7 per cent under the corresponding week of 1959.

RAILROADS

Railroads reported their losses of revenue and additional expenses because of the storm ran into the tens of millions of dollars.

The storm halted automobile production at Chrysler Corp.'s plant at Newark, Del.; Ford plants at Framingham, Mass., Baltimore, Md., Bloomfield, Mahwah and Metuchen, N. J., Tarrytown, N. Y., Chester, Pa., Lorain, Ohio, and General Motors plants at Wilmington, Del., and Linden, N. J.

As the year neared a close, there were continued signs of economic sag but expressions of optimism and hopes for improvement in 1961.

On the darker side were these developments:

The Federal Reserve Board reported the output of the nation's mines, mills and utilities fell in November, and signs of further decline.

Unemployment increase 452,000 in November to 4,031,000, highest total for the month since 1940.

Personal income failed to increase in November for the first time in eight months, mainly because of declines in factory payrolls.

Corporation earnings fell in the third quarter to an annual rate of $42.2 billion, down $6 billion from the first quarter and off $3 billion from the second quarter.

THE FUTURE

As for the future:

Gov. Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina, the next secretary of commerce, predicted the economy will begin to recover in the spring. He termed conditions of the past few months "a slight easing off."

Prudential Insurance Co. economists said they expect a business pickup by mid-1961.

Housing starts will increase moderately next year, forecast Melvin H. Baker, chairman of National Gypsum Co.

Sales of the appliance industry should improve slightly in the first half of next year and then speed up in the second half, said Ross D. Siragusa, president of Admiral Corp.

Two major developments occurred in the automobile industry.

Ford Motors lost its new president, Robert S. McNamara, 43, to the Kennedy administration when he was appointed secretary of defense. Chairman Henry Ford II resumed the presidency.

American Motors, maker of Ramblers and distributor of English-made Metropolitans, announced it would pay bonuses in government savings bonds to car buyers in the four months beginning last Dec. 1 if sales increase 10 per cent or more over the corresponding period of a year ago.

Auto production slipped a little to an estimated 132.000 cars from last week's 135.453. Retail sales in the first 10 days of December slumped sharply to an average daily rate of 17,823 from 23.153 in the final 10 days of November.

Steel output edged downward again to an estimated 48.7 per cent of capacity, which would be the lowest for a nonholiday week this year.

For the first time in two months wholesale food prices declined.

Penn Hotel Listed On Building Permits

A $70,778 permit issued to the Penn Hotel to construct a two-story swimming pool building topped the list of 19 building permits issued in Monroe during the past week.

Dale Martha, who issued the permits in the city engineer's building, pointed out that the structure actually will be three stories tall.

The lower level will be a parking lot. The swimming pool tank will occupy the third floor and dip down into the middle level.

Six rooms and six baths will be included in the 2307 square feet structure.

Mississippi Wildcat Well Ends Testing

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Humble Oil and Refining Co. neared completion this week of a Yazoo County wildcat after testing oil and salt water from three sands.

Operators were expected to complete the Thompson No. 1, sec. 3-9n-1w, in a Hosston sand at 10,445-53 feet that flowed 193 barrels of oil per day.

Sands at 10,160-73 feet and 10,297-315 feet showed oil and salt water and were abandoned.

The well is about six miles southeast of the Tinsley oil field.

Drilling and Exploration Co. abandoned the Bridgeforth No. 1, sec. 21-2n-3e, located in Yazoo County near the Pickens field.

Continental Oil Co. has cleared location for a wildcat, the Freudenbert No. 1, sec. 24-12n-2w, a scheduled 14,100 foot test.

In Smith County, Triad Oil and Gas Co., was below 11,750 in a wildcat, the Dukes-Central Oil No. 1, sec. 36-3n-6e. It has logged oil shows of undetermined commercial worth below 11,000 feet. It is scheduled to 13,000 feet.

Also in Smith County, about five miles south of the Morton Oil field, Monsanto Chemical Co. was below 10,000 feet in a wildcat, the Harrison No. 1, sec. 3-9w-1w. The venture has logged slight asphaltic oil shows with the well scheduled to 12,000 feet.

Two wildcat tests were underway in Amite County. Justiss-Mears Oil Co. was below 10,200 feet in the Crosby-Wall No. 1, sec. 35-3n-5e, and D. A. Biglane was below 10,100 in the Koppers No. 1, sec. 2-3n-5e. Both were scheduled to 11,000 feet.

In Pike County, Camellian Oil Co. was below 9,800 feet in a wildcat, the Fernwood No. 2, sec. 36-3n-7e. Also in Pike, Meyer, Meyer and Pickens have set surface casing in a wildcat, the Martin No. 1, sec. 21-4n-8e.

In western Hinds County, Argo Oil Corp. was below 11,960 feet in the wildcat Anderson estate No. 1, sec. 34-7n-4w, a 13,300 foot try.

Field drilling the past week brought three new oilers and one gas condensate well completed.

Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. completed the Board of Supervisors No. 1, sec. 16-4n-6e, in the Smithdale field of Amite County. The well flowed 116 barrels of oil per day from 11,051-58 feet.

At McComb in Pike County, Sun Oil Co. completed the Hunt and Thompson No. 1, sec 11-3n-7e, which pumped 58 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 10,927-32 feet.

Stock Market Manages Gain Despite Snow

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market this week churned its way through depressing economic news and a heavy snowstorm to post its second straight weekly advance.

Tax-loss selling and switching led to confused, trendless conditions most of the time but enough selective demand existed for blue chips to give the list as a whole a pretty good gain.

HEAVY STORM

The heavy storm early in the week piled up so much snow that the New York Stock Exchange was delayed one hour in opening, its first such delay in 6 years. Trading on the American Stock Exchange was delayed two hours. The tie-up in transportation and communication did not prevent stocks from rising moderately on Monday. For most of the remaining part of the week they wallowed in confusing irregularity.

Not until the final hour on Friday did the list come to life decisively. Blue chips, led by high quality chemicals and followed by steels, paced a rally which resulted in the best one-day advance in more than a month. This single hour of trading was responsible for most of the week's net gain.

DOW JONES

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.83 to 617.78.

The Associated Press 60-stock average advanced 2.80 to 19.60.

Volume was 17.85 million shares compared with 18.31 million the previous week.

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Technicolor, up ⅝ at 11⅝ on 154,600 shares.

Bond prices held tight or edged upward this week, keeping alive financial district talk of a year-end rally.

The over-all progress was slight but that did not seem to hamper the optimists. U.S. government bonds improved up to ⅝ of a point compared with the previous week's gains of ¾ to 1¾ — the best in over four months.

Based on the AP averages only top grade investment quality issues finished higher among corporates. Other sections were unchanged or posted a minimum decline.

Corporate volume on the New York Exchange topped $7 million par value Wednesday, the fifth best of the year. Despite an abbreviated and extremely slow session Monday because of the blizzard, weekly volume was $9 million, close to the previous week's $30.96 million which was the third busiest of the year. Daily average slipped to $5.8 million from $6.19 million.

Cotton Futures End Week With Upward Surge

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures finished the week with an upward surge on Friday, closing with weekly gains of 5 cents to $1.20 a bale.

Prices had wavered uncertainly until the late rally. Best gains were recorded by the new crop deliveries.

Evening up of commitments in the December contract prior to its expiration at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday helped to sustain the list up to that point. The contract went off the board with a gain of 55 cents a bale over the previous week's close.

Until Friday, routine commission House and trade support absorbed offerings furnished through liquidation attributed to technical considerations and profit-taking attracted by advances.

All months, especially the new crop positions, moved up on Friday on buying influenced by the appointment as Secretary of Agriculture of Minnesota Gov. Orville L. Freeman, who is on record as favoring high farm price supports with strict federal crop controls.

Because of last Monday's heavy snowstorm the New York Cotton Exchange was closed for the day and the Bureau of Census announced that issuance of its November consumption report would be delayed until Monday. The report originally was scheduled for release Friday. Meanwhile, the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau has estimated that consumption last month approximated 660,000 bales compared with 667,000 the previous month and 725,000 in November 1959. Consumption for the first four months of the present season was estimated at 2,813,000 vs. 3,032,000 last season.

Exports for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the service bureau at 272,000 bales against 109,000 a week earlier and 137,000 in the comparable 1959 week. For the season through Dec. 13 they had reached at least 1,356,000 bales vs. 1,644,000 to the same last season.

Grain Futures Show Mixed On Chicago Board

CHICAGO (AP)—The grain futures market showed more losses than gains this week but setbacks generally were small while advances ran to well over a cent in spots.

Selling pressure became heavy at times as traders gleaned profits from last week's broad runup but it was rather sporadic and recovery drives frequently cancelled out losses.

The solid commercial demand of the previous week slackened somewhat although export buyers continued active and forced shorts to take cover from time to time. December wheat again climbed to a season high but held at that level only briefly against a flurry of selling.

At the close of the week, wheat was ½-1⅜ cents a bushel lower than a week ago, December .05⅞; corn ⅝ lower to ½ higher, December 1.03⅞-04; oats ⅞-1½ higher, December 60⅞-61; rye unchanged to 1⅛ lower, December 1.08⅞ asked; soybeans ¼ lower to 1⅞ higher, January 2.18⅜-½.

Pilgrimage Slated

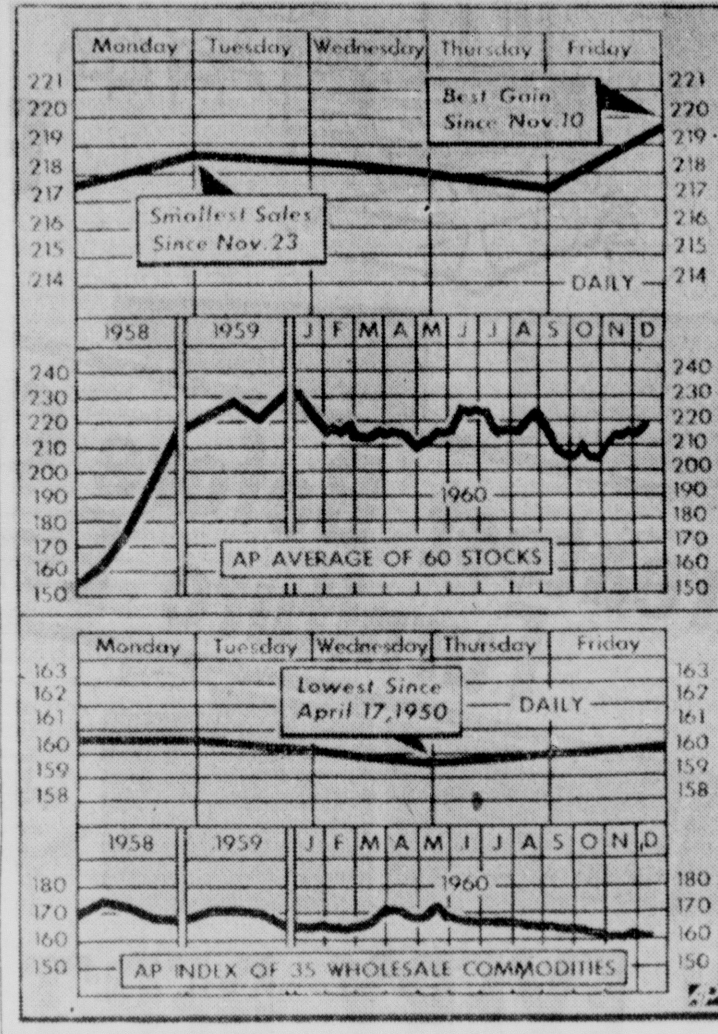
FINANCIAL $ OIL-GAS NEWS



FOR THE SECOND straight week The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced, closing at 219.6 from 217.8 a week ago. Led by livestock and nonferrous metals, the commodity index declined for the third straight week, closing at 160.1 from 160.6 the week before. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

SHOWS BIG DROP

Oil Refinery At Low Point

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil refinery expansions in the United States in 1960 dropped to their lowest point in 15 years.

The nation's oil refineries currently are capable of processing a record 9,922,350 barrels of crude a day.

The 1960 gain, however, was only 70,000 barrels. A gain of only 81,000 was recorded in 1959, compared to an annual post-war average of 325,000 barrels.

Another drop in growth rate is indicated for 1961. The American Petroleum Institute (API) estimates new facilities capable of handling only 26,500 barrels daily will be placed into operation by the end of next September.

The decline in expansion projects results from the worldwide surplus of crude and products that began developing at the end of the Suez crisis in 1957.

M. J. Rathbone, API president, cites the refinery capacity slow down as one of the belt-tightening actions necessitated by the problems of surplus production and surplus capacity.

DEMAND

"The times demand that we hold down the level of our capital spending and be more selective and realistic in our investments," said the president of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey).

He said the refining capacity figures are encouraging in that they offer evidence of a decline in the rate of spending by the domestic industry.

Rathbone warned, however, that the end is not in sight.

"Spare capacity the next few years will be of the same order of magnitude as the rate of 20 per cent experienced in 1958," he said.

"Surely in refining, as in other branches of the business, there is no realistic justification for returning to the high level of investment in new capacity which prevailed until the last year or so. If we want a path beaten to our door, we need a better mouse trap—not a bigger one."

SURPLUS

Rathbone said surplus capacity is nothing new. He said an industry that is strategic in both peace and war requires a reasonable degree of surplus capacity.

"We have had surpluses before and we will in the future," he said. "And we should have them. True at present that reasonable degree has been exceeded but it should not be beyond us."

The situation, he said, calls for intelligent, responsible, and efficient management.

"If we don't manage it, then surely it will manage us," he said.

The nation's refineries last week processed 7,887,000 barrels of crude a day. An all-time high of 8,396,000 barrels daily was set last January.

The high level of refinery runs has figured prominently in discussions of the industry's problems of oversupply. Refinery cutbacks were made at a slower rate than crude oil production slashes.

Failure of 1960 demand, particularly for gasoline, aggravated the situation. Refiners had anticipated a 3 to 5 per cent increase in gasoline demand. The gain the first nine months of the year was only 1.1 per cent above the same 1959 period.

Humble Oil & Refining Co., the domestic affiliate of Jersey Standard, this week announced that December crude runs at its eight refineries are 125,000 barrels below last December. Humble officials said the December cutback will cause the company's October-December operations to be 80,000 barrels a day below the 1959 fourth quarter.

First Military Aviator Speaks At Ceremonies

KITTY HAWK, N. C. (AP) — America's first military aviator, speaking at ceremonies here commemorating the 57th anniversary of the Wright brothers flight, said Saturday that America's airpower has been held back by apathy.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, who flew a Wright plane in 1910, said, "It always seems that the people who are in this flying business must keep educating the rest of the nation to the importance of constant progress in the science of aeronautics.

"There is too much apathy on the part of too many people about the need for maintaining our leadership and for remaining in the forefront in the development of advanced types of aircraft and spacecraft today."

North Carolina Gov. Luther H. Hodges and other state and federal officials were among the small crowd which gathered at the Wright Brothers Memorial atop Kill Devil Hill. At 10:30 a.m., marking the exact time of the first heavier-than-air flight in 1903, some of the Air Force's most modern planes flew over the spot where the Wright brothers experimented and then made their powered flight.

A new $275,000 visitors' center and administration building was dedicated during the ceremonies near the spot where the Wright machine soared for 12 seconds over the sands of a windswept finger of land off the North Carolina coast.

U. S. Demands Soviets Release Captive Airmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States made a new demand on the Soviet Union Saturday for the release of two American airmen held since early July when their RB47 plane went down over the Barents Sea.

The demand was made in a meeting held by Deputy Undersecretary of State Raymond A. Hare with Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov.

A State Department spokesman said Hare "emphasized our deep concern over the Soviet government's continuing detention of the two RB47 crew members."

Hare also told the Soviet envoy, the spokesman said, "how important it is to the relations between our two countries that these men be promptly released."

The two are Capts. Freeman B. Olmstead of Elmira, N. Y. and John R. McKone of Tonganoxie, Kan.

FROM INSURANCE COMPANY

U. S. Currency System Receives Praise

NEW YORK (UPI)—The United States has a do-it-yourself currency system that is the handiest, most flexible and by far the best money system yet devised by man, according to the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

This currency is the bank check. Americans will write about 13 billion checks this year, which would make a single stack 820 miles high, totaling close to $2 trillion.

More than 90 per cent of the total money transactions in this country are paid with checks, and the remainder paid with regular paper money and coin.

The big disadvantage of our modern checkbook money system, according to the bank's family economics bureau, is that it holds the same historic "easy money" inflation traps as printing - press paper money, and disguises them much better.

But at the same time it provides special weapons, not available in regular currency, for dealing with inflation.

Government paper money and coins, once put in circulation, can stay there indefinitely—usually until they wear out, the bureau said.

But checkbook money is constantly being canceled when deposited, and then replaced in circulation by newly-written checks, which pass the money on.

Therefore, the bureau said, by using its powers which limit the amount of loans the nation's banking system can make, and by raising basic interest rates, the federal reserve can quickly apply strong brakes to the issuance and renewal of checkbok dollars.

This tends to reduce any excessive credit money in circulation and any accompanying threat of inflation. Such restraints usually are unpopular, the bureau noted, for many people enjoy the unhealthy glow of false prosperity based on easy money — money which is actually milked from the value of their savings through inflation.

And, the report said, it is for this very reason that all consumers should understand how modern checkbook money inflation works, so that intelligent public support can be given to national policies which preserve the purchasing power of the dollar.

GROWTH

Credit, soundly used, is an invaluable force in the growth of the American economy. But the bureau said, if the government spends billions of dollars more than it takes in, and borrows from the banks to cover the deficits, it thereby puts billions of dollars of additional checkbook money into circulation.

And if our banking system offers too liberal, easy money lending policies to its customers, with low interest rates, this is an invitation to businesses to expand operations by means of borrowing and issuing more checkbook dollars.

The bureau said it also invites and encourages consumers to put a larger proportion of their anticipated future earnings into circulation now, because of the easier terms which can be granted them by business.

Thus, it added, government deficit spending, and general easy money lending policies can pour a large volume of additional checkbook money into circulation to bid for labor and goods, with the same inflationary effects on costs and prices as if government printing presses were to pour a similar quantity of additional paper money into circulation.

And such inflation is soon accelerated by increased speculation in stocks, commodities and real estate, among others, in anticipation of the rising prices produced by easy money eras of the past. It is further aggravated by excessive build-up of top-heavy inventories of goods, in expectation of higher costs for labor and materials.

FAMOUS TRIAL

'Inherit The Wind' At Paramount

A man of a highly original and enterprising frame of mind, Stanley Kramer holds to the very simple truth that movies should not be as much like each other as possible, but as different. Ancillary to this is his belief that the public prefers the good raw meat of an arresting, challenging, even upsetting theme, to tasteless and innocuous pap.

On the strength of this creed—aided to no small degree by the ability to inject a heady excitement into the fabric of his work—Kramer has established himself as one of the most provocative and successful movie makers in the country.

SUCCESS

Hard on the heels of "On the Beach," a smashing success critically and at the box-office, Kramer has come up with another hard - hitting picture calculated to shake moviegoers out of their complacency. The film, which he both produced and directed, is "Inherit the Wind," an adaptation of the Broadway hit play, opening today at the Paramount Theatre through United Artists release.

Spencer Tracy, Fredric March and Gene Kelly are co-starred in "Inherit the Wind," and the strong supporting cast is headed by Florence Eldridge, Dick York, Donna Anderson, Paul Hartman, Harry Morgan, Philip Coolidge, Noah Beery, Jr., Jimmy Boyd, Gordon Polk and Claude Akins.

The theme of "Inherit the Wind" is the continuing fight off men of good will against the benighted efforts of other men to put thought and progress in a straitjacket. The subject is the Scopes Monkey Trial, perhaps the most spectacular trial of the century.

Ostensibly a serio - comic, in some aspects even farcical affair —the issue was the indictment of John Scopes, a young school teacher, on the charge of teaching the theory of evolution in the fundamentalists, Bible - belt back country area of Tennessee — the Monkey Trial became the battleground for a critical struggle in the war for men's minds. Two of the most colorful figures of the day — Clarence Darrow, the great criminal lawyer and liberal, and William Jennings Bryan, the Great Commoner — tangled in a courtroom battle which, for pageantry and moral significance, has scarcely ever been equalled.

The Civil War When It Reached The 'Floodtide'

The outpouring of Civil War books for the centennial years is at pre-Christmas flood. Here is a selection of significant recent titles.

THE CIVIL WAR AT SEA, Vol. 1: The Blockaders. By Virgil Carrington Jones. Holt, Rinehart and Winston. $6.

The author is authority for the statement that he "scarcely knew one end of a ship from the otiner" when he embarked upon this history of "The Civil War at Sea." The reviewer is authority for the statement that Jones has earned his diploma as a naval historian, with honors.

Jones' thesis becomes clear in this first of three volumes: The shortage of naval power was fatal to the Confederacy. The throttling hold of the Union blockade on the Confederacy's coast and the supremacy of Union fleets on the Confederacy's rivers was a disadvantage that no feat of land arms could overcome. It is not an original thesis, but it never has been developed so convincingly, or so coherently, as a unified chronicle.

LEE'S LAST CHAMPAIGN. By Clifford Dowdey. Little, Brown. $6.

Here is the story of the campaign which, in Dowdey's estimation, unequivocally placed the stamp of greatness upon Robert E. Lee. It was not a victorious campaign; it is the story of retreat from the Wilderness to Petersburg, as U. S. Grant bludgeoned his way toward Appomattox. It was a time of sore trial for Lee, from the confident hosts in his front and from the bureaucratic bickering from Richmond in his rear. He did not prevail on the battlefield but he did prevail in a higher sense. In his own words, "the glory of duty done and honor of integrity of principle."

THE NIGHT THE WAR WAS LOST. By Charles L. Dufour. Doubleday. $4.95.

What was the decisive battle of the Civil War? Gettysburg? Vicksburg? Chicamauga? Atlanta? Dufour, editorial columinist of the New Orleans States-Item, is here to tell you it was none of these illustrious struggles, but the battle of New Orleans. He fixes the critical hours as those before dawn on April 24, 1862, when a Union fleet ran the gaunlet of Forts St. Philip and Jackson and assured the fall of New Orleans to the Federal forces. Whether you believe him or not, he makes a good case and tells a stirring story— and he tells it extremely well.

THE IMAGE OF WAR, By W. Fletcher Thompson, Jr. Yoseloff. $7.50.

This is a good idea—the story of the men who pictured the Civil War in sketch and photograph. It is the story of many illustrious men—Brady and Gardner, Waud, Forbes and Homer. But it is frustrating to read about a vivid drawing of battle and then be referred to a magazine file to see it. Less than 30 examples of the illustrators' art is a feeble gallery for a book about pictures.

Havoc On Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — June Havoc is the third stellar performer signed to participate in a next spring's goodwill theatrical tour of Europe by an American troupe.

Helen Hayes and Leif Erickson were previously announced as members of the company that will do a repertory of "The Glass Menagerie," "The Miracle Worker" and "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The project is sponsored by the State Department's cultural exchange program and is being handled by the Theater Guild.

International Swap

NEW YORK (AP) — Three actors and two show properties are involved in complex intercontinental swaps.

Sir Alec Guinness, needed for Hollywod's film version of "Five Finger Exercise," was released from his lead role in the London stage hit, "Ross." His replacement in that part? Michael Bryant, busily touring the U. S. in the stage version of "Five Finger Exercise."

Into that assignment went Robert Dowdell.

EXCEPTION

Eva Marie Saint Stuns Film Group

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A few months after Eva Marie Saint stunned the annual Screen Producers Guild dinner with that unsaintly four-letter word, the blonde actress went to Israel.

She tells this story: "One night about dusk my husband—Director Jeff Hayden—and I drove out to Caesarea—the ruins of the ancient seaport built by Herod the Great more than 2,000 years ago. We were all alone. I felt I was at the end of the world.

"I felt insignificant standing there amid those ruins of the once - powerful Roman Empire. Then another car drove up. A woman tourist got out and headed straight for me without even glancing at the history before her.

LAUDED

" 'Miss Saint,' she said, 'I want to congratulate you for saying what a lot of us have felt at those stuffy banquets.' "

Eva said she then realized that her utterance that night would follow her forever.

Eva is known for her ladylike behavior both on and off the screen. Friends say that, with the one exception, they've never known her to use naughty language.

Why, then, did she do so before the biggest names in the movie industry?

"I was embarrassed," she says. "Jack Benny meant no harm in giving me the flowery introduction he did, saying how nice I was, how ethereal.

EMBARRASSED

"I felt that no one but Joan of Arc could live up to such an introduction. It embarrassed me because I felt people were making fun of the way we live here.

"Maybe our home life is too normal, even dull by the usual movie star standards but it's our own life—and my husband and I are happy with the life we lead. Happiness, I kept thinking, is more important than lurid headlines.

"Finally, I got so embarrassed that I just got up to the microphone and the word came out before I realized it. I'm sorry."

Travel Topics

By RALPH VILLERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Just as the airlines are out to snag the more economy - minded travelers overseas, so, too, are the steamship lines.

An example of the trend toward more tourist class accommodations is North German Lloyd's MS Berlin, which just cut its first-class capacity by 201, and turned the ace over to the tourist-class traveler.

Very little structural changes were made in the ship, the former Gripsholm, built in 1925 for the Swedish - American Line and taken over by North German Lloyd in 1954. A new stairwell was cut from one deck to another to connect tourist facilties on one deck to a former first - class lounge on another deck. Little else was done.

MEANING

What the change really means is that cabins and lounges that formerly were for the higher - fare - paying first class passenger have been turned over, with no reduction in the luxury features, to tourist class travelers.

Until last month, the Berlin, which normally travels the North Atlantic to Southampton and Bremerhaven, but also is used in Caribbean cruise service, had accommodations for 251 first class passengers and 725 tourist class.

With the changeover, there now are 924 tourist class spaces, and only 50 for first class.

Beside getting first class cabins intact, the tourist travelers have taken over a former first class lounge, club room, bar and half of the first class dining room, as well as some deck space formerly reserved for "first class only."

The theory, of course, is to make room for that fastest growing travel class — tourist — which is favored by the increasing number of moderate - means travelers.

Ships, while they are hard put to compete with airlines for the "man in a hurry," can compete without trouble in price and luxury appointments for the traveler with a little more time.

For example, the 17 - day off-season jet excursion fare to London runs some $350 round trip, while economy class is $485 round trip, and first class round trip to London is $900.

TOURIST CLASS

It's possible to go round trip tourist class to the English port of Southampton off - season on a ship like the Berlin for $330 — and that includes nine days of bed and board on each crossing. First class on - season round trip runs $640, compared to the $900 jet fare.

While air fares to some segments of the globe — notably the Fair East and South America — are turning lower, those to Europe, aside from the 17 - day excursion, are showing little tendency to drop. In such a situation, the ship lines, as they make more tourist accommodations avialable, are in an excellent position to woo back lost passengers, and win new, especially among the price, but not time - conscious traveler.

LSU Staff Issued Rules On Conduct

BATON ROUGE (AP) — President Troy H. Middleton of Louisiana State University has issued rules for faculty conduct on matters of public controversy.

LSU faces an un-American activities probe, ordered by the legislature earlier this week after Prof. Waldo F. McNeir criticized it's fight for school segregation.

It was learned Saturday that Middleton on Dec. 8 issued a memorandum which says, in part:

"Irresponsible actions can seriously damage the university one serves even though his actions may not be such to justify charges against him under our tenure regulations.

"A member of the university who cannot act in the best interest of the university and his colleagues becomes both a handicap and a burden to the organization he serves."

The university president, in expressing his code, quoted from a statement by the American Association of University Professors:

"No teacher may claim as his right the privilege of discussing in his classroom controversial topics outside his own field of study. The teacher is morally bound not to take advantage of his position by introducing into the classroom provocative discussion of irrelevant subjects not within the field of his study."

Middleton's code emphasized when a university teacher speaks as a citizen, he should be free from institutional censorship or discipline ...."but he should make every effort to indicate that he is not an institutional spokesman."

The Middleton memorandum did not refer to Prof. McNeir by name.

Lawmakers had criticized McNeir's remarks particularly because he voiced his remarks, they said, on LSU letterheads.

Curtain Call

By B. B. Stron

"The Gazebo" just completed a successful seven - night run, with enthusiastic audiences each night. The cast and crew of the play were graciously entertained after the Saturday night performance at the home of Jim Nuckels.

The next endeavor of the Monroe Little Theatre will be "The Mousetrap," a mystery melodrama in three acts, by Agatha Christie. The cast will include five men and three women. Director, Richard Clark, tells us that each of the eight rolls is a distinct identity and is equally important in the development of the play's action. "The Mousetrap" is an English hit which ran for eight years in London. It is currently playing in an off-Broadway theatre. The play is about a group of strangers stranded in a boarding house, one of whom is the murderer. Though the course of the play each one becomes a suspect, but the identity of the true murderer is not revealed until the final moments of the play. This play is another superb and intriguing mystery by the foremost mystery writer of her half-century.

Tryouts for "The Mousetrap" will be held Monday, January 2nd and Tuesday, January 3rd at 7:30 p.m. at the Selman Field Playhouse. We urge everyone to come out and read for this exciting mystery thriller.

A reminder to all board members: Don't forget the important board meeting to be held this afternoon (Sunday) at 2:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Frances McHenry.

Will the person who took an overcoat from the Little Theatre dressing room, this past Tuesday night, please call Richard Clark at FA 5-8710. Someone inadvertently took the wrong overcoat, and the owner is very anxious to get his own coat back. Thanks.

Dr. and Mrs. Beryl Franklin entertained the cast and crew of "The Gazebo" in their home after the Tuesday night performance with a coffee hour. Everyone had a delightful time.

We are going to give you a lit- and you can look for Curtain Cali again in about two weeks. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year! tle vacation during the holidays,

EXCEPTION

Eva Marie Saint Stuns Film Group

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A few months after Eva Marie Saint stunned the annual Screen Producers Guild dinner with that unsaintly four-letter word, the blonde actress went to Israel.

She tells this story: "One night about dusk my husband—Director Jeff Hayden—and I drove out to Caesarea—the ruins of the ancient seaport built by Herod the Great more than 2,000 years ago. We were all alone. I felt I was at the end of the world.

"I felt insignificant standing there amid those ruins of the once - powerful Roman Empire. Then another car drove up. A woman tourist got out and headed straight for me without even glancing at the history before her.

LAUDED

" 'Miss Saint,' she said, 'I want to congratulate you for saying what a lot of us have felt at those stuffy banquets.' "

Eva said she then realized that her utterance that night would follow her forever.

Eva is known for her ladylike behavior both on and off the screen. Friends say that, with the one exception, they've never known her to use naughty language.

Why, then, did she do so before the biggest names in the movie industry?

"I was embarrassed," she says. "Jack Benny meant no harm in giving me the flowery introduction he did, saying how nice I was, how ethereal.

EMBARRASSED

"I felt that no one but Joan of Arc could live up to such an introduction. It embarrassed me because I felt people were making fun of the way we live here.

"Maybe our home life is too normal, even dull by the usual movie star standards but it's our own life—and my husband and I are happy with the life we lead. Happiness, I kept thinking, is more important than lurid headlines.

"Finally, I got so embarrassed that I just got up to the microphone and the word came out before I realized it. I'm sorry."

Travel Topics

By RALPH VILLERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Just as the airlines are out to snag the more economy - minded travelers overseas, so, too, are the steamship lines.

An example of the trend toward more tourist class accommodations is North German Lloyd's MS Berlin, which just cut its first-class capacity by 201, and turned the ace over to the tourist-class traveler.

Very little structural changes were made in the ship, the former Gripsholm, built in 1925 for the Swedish - American Line and taken over by North German Lloyd in 1954. A new stairwell was cut from one deck to another to connect tourist facilties on one deck to a former first - class lounge on another deck. Little else was done.

MEANING

What the change really means is that cabins and lounges that formerly were for the higher - fare - paying first class passenger have been turned over, with no reduction in the luxury features, to tourist class travelers.

Until last month, the Berlin, which normally travels the North Atlantic to Southampton and Bremerhaven, but also is used in Caribbean cruise service, had accommodations for 251 first class passengers and 725 tourist class.

With the changeover, there now are 924 tourist class spaces, and only 50 for first class.

Beside getting first class cabins intact, the tourist travelers have taken over a former first class lounge, club room, bar and half of the first class dining room, as well as some deck space formerly reserved for "first class only."

The theory, of course, is to make room for that fastest growing travel class — tourist — which is favored by the increasing number of moderate - means travelers.

Ships, while they are hard put to compete with airlines for the "man in a hurry," can compete without trouble in price and luxury appointments for the traveler with a little more time.

For example, the 17 - day off-season jet excursion fare to London runs some $350 round trip, while economy class is $485 round trip, and first class round trip to London is $900.

TOURIST CLASS

It's possible to go round trip tourist class to the English port of Southampton off - season on a ship like the Berlin for $330 — and that includes nine days of bed and board on each crossing. First class on - season round trip runs $640, compared to the $900 jet fare.

While air fares to some segments of the globe — notably the Fair East and South America — are turning lower, those to Europe, aside from the 17 - day excursion, are showing little tendency to drop. In such a situation, the ship lines, as they make more tourist accommodations avialable, are in an excellent position to woo back lost passengers, and win new, especially among the price, but not time - conscious traveler.

LSU Staff Issued Rules On Conduct

BATON ROUGE (AP) — President Troy H. Middleton of Louisiana State University has issued rules for faculty conduct on matters of public controversy.

LSU faces an un-American activities probe, ordered by the legislature earlier this week after Prof. Waldo F. McNeir criticized it's fight for school segregation.

It was learned Saturday that Middleton on Dec. 8 issued a memorandum which says, in part:

"Irresponsible actions can seriously damage the university one serves even though his actions may not be such to justify charges against him under our tenure regulations.

"A member of the university who cannot act in the best interest of the university and his colleagues becomes both a handicap and a burden to the organization he serves."

The university president, in expressing his code, quoted from a statement by the American Association of University Professors:

"No teacher may claim as his right the privilege of discussing in his classroom controversial topics outside his own field of study. The teacher is morally bound not to take advantage of his position by introducing into the classroom provocative discussion of irrelevant subjects not within the field of his study."

Middleton's code emphasized when a university teacher speaks as a citizen, he should be free from institutional censorship or discipline ...."but he should make every effort to indicate that he is not an institutional spokesman."

The Middleton memorandum did not refer to Prof. McNeir by name.

Lawmakers had criticized McNeir's remarks particularly because he voiced his remarks, they said, on LSU letterheads.

'FLAMING STAR,' which comes to the Paramount Theatre Wednesday, stars Elvin Presley and Barbara Eden. The CinemaScope-color holiday hit will also feature John McIntyre and Steve Forrest.

Curtain Call

By B. B. Stron

"The Gazebo" just completed a successful seven - night run, with enthusiastic audiences each night. The cast and crew of the play were graciously entertained after the Saturday night performance at the home of Jim Nuckels.

The next endeavor of the Monroe Little Theatre will be "The Mousetrap," a mystery melodrama in three acts, by Agatha Christie. The cast will include five men and three women. Director, Richard Clark, tells us that each of the eight rolls is a distinct identity and is equally important in the development of the play's action. "The Mousetrap" is an English hit which ran for eight years in London. It is currently playing in an off-Broadway theatre. The play is about a group of strangers stranded in a boarding house, one of whom is the murderer. Though the course of the play each one becomes a suspect, but the identity of the true murderer is not revealed until the final moments of the play. This play is another superb and intriguing mystery by the foremost mystery writer of her half-century.

Tryouts for "The Mousetrap" will be held Monday, January 2nd and Tuesday, January 3rd at 7:30 p.m. at the Selman Field Playhouse. We urge everyone to come out and read for this exciting mystery thriller.

A reminder to all board members: Don't forget the important board meeting to be held this afternoon (Sunday) at 2:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Frances McHenry.

Will the person who took an overcoat from the Little Theatre dressing room, this past Tuesday night, please call Richard Clark at FA 5-8710. Someone inadvertently took the wrong overcoat, and the owner is very anxious to get his own coat back. Thanks.

Dr. and Mrs. Beryl Franklin entertained the cast and crew of "The Gazebo" in their home after the Tuesday night performance with a coffee hour. Everyone had a delightful time.

We are going to give you a little vacation during the holidays, and you can look for Curtain Call again in about two weeks. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

Kennedy Leads Hawaii Recount

HONOLULU (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy held a 21-vote edge Saturday over Vice President Richard M. Nixon for Hawaii's three electoral votes for president after a recount of 45 of 240 precincts.

The count was Kennedy 92,429 and Nixon 92,408.

Circuit Judge Ronald B. Jamieson said he may order a second recount of all precincts if Kennedy still leads after 17 more precincts are counted.

The original ballot count after the Nov. 8 election gave Nixon a 141-vote margin.

Judge Jamieson ordered a partial recount after island Democrats contended there were serious errors in the voting totals. He first ordered 34 precincts recounted. Nixon's edge dropped to 61 votes. Seven more were recounted and Nixon's margin dwindled.

Friday night, Judge Jamieson ordered 21 more recounted.

Kennedy passed Nixon after the first four were counted.

'Buy American' Order Is Issued In Gold Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Defense Department Saturday issued a new "Buy American" order which will bring to nearly $350 million annually the total expected to be saved in the current drive to trim military spending overseas and reduce the flow of dollars abroad.

The latest order prohibits pruchase of foreign goods or services with Congress-appropriated funds, except in cases where U.S. prices or bids are more than 25 per cent above those of foreign firms.

This is expected to save $55 million a year. An equal or larger amount may be saved by "Buy American" policies already instituted in overseas military stores—where no appropriated funds are used because the money is obtained from sales to servicemen. The steps are bein taken to slow down the outflow of U.S. gold which has been running at a rate of nearly $4 billion a year.

Still bigger savings will come later from the Pentagon's "gold dollar widow" order, which was modified this week to provide a reduction of about 265,000 in the number of military wives and children overseas rather than the 484,000 originally ordered.

That reduction will be accomplished in two years. It is expected to save $215 million annually. On the average it costs $1,000 a year in gold to maintain a dependent overseas.

Woman, Child Injured As Cars Collide

A two-car wreck yesterday at the intersection of Orange and South Twelfth Streets in Monroe left a woman and a child injured slightly. Both were passengers in one of the cars.

Police reports identified them as Mrs. Lorene Johnson, 23, 1611 Alabama St., Monroe, who complained of pain following the accident, and 10-year-old Ceceli Arrant, Columbia Road, Monroe, who showed minor visible injuries.

Neither was immediately hospitalized.

Mrs. Johnson was a passenger in a car driven by James Donald Johnson, 21 also of 1611 Alabama St., who was going west on Orange Street when the other car, driven by James C. Takewell, 44, 1410 Parkview Ave., Monroe, pulled out from a stop sign on North Twelfth into the path of Johnson's car.

Takewell was driving a car owned by Randell Stewart of Goldonna. Neither car was drivable following the mishap.

Police reported that no improper driving was indicated on the part of Johnson, and that Takewell did not have the right-of-way.

Johnson, a Monroe salesman, was said to be traveling about 25 mph. at the time of the accident, while Takewell, a truck-driver, was going about eight m.p.h. Speed limit at the location is 25.

Neither of the injured was believed serious.

Kennedy Asks Lodge To Stay

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy Saturday asked George Lodge, son of the defeated Republican vice-presidential nominee, Henry Cabot Lodge, to remain until June in his position as assistant secretary of labor for international affairs.

Lodge was elected chairman of the governing board of the International Labor Organization, for a one-year term that ends in June. He is the second American in 41 years to hold this position.

Kennedy and Arthur Goldberg, who will be the new secretary of labor, agreed he should remain on through his term. Lodge informed them he plans to resign from the Labor Department after his ILO term ends.

Jaycee Shopping Tour Scheduled For Wednesday

The Annual Jaycee Christmas shopping tour for under-privileged children will be held Wednesday afternoon, according to chairman Ken Wagley of the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce.

This project was started last year and will give 37 children a chance to buy a gift for a loved one, who otherwise would be unable to do so.

The children will see a movie, then will complete their Christmas buying, and end the afternoon with hamburgers and hot chocolate.

Each will be given a Christmas tree for his family.

In addition to this project the Monroe Jaycees and Jaynes are currently helping on the Goodfellows drive, said President Jimmy Terry, in attempting to bring a merry Christmas to more families of the city.

Negro Bias Probe Asked In Michigan

DETROIT (AP)—City and county officials joined Saturday in demanding a thorough inquiry into charges of police brutality and bias toward Negroes here.

The charges were made by two policemen at the U.S. Civil Rights Commission's hearing in Detroit last week. Both are Negroes.

Other Negro witnesses complained of what they termed Detroit discrimination in housing, employment, education and administration of justice.

Police Commissioner Herbert W. Hart said he has asked Wayne County Prosecutor Samuel Olsen to review the charges of the ex-policemen. One claimed he once was pistol whipped by a white policeman.

Mayor Louis C. Miriani said, "We want to have the charges either proved or disproved. I believe we have a good and efficient police department. It must not operate under any kind of a cloud."

At the Civil Rights Commission hearing, several white witnesses agreed with Negro witnesses there was some discrimination here. But all concurred with Gov. G. Mennen Williams there has been "a remarkable indication of interracial coming of age" since a 1943 race riot left 34 dead, 1,000 injured and a million dollars property damage in Detroit.

Some whites indicated belief Negroes were overstating their discrimination case. One, discounting accusations of police brutality toward Negroes, said 60 to 65 per cent of Detroit's crimes are committed by Negroes, although they make up only 5 per cent of its population.

When the commission's two-day hearing was over, Chairman John A. Hannah told newsmen he is "convinced the most difficult civil rights problem is in the larger cities of the North," because they "sweep it under the rug or run" to the suburbs.

"So far," he said, "there has been a willingness to recognize this is a major problem and something must be done about it." He suggested solution will come when "one more than half" demands it.

Hannah, who also is president of Michigan State University, said the commission found here "nothing we didn't expect to find." He added that discrimination in Detroit, compared with other large cities, "is no worse and better than most."

Tulane Faculty Issues Appeal In N. O. Crisis

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A group of 319 members of the Tulane University faculty appealed Saturday for observance of order and academic freedom in the New Orleans school crisis.

The faculty group endorsed a recent statement by 100 business and professional leaders calling for an end to demonstrations.

Two of the city's public elementary schools were integrated Nov. 14 under a federal court order. One school has been completely boycotted by white students and the other virtually boycotted since four Negro girls started first-grade classes.

The Louisiana Legislature and Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, attempting to block the integration decision, are under federal court restraining orders not to interfere with the operation of the parish—county—schools.

Nonetheless, the legislature has passed four bills attempting to remove the school board. Enforcement of each measure has been enjoined by federal courts.

The legislature began Saturday a 30-day special session — the third since Nov. 12. Administration leaders introduced a sales tax hike proposal with some of the extra funds slated for a grant-in-aid program to white parents who want to send their children to private, segregated co-op schools.

Vandals tossed creosote-filled light bulbs at the Methodist church where the Rev. Lloyd A. Foreman is pastor. Foreman has braved demonstrators to take his five-year-old daughter to one of the integrated schools.

The statement issued by the Tulane professors called for a legislative investigation of the "campaign of harassment and destruction of property directed against those who desire to send their children to the schools to which they were assigned in accordance with the Legislature's own pupil placement law."

The statement also criticized the proposed investigation of Louisiana State University by the legislature's Un-American Activities Committee. The probe move came after LSU English Prof. Waldo F. McNeir wrote to State. Sen. Wendell Harris protesting the Legislature's anti-integration stand.

"Every American citizen has the right to communicate with his elected representatives. No citizen should ever be accused of disloyalty or threatened with loss of his livelihood for letting his representative know what his opinions are concerning matters being discussed in the legislative body," the statement said.

The statement also criticized legislative attempts to remove the school board and the withholding of salaries to teachers at Frantz and McDonogh No. 19 elementary schools — the two integrated schools.

The statement was drafted by a special three-man committee appointed by the Tulane graduate school faculty. They were Dr. Robert M. Lumiansky, professor of English and graduate school dean, Dr. Richard P. Adams, professor of English, and Dr. Henry L. Mason, associate professor of political science.

Cuba Court To Sentence 4 Americans

HAVANA (AP) — A military court Saturday completed the espionage trial of four Americans accused of spying on the Havana offices of Red China's New China News Agency.

The Fidel Castro regime demanded 30-year prison sentences for all four. The court said it will announce its verdict Monday.

The four, jailed since Sept. 15, are Eustace Danbrunt, 34, a mechanical engineer from Baltimore, Md.; Edmund K. Taransky, 30, an electrical engineeer from New York City; Daniel L. Carswell, 42, also an electrical engineer, from Eastchester, N.Y.; and Mario Nodio, a dance instructor and nationalized U. S. citizen who formerly lived in New York City.

The defendants were formally charged with "crimes against the stability of the state" and specifically accused of setting wiretaps in the New China News Agency offices allegedly to learn about a trade treaty and the establishment of diplomatic relations between Cuba and Red China.

The prosecutor, Lt. Fernando Flores, told the court the Castro regime was what he called generous with the defendants in asking 30-year terms. "In the United States they would have been condemned to the electric chair," Flores said. "They were committing espionage for the United States," he added.

The government charged that two U. S. Embassy secretariees were implicated in the case and expelled them along with another embassy employe identified as Robert Neet.

The four defendants, dressed in blue prison uniforms, denied the charges from the witness stand. The engineers said they had been hired to repair some electronic equipment in Neet's apartment, which was located in the same building as the Communist Chinese agency.

Meanwhile, in Santa Clara, another tribunal sentenced Diosado Martinez Hernandez to death by a firing squad for participating in a Dec. 8 plot to hijack a Cuban airliner and force the pilot to fly the plane to the United States. Four men already have been executed on the same charges. No date was set for the Martinez execution.

A TANK shrouded in smoke travels down Vientiane street Dec. 13 as troops of Rightist Gen. Phoumi Nosavan enter the city during bitter fighting with Leftist forces of paratroop Capt. Kong Le. In foreground are cannisters of artillery shells. It is unknown whether smoke is gunfire or tank is burning. It was reported that Vientiane was "much quieter" Saturday. Kennedy Leads Hawaii Recount

HONOLULU (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy held a 21-vote edge Saturday over Vice President Richard M. Nixon for Hawaii's three electoral votes for president after a recount of 45 of 240 precincts.

The count was Kennedy 92,429 and Nixon 92,408.

Circuit Judge Ronald B. Jamieson said he may order a second recount of all precincts if Kennedy still leads after 17 more precincts are counted.

The original ballot count after the Nov. 8 election gave Nixon a 141-vote margin.

Judge Jamieson ordered a partial recount after island Democrats contended there were serious errors in the voting totals. He first ordered 34 precincts recounted. Nixon's edge dropped to 61 votes. Seven more were recounted and Nixon's margin dwindled.

Friday night, Judge Jamieson ordered 21 more recounted.

Kennedy passed Nixon after the first four were counted.

'Buy American' Order Is Issued In Gold Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Defense Department Saturday issued a new "Buy American" order which will bring to nearly $350 million annually the total expected to be saved in the current drive to trim military spending overseas and reduce the flow of dollars abroad.

The latest order prohibits purchase of foreign goods or services with Congress-appropriated funds, except in cases where U.S. prices or bids are more than 25 per cent above those of foreign firms.

This is expected to save $65 million a year. An equal or larger amount may be saved by "Buy American" policies already instituted in overseas military stores —where no appropriated funds are used because the money is obtained from sales to servicemen. The steps are bein taken to slow down the outflow of U.S. gold which has been running at a rate of nearly $4 billion a year.

Still bigger savings will come later from the Pentagon's "gold dollar widow" order, which was modified this week to provide a reduction of about 265,000 in the number of military wives and children overseas rather than the 484,000 originally ordered.

That reduction will be accomplished in two years. It is expected to save $215 million annually. On the average it costs $1,000 a year in gold to maintain a dependent overseas.

Woman, Child Injured As Cars Collide

A two-car wreck yesterday at the intersection of Orange and South Twelfth Streets in Monroe left a woman and a child injured slightly. Both were passengers in one of the cars.

Police reports identified them as Mrs. Lorene Johnson, 23, 1611 Alabama St., Monroe, who complained of pain following the accident, and 10-year-old Ceceli Arrant, Columbia Road, Monroe, who shoved minor visible injuries.

Neither was immediately hospitalized.

Mrs. Johnson was a passenger in a car driven by James Donald Johnson, 21 also of 1611 Alabama St., who was going west on Orange Street when the other car, driven by James C. Takewell, 44, 1410 Parkview Ave., Monroe, pulled out from a stop sign on North Twelfth into the path of Johnson's car.

Takewell was driving a car owned by Randell Stewart of Goldonna. Neither car was drivable following the mishap.

Police reported that no improper driving was indicated on the part of Johnson, and that Takewell did not have the right-of-way.

Johnson, a Monroe salesman, was said to be traveling about 25 mph. at the time of the accident, while Takewell, a truck-driver, was going about eight m.p.h. Speed limit at the location is 25.

Neither of the injured was believed serious.

Negro Bias Probe Asked In Michigan

DETROIT (AP)—City and county officials joined Saturday in demanding a thorough inquiry into charges of police brutality and bias toward Negroes here.

The charges were made by two policemen at the U.S. Civil Rights Commission's hearing in Detroit last week. Both are Negroes.

Other Negro witnesses complained of what they termed Detroit discrimination in housing, employment, education and administration of justice.

Police Commissioner Herbert W. Hart said he has asked Wayne County Prosecutor Samuel Olsen to review the charges of the ex-policemen. One claimed he once was pistol whipped by a white policeman.

Mayor Louis C. Miriani said, "We want to have the charges either proved or disproved. I believe we have a good and efficient police department. It must not operate under any kind of a cloud."

At the Civil Rights Commission hearing, several white witnesses agreed with Negro witnesses there was some discrimination here. But all concurred with Gov. G. Mennen Williams there has been "a remarkable indication of interracial coming of age" since a 1943 race riot left 34 dead, 1,000 injured and a million dollars property damage in Detroit.

Some whites indicated belief Negroes were overstating their discrimination case. One, discounting accusations of police brutality toward Negroes, said 60 to 65 per cent of Detroit's crimes are committed by Negroes, although they make up only 5 per cent of its population.

When the commission's two-day hearing was over, Chairman John A. Hannah told newsmen he is "convinced the most difficult civil rights problem is in the larger cities of the North," because they "sweep it under the rug or run" to the suburbs.

"So far," he said, "there hasn't been a willingness to recognize this is a major problem and something must be done about it." He suggested solution will come when "one more than half" demands it.

Hannah, who also is president of Michigan State University, said the commission found here "nothing we didn't expect to find." He added that discrimination in Detroit, compared with other large cities, "is no worse and better than most."

Tulane Faculty Issues Appeal In N. O. Crisis

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A group of 319 members of the Tulane University faculty appealed Saturday for observance of order and academic freedom in the New Orleans school crisis.

The faculty group endorsed a recent statement by 100 business and professional leaders calling for an end to demonstrations.

Two of the city's public elementary schools were integrated Nov. 14 under a federal court order. One school has been completely boycotted by white students and the other virtually boycotted since four Negro girls started first-grade classes.

The Louisiana Legislature and Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, attempting to block the integration decision, are under federal court restraining orders not to interfere with the operation of the parish—county—schools.

Nonetheless, the legislature has passed four bills attempting to remove the school board. Enforcement of each measure has been enjoined by federal courts.

The legislature began Saturday a 30-day special session — the third since Nov. 12. Administration leaders introduced a sales tax hike proposal with some of the extra funds slated for a grant-in-aid program to white parents who want to send their children to private, segregated co-op schools.

Vandals tossed creosote-filled light bulbs at the Methodist church where the Rev. Lloyd A. Foreman is pastor. Foreman has braved demonstrators to take his five-year-old daughter to one of the integrated schools.

The statement issued by the Tulane professors called for a legislative investigation of the "campaign of harassment and destruction of property directed against those who desire to send their children to the schools to which they were assigned in accordance with the Legislature's own pupil placement law."

The statement also criticized the proposed investigation of Louisiana State University by the legislature's Un-American Activities Committee. The probe move came after LSU English Prof. Waldo F. McNeir wrote to State. Sen. Wendell Harris protesting the Legislature's anti-integration stand.

"Every American citizen has the right to communicate with his elected representatives. No citizen should ever be accused of disloyalty or threatened with loss of his livelihood for letting his representative know what his opinions are concerning matters being discussed in the legislative body," the statement said.

The statement also criticized legislative attempts to remove the school board and the withholding of salaries to teachers at Frantz and McDonogh No. 19 elementary schools — the two integrated schools.

The statement was drafted by a special three-man committee appointed by the Tulane graduate school faculty. They were Dr. Robert M. Lumiansky, professor of English and graduate school dean, Dr. Richard P. Adams, professor of English, and Dr. Henry L. Mason, associate professor of political science.

Cuba Court To Sentence 4 Americans

HAVANA (AP) — A military court Saturday completed the espionage trial of four Americans accused of spying on the Havana offices of Red China's New China News Agency.

The Fidel Castro regime demanded 30-year prison sentences for all four. The court said it will announce its verdict Monday.

The four, jailed since Sept. 15, are Eustace Danbrunt, 34, a mechanical engineer from Baltimore, Md.; Edmund K. Taransky, 30, an electrical engineeer from New York City; Daniel L. Carswell, 42, also an electrical engineer, from Eastchester, N.Y.; and Mario Nodio, a dance instructor and nationalized U. S. citizen who formerly lived in New York City.

The defendants were formally charged with "crimes against the stability of the state" and specifically accused of setting wiretaps in the New China News Agency offices allegedly to learn about a trade treaty and the establishment of diplomatic relations between Cuba and Red China.

The prosecutor, Lt. Fernando Flores, told the court the Castro regime was what he called generous with the defendants in asking 30-year terms. "In the United States they would have been condemned to the electric chair," Flores said. "They were committing espionage for the United States," he added.

The government charged that two U. S. Embassy secretariees were implicated in the case and expelled them along with another embassy employe identified as Robert Neet.

The four defendants, dressed in blue prison uniforms, denied the charges from the witness stand. The engineers said they had been hired to repair some electronic equipment in Neet's apartment, which was located in the same building as the Communist Chinese agency.

Meanwhile, in Santa Clara, another tribunal sentenced Diosado Martinez Hernandez to death by a firing squad for participating in a Dec. 8 plot to hijack a Cuban airliner and force the pilot to fly the plane to the United States. Four men already have been executed on the same charges. No date was set for the Martinez execution.

Jaycee Shopping Tour Scheduled For Wednesday

The Annual Jaycee Christmas shopping tour for under-privileged children will be held Wednesday afternoon, according to chairman Ken Wagley of the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce.

This project was started last year and will give 37 children a chance to buy a gift for a loved one, who otherwise would be unable to do so.

The children will see a movie, then will complete their Christmas buying, and end the afternoon with hamburgers and hot chocolate.

Each will be given a Christmas tree for his family.

In addition to this project the Monroe Jaycees and Jaynes are currently helping on the Goodfellows drive, said President Jimmy Terry, in attempting to bring a merry Christmas to more families of the city.

A TANK shrouded in smoke travels down Vientiane street Dec. 13 as troops of Rightist Gen. Phoumi Nosavan enter the city during bitter fighting with Leftist forces of paratroop Capt. Kong Le. In foreground are cannisters of artillery shells. It is unknown whether smoke is gunfire or tank is burning. It was reported that Vientaine was "much quieter" Saturday. RUSTON, (Special) Newer media of teaching will be the subject of a regional leadership conference to be held in Howard Auditorium at Louisiana Tech on Friday, Feb. 3.

The meeting will be sponsored by the college here, the State Department of Education, and the Louisiana Steering Committee on the Dissemination of the Newer Media of Teaching.

Teachers and school administrators from 16 parishes, the Monroe city system and student teachers of Tech will be invited to attend. The parishes to be represented are Caddo, Bossier, Webster, Claiborne, Bienville, Lincoln, Jackson, Union, Ouachita, Winn, Richland, East Carroll, West Carroll, Madison, Morehouse and Caldwell.

Between 300 and 400 persons are expected at the conference, according to Dr. J. A. Cawthon, who is assisting with local arrangements.

The United States Office of Education has contracted with the National Education Association for this conference under a provision of the National Defense Education Act.

A tentative program for the conference has been announced as follows:

8 to 8:30 a.m., registration; 8:30 to 11 a.m., morning session, with James F. Hawkins, principal of the Midway Junior High School of Shreveport, presiding; address of welcome, Dr. R. L. Ropp, president of Tech; purposes of the conference, Miss Bonnie Mae Smith, coordinator of instruction of the Lake Charles city schools; demonstration of cross media, Mrs. Grace Nelson Lacy of Normandy Public Schools, St. Louis, Mo.

11 a.m. to 12:30 a.m., presentation of various audio-visual materials of instruction, including the use of the foreign language machine, demonstration by Mrs. Rose Richardson of Hamilton Elementary School, Lake Charles, and a transparency discussion by Stanley Shaw of the Laboratory School of Louisiana State University. A foreign language demonstrator will be obtained.

Following lunch, a discussion of teaching machines will be held from 1:30 to 2:15 p.m. Group meetings are scheduled from 2:15 to 3 p.m. and a summary of the conference is listed from 3 to 3:15 p.m.

9 Parishes Send Groups To Workshop

Science teachers in high schools from nine area parishes attended the Junior Academy of Sciences workshop held on the Northeast Louisiana State College campus Saturday morning.

Northeast faculty members participated in the workshop sessions. During the general meeting Dr. George T. Walker, president, made the welcoming address.

Dr. H. L. Browning of the department of chemistry talked to the group on "Chemical Separations by Column Chronatography.

Other talks were given by John Hicks, department of physics, "Research and Opportunities in Physics"; Dr. Aaron Seamster, chairman, department of Biology, "The Summer Science Institute," Frank L. Harmon, department of mathematics. "The Transition from Secondary School Mathematics to College Mathematics."

Dr. George L. Sixbey, chairman, department of languages, "Language, Literature and Science;" Dr. Clint O. Hanna, dean of instruction, "The High School and the Science Program;" Mr. W. P. Scurlock, department of liberal arts, "Relation of the Social Sciences to Science;" Marcus B. Mapp, chairman, department of geology, "Geology in our Society;" Waddy W. Moore, department of liberal arts, "The Social Scientist's Responsibility to the Scientist," and Edward C. Whatley, department of biology, "The Science Fair."

The theme of this meeting was based on the postulation that the exact sciences like math, geometry, grammar and logic are necessary at a relatively early stage to develop the capacity for rational thought. This objectivity will be projected into the fields in which the individual progressively finds himself more personally involved, like social, economic and political studies.

Three Arrested In Battery Case

Three persons were charged with aggravated battery in separate arrests by Monroe police yesterday.

They were identified as Fred Allen Gates, 21, Farmerville who is being held in city jail in lieu of $500 bonds: Bill Townsend, 23, Route 4, West Monroe who will appear in city court December 28 after posting $500 bond, and Bertha Tucker, 24, Negro, 1014 Calypso St., Monroe, who is being held without bond.

Officers also said they arrested Isiah Robinson, 19, Winnsboro Negro on charges of theft and vagrancy. He is being held in city jail.

Pontiff's Gift Car Has Throne

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John XXIII received a new German automobile Saturday at a special audience in the Vatican garage. The car has a built in throne instead of a back seat.

Fritz Koenecke, president of the Mercedes Automobile Co. presented the black convertible sedan to the pontiff.

Several times in the past automobile manufacturers have given cars to the Pope. Once a small Italian car was carried inside the Vatican palace.

The new auto is for the Pope's personal use.

Other automobiles given to Pope John have been put to general use by the Vatican.

General arrangements for the conference here are in charge of J. B. Davis, director of the audio-visual division of the State Department of Education.

Teachers and school administrators from 16 parishes, the Monroe city system and student teachers of Tech will be invited to attend. The parishes to be represented are Caddo, Bossier, Webster, Claiborne, Bienville, Lincoln, Jackson, Union, Ouachita, Winn, Richland, East Carroll, West Carroll, Madison, Morehouse and Caldwell.

Between 300 and 400 persons are expected at the conference, according to Dr. J. A. Cawthon, who is assisting with local arrangements.

The United States Office of Education has contracted with the National Education Association for this conference under a provision of the National Defense Education Act.

A tentative program for the conference has been announced as follows:

8 to 8:30 a.m., registration; 8:30 to 11 a.m., morning session, with James F. Hawkins, principal of the Midway Junior High School of Shreveport, presiding; address of welcome, Dr. R. L. Ropp, president of Tech; purposes of the conference, Miss Bonnie Mae Smith, coordinator of instruction of the Lake Charles city schools; demonstration of cross media, Mrs. Grace Nelson Lacy of Normandy Public Schools, St. Louis, Mo.

11 a.m. to 12:30 a.m., presentation of various audio-visual materials of instruction, including the use of the foreign language machine, demonstration by Mrs. Rose Richardson of Hamilton Elementary School, Lake Charles, and a transparency discussion by Stanley Shaw of the Laboratory School of Louisiana State University. A foreign language demonstrator will be obtained.

Following lunch, a discussion of teaching machines will be held from 1:30 to 2:15 p.m. Group meetings are scheduled from 2:15 to 3 p.m. and a summary of the conference is listed from 3 to 3:15 p.m.

9 Parishes Send Groups To Workshop

Science teachers in high schools from nine area parishes attended the Junior Academy of Sciences workshop held on the Northeast Louisiana State College campus Saturday morning.

Northeast faculty members participated in the workshop sessions. During the general meeting Dr. George T. Walker, president, made the welcoming address.

Dr. H. L. Browning of the department of chemistry talked to the group on "Chemical Separations by Column Chronatography.

Other talks were given by John Hicks, department of physics, "Research and Opportunities in Physics"; Dr. Aaron Seamster, chairman, department of Biology, "The Summer Science Institute," Frank L. Harmon, department of mathematics. "The Transition from Secondary School Mathematics to College Mathematics."

Dr. George L. Sixbey, chairman, department of languages, "Language, Literature and Science;" Dr. Clint O. Hanna, dean of instruction, "The High School and the Science Program;" Mr. W. P. Scurlock, department of liberal arts, "Relation of the Social Sciences to Science;" Marcus B. Mapp, chairman, department of geology, "Geology in our Society;" Waddy W. Moore, department of liberal arts, "The Social Scientist's Responsibility to the Scientist," and Edward C. Whatley, department of biology, "The Science Fair."

The theme of this meeting was based on the postulation that the exact sciences like math, geometry, grammar and logic are necessary at a relatively early stage to develop the capacity for rational thought. This objectivity will be projected into the fields in which the individual progressively finds himself more personally involved, like social, economic and political studies.

Three Arrested In Battery Case

Three persons were charged with aggravated battery in separate arrests by Monroe police yesterday.

They were identified as Fred Allen Gates, 21, Farmerville who is being held in city jail in lieu of $500 bonds; Bill Townsend, 23, Route 4, West Monroe who will appear in city court December 28 after posting $500 bond, and Bertha Tucker, 24, Negro, 1014 Calypso St., Monroe, who is being held without bond.

Officers also said they arrested Isiah Robinson, 19, Winnsboro Negro on charges of theft and vagrancy. He is being held in city jail.

Pontiff's Gift Car Has Throne

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John XXIII received a new German automobile Saturday at a special audience in the Vatican garage. The car has a built in throne instead of a back seat.

Fritz Koenecke, president of the Mercedes Automobile Co. presented the black convertible sedan to the pontiff.

Several times in the past automobile manufacturers have given cars to the Pope. Once a small Italian car was carried inside the Vatican palace.

The new auto is for the Pope's personal use.

Other automobiles given to Pope John have been put to general use by the Vatican.
